$500,000 TO $1,000,000 INCREASE ASSURED IN FUNDS FOR NEW ATLANTA POSTOFFICE

City Payrolls Threatened by Treasury Deficit

CUT IN SALARIES OF CITY WORKERS DECLARED LIKELY

Financial Condition of Atlanta Strained and No Additional Expense Can Be Incurred, Says Mayor

NO HELP POSSIBLE FOR SCHOOL SYSTEM

Dr. Burns Says He Will Insist That Board Operate on Amount Given It By Council.

Apprehension as to the ability of the borough of Atlanta to meet pay rolls of the municipality the latter part of the year was expressed Saturday by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale in a discussion of financial affairs with Miss Allie Mann, president, and W. J. Scott, former president of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' Association.

Present conditions indicate not only that no more money will be available for school purposes, but that salaries of employes of every other department of the borough probably will be slashed in order to prevent running an actual deficit, according to the mayor.

Miss Mann and Mr. Scott called on Mr. Ragsdale to ascertain whether the school department could anticipate any additional revenue from the treasury when the June finance sheet is made up, and the mayor assured them that every dollar which can be spared already has been set up, and that no further assistance can be expected from the borough.

Slash Threatened.

"Not only did I say the borough has set up all the money it possibly can for school operation," the mayor said, "but I expressed grave apprehension lest the salary of every employe of the local government be slashed to prevent a deficit. The financial condition of Atlanta is strained, and we can not take on any additional expense. If payments of taxes and other incomes of the borough are delayed, it probably will mean that every one of the employes will be forced to submit to a reduction in salary. We all hope, however, that such will not be the case."

Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, p esident of the Atlanta board of education, who has insisted that a budget be made for operation and maintenance of the school department for the year in accordance with the expressed wish of the mayor and City Comptroller B. Graham West, tated Saturday he is ready to call a meeting of the board just as soon as a special committee is ready to file a report.

Gilliam Out of City.

Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of the school committee of council, is chairman of the committee, but is out of the city, and could not be reached as to when that committee will be ready to report. The board has held formation of the budget in abeyance pending action of the committee.

Mr. Gilliam and his group are charged with the responsibilty of selling the school system to Atlantans in an effort to raise about $500,000 in additional funds, the estimated amount necessary to operate the system in accordance with the standards of other cities of Atlanta's class.

Thus far no decision has been reached regarding the matter.

"There is one thing certain," Dr. Burns said. "I shall insist that the board run the schools in the allocation set up by council without any overdrafts or deficits. Other departments also are crippled for lack of sufficient funds, and they must operate within the amount set up in the finance sheet."

Famous Rembrandt Bought by American

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Art circles buzzed today over the report that Mrs. Francis Neilson, wife of the author and daughter of the late Gustavus Swift, had acquired Rembrandt's "Young Lady With a Fan."

Mrs. Neilson is in Paris with her husband, who was in the British parliament before coming to America, but friends here learned she paid $250,000 for the canvas and that it was obtained by a London gallery from the collection of Lord Leconfield in Petworth House, Sussex.

The "Lady" is now being brought to America, Mrs. Neilson's friends said, and will be included in an exhibit next month in Detroit, arranged by Dr. W. R. Valentiner.

ATLANTAN FOUND DEAD IN BASEMENT

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning Theory Advanced in T. L. Simmons' Death.

Found unconscious in the basement of his establishment early Saturday afternoon Thomas L. Simmons, 47, of 887 East Rock Springs road, and president of Rent-A-Car, Inc., at 35 Auburn avenue, was pronounced dead by physicians at a private hospital, where he was rushed in an ambulance.

The opinion was expressed that Mr. Simmons was dead for some time before his body was discovered and it was thought possible that he may have fallen victim to carbon monoxide gas, escaping into the basement from the automobile storage room above. His body, it was said, bore no bruises or marks which might have indicated that he came to his death through a fall or a blow. A coroner's jury, meeting at 10 o'clock this morning at the funeral home of Sam R. Greenberg & Company, where Mr. Simmons' body was removed, will hold an inquest into his death.

Mr. Simmons was prominent in the business world of Atlanta and was a member of a number of social and fraternal organizations. He was a member of the Piedmont Lodge No. 447, F. and A. M., and of the American Business Club.

Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock Monday morning from the Greenberg chapel, with the Rev. J. W. O. McKibben officiating. Interment will be in West View.

Mr. Simmons is survived by two sons, Thomas L., Jr., and Billie Simmons, of Atlanta; his stepmother, Mrs. T. J. Simmons, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; one sister, Mrs. Ben Smith, of Comer, and four brothers, Sam and Berto Simmons, of LaFayette; N. J. Simmons, of Chattanooga, and William Simmons, of Asheville.

Bishop Cannon, Alabama Woman Reported Wed

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., April 12.—(UN)—Mrs. William H. Moore, of St. Augustine, Fla., told the United News here today she had received indirect word to the effect that her sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Moore McCoy, of Athens, Ala., and Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Richmond, Va., had been married in Italy. Mrs. McCoy is the widow of the late Bishop McCoy, of Alabama.

Several weeks ago there was a rumor to the same general effect, although no one in America—including relatives of the couple—could substantiate it.

Mrs. Moore said her information came in a letter from her daughter, Miss Norman Poe Moore, a student at Central Institute for the Deaf, St. Louis, Mo., who wrote she had been advised of the marriage by Mrs. Harding Leishmann, a cousin, of Chicago.

No details of the reported ceremony were given, Mrs. Moore told the United News, aside from the statement that it was understood the Cannons were traveling now in Europe.

Mrs. McCoy has been on a west to east trip around the world, to take which she was given a leave of absence from her post as president of the Athens (Ala.) College for Women.

Bishop Cannon recently has been visiting a Methodist Episcopal charge in north Africa.

ST. LOUIS, April 12.—(UN)—Miss Norman Poe Moore, a niece of Mrs. Mary Moore McCoy, who is reported unconfirmedly to have married Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in Italy, told the United News tonight that "the whole family knows that my aunt and Bishop Cannon are married."

Miss Moore said her aunt had not advised the family directly but "it is generally known in family circles." Asked when the pair were married she said she understood the ceremony took place about two weeks ago.

CANNON DENIES HE IS MARRIED.

RICHMOND, Va., April 12.—(AP) The Times Dispatch says that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., tonight denied over long distance telephone from Durham, N. C., that he was married.

He said, the paper states, that should he ever decide to re-wed he would give the proper announrement to the press.

The inquiry was made of the bishop, the paper says, in view of persistent rumors that the churchman had recently re-married.

Jury Accuses City Officials of Becoming Involved in Territory for Gain; Abandonment Is Urged.

Charging that officials of the city government "juggled" the operations concerning the purchase of Chosewood park site and became involved in the surroundin territory for personal gain, the graft investigating grand jury Saturday addressed a letter to Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and the general council urging abandonment of the contemplated purchase and action to recover monies already paid by the city on the park site.

Purchases through "dummies" were severely condemned by the grand jury in its letter made public by the office of Solicitor-General John A. Boykin Saturday.

Sufficient evidence in the hands of the grand jury has satisfied that body that reservation of 15 lots where a proposed street is to be opened and paved, for which the present holder of the deed paid nothing, was nothing but political jugglery and the scheme contemplated was that Councilman Charles L. Chosewood, among others, should be the ultimate owner, the letter charges.

"While this body does not believe that the John A. White park at this time is essential as a part of the park program of the city, we do believe that if this property had been properly purchased at a reasonable figure, it would have been an acquisition of value to the city in the future," the grand jury said in the letter.

"Dummy" Practice Urged.

Condemning the practice of those connected with the city in getting options through "dummies" for the sale of property to the city at excessive prices, the grand jury said: "This practice has resulted in the placing of a heavy burden upon the taxpayers and shows an unpatriotic and selfish inclination on the part of men who should have the best interest of the city at heart."

The grand jury said: "We are informed by an engineer that it will cost the city of Atlanta at least $250,000 to develop this property (Chosewood park) into a suitable park." The body recommended "that the purchase or lease of this property be abandoned and an attempt be made to recover the amount that was paid upon the purchase price."

The letter was adopted by the grand jury upon being "advised through the public press that the finance committee of city council is considering ways and means of overcoming the injunction recently granted by Hon. Virlyn B. Moore, which prohibits the purchase of Chosewood and John A. White parks." The letter points out that the preceding grand jury gave careful consideration to the circumstances surrounding purchase of the two parks and a special committee was appointed by this grand jury for the purpose of formulating property representations to the city.

Letter From Jury.

The letter, signed by W. E. Harrington as foreman and Howard See as secretary, follows:

"To the Honorable Mayor and Council, City of Atlanta:

"We are advised through the public press that the finance committee of city council is considering ways and means of overcoming the injunction recently granted by Honorable Virlyn B. Moore, which prohibits the purchase of Chosewood and John A. White parks.

"The preceding grand jury gave careful consideration to the circumstances surrounding the purchase of these two parks and a special committee was appointed by this grand jury for the purpose of formulating proper representations to the city.

"We respectfully submit our findings:

"CHOSEWOOD PARK.

"It is the opinion of this grand jury that the purchase of this property was unwise; the price paid for it is excessively high and the tract is not at all suited for park purposes. We are informed by an engineer that it will cost the city of Atlanta at least $250,000 to develop this property into a suitable park.

"Fifteen lots have been reserved where a proposed street is to be opened and paved, and this grand jury has sufficient evidence to satisfy this body that the reservation of these lots, for which the present holder of the deed paid nothing, was nothing but political 'jugglery' and the scheme contemplated was that Councilman Charles L. Chosewood, among others, should be the ultimate owner.

"We recommend that the purchase or lease of this property be abandoned and an attempt be made to recover the amount that was paid upon the purchase price.

John A. White Park.

"While this body does not believe that the John A. White park at this time is essential as a part of the park program of the city, we do believe that if this property had been properly purchased at a reasonable figure it would have been an acquisition of value to the city.

"We wish to condemn the practice of those connected with the city government of Atlanta getting options

BRILLIANT LEGAL BATTLE FORECAST IN TAYLOR'S TRIAL

Veteran City Clerk, Defended by Arnold and Hewlett, Will Face Jury Wednesday Morning.

What is expected to be the most gigantic legal battle of the year and the most important trial growing out of the long investigation into municipal graft and corruption is scheduled to begin Wednesday morning in the superior court of Judge John D. Humphries when Walter C. Taylor, for more than 20 years clerk of the city of Atlanta, is called upon to answer indictments charging bribery and extortion.

Whether or not the defense will submit its much talked of plea for a change of venue could not be learned Saturday night, Taylor's counsel, Reuben R. Arnold and Samuel D. Hewlett, declining to reveal any plans they have prepared in answer to the indictments. If this plea is offered it will be strongly contested by the state, Solicitor-General John A. Boykin said Saturday, in announcing that the state is ready for the trial of Taylor and will vigorously oppose any move for continuance or change of venue.

With two victories and only one acquittal to its credit in the first three graft cases to be taken before juries the prosecution was confident Saturday night that it will gain another victory in the Taylor case on either of the indictments called to trial.

Three Indictments Faced.

Taylor faces three indictments. The first returned against him by the January grand jury charges bribery on 16 counts while the second, returned by the same inquisitorial body, accuses him and Fred Wilson, a merchant, jointly of defrauding the city. The third returned on April 1 by the present grand jury contains nine counts each charging extortion.

Though it had not been determined Saturday night on which indictment Taylor would be forced to answer, Solicitor-General Boykin said, it was expected that the 16-count bribery charge would be the one called.

That the trial will bring out some of the largest crowds ever to attend sessions of the Fulton superior court seems assured, as the case not only pits Mr. Boykin against Mr. Arnold, but gives strength to each of the opposing legal forces, Special Prosecutor William Schley Howard to assist the solicitor-general and Mr. Hewlett to assist Mr. Arnold. Assistant Solicitor J. Walter LeCraw will be at the state's table, while further aid will be given the defense by Lowry Arnold and B. P. Gambrell.

Charges in Indictment.

Following are the charges contained in the bribery indictment on which Taylor likely will be tried:

Count one alleges that on December 7, 1925, he did unlawfully "offer to give and did give to A. G. Allen, a legally qualified councilman of the city of Atlanta, a municipal corporation, four hundred dollars in money ($400) as a present and a reward given by the accused to the said councilman to influence the behavior of the said councilman in the matter of a petition from the Georgia Railway & Power Company for permission to abandon street car service and take up street car tracks on Central avenue, Dodd avenue, Bass street, Pulliam street and Ormond street."

Count two alleges that on May 4, 1925, he gave to Allen the sum of $100 "as a present and reward . . . to influence the behavior of the said councilman in the matter of awarding contracts for paving of Capitol avenue."

Count three alleges that on March 5, 1923, Taylor "did unlawfully received of and from A. P. Calhoun the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250) in money, as a present and reward given accused by the said Calhoun to influence the official behavior of said accused in the matter of a resolution that was introduced in and was pending before the general council of the city of Atlanta to the effect 'that the general assembly of Georgia be and is hereby requested to amend the charter of the city of Atlanta whereby the city shall be authorized to prohibit the maintenance of billiard, pool and bagatelle tables, for hire, in said city, or for playing for which a charge is made,' the said Taylor being then and there clerk of council of the city of Atlanta . . . and as such being in a position of confidence, trust and clerkship in said general council."

$200 Accepted, Charge.

Count four alleges the receipt by Taylor of $200 from Calhoun "to influence the official behavior of said accused in the matter of a proposed ordinance which was then and there pending before the general council of the city of Atlanta" regulating the issuance of licenses to billiard and pool rooms.

Count five charges that Taylor gave J. Allen Couch, on March 1, 1925, a sum of money the exact amount of which is unknown, "said sum of money being something less than $200, and being part of the sum of $200 which the said Taylor received from A. P. Calhoun . . . to influence the official behavior of said Couch in the matter of action by general council of

Modern Steam Plant Distillery Raided; 100 Gallons of Liquor Destroyed by Police

Photos by Bill Mason.

Interior of shed in which Clayton county officers found more than 100 gallons of whisky and a still with a 3,000-gallon output capacity Saturday afternoon. Upper picture, left to right, Sheriff E. L. Adamson, who "scented" the still; W. H. Reynolds, solicitor, of Jonesboro, and Chief R. W. Moore, of College Park, who went to take a look at the huge steam plant. Lower picture shows a close-up of the pipe line which lead to a spring. Left is W. M. Brown, Clay county patrolman, and O. L. Roberts, Jonesboro policeman.

Sheriff E. L. Adamson, Clayton county, has one of those noses that knows.

Driving into Atlanta Saturday afternoon he caught a scent of corn whisky—in fact he caught a quite potent whiff. It seemed to him to be advisable to investigate.

He continued on into College Park where he gathered assistance in the persons of W. M. Brown, Clayton county policeman, and O. L. Roberts, of Jonesboro, and returned to the spot where his olfactory organs had first sensed a violation of the law.

They found a modern steam plant whisky distillery with 12 vats of 500-gallon capacity each. In addition they found 100 gallons of whisky, 65 in gallon cans, about 6,000 gallons of beer and 400 pounds of unused sugar. They also found several hundred empty cans.

The manufactured booze was cached in a 40-foot shed 300 yards off the Jonesboro road. The plant had a one-fourth-mile long pipe to a spring and there was a waste line about one-half mile long through which the "slops" were emptied into a branch.

Sheriff Adamson, after destroying the plant, decided to linger a while. Within an hour M. L. Marasion, living within a few hundred feet of where the still was located, came up in a truck. He was arrested and sent to jail on the charge of distilling.

KENTUCKY PROBES LIVING BURIAL

Woman, 63, Said Buried While in Cataleptic State; Jury Called.

GRAYSON, Ky., April 12.—(AP)—Circuit Judge G. W. Wolfford, of Carter county, announced today that he would call a grand jury Monday to probe charges that Mrs. Susie Vickers, 63, for whom funeral services were held here Monday, was buried alive.

Judge Wolfford's announcement came after two sisters who formerly employed Mrs. Vickers appeared before him and testified that in their opinion the woman was buried while still living. The women, Mrs. George B. Clay and Mrs. Honchell Johnson, both of Catlettsburg, Ky., told Judge Wolfford they had investigated Mrs. Vickers' death and funeral and that several persons had told them that moisture had been wiped from the woman's face twice udring the funeral services.

The sisters said that Mrs. Vickers was subject to fainting spells and that she would lie in a state of coma for sometime. They also told the judge that they understand she was buried without being embalmed and without the services of an undertaker.

Mrs. Vickers was stricken with a heart attack while preparing the evening meal in her home in Denton, Ky., this county, on March 27. She was pronounced dead and was brought here March 29. Services were held here the same day at the Baptist church.

According to Mrs. Clay and Mrs. Johnson, moisture was noticed on the woman's face during the funeral services and it was wiped off. Again at the grave moisture was noticed, they said, and it again was wiped off. The body was buried in Grayson cemetery.

It was reported here that the state board of health at Louisville had been notified, but officials in that city said they had heard nothing of the case.

General S. O. Fugua To Visit McPherson

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(Special.)—Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of infantry, will leave Washington April 15 on an inspection tour that will take him to Fort McPherson, Atlanta, the war department announced today. The chief of infantry is scheduled to spend the day of April 16 at Atlanta before proceeding on to other military posts.

Two 'Mothers' Claim Infant Daughter

PORTLAND, Ore., April 12.—(AP) A four-month-old, golden haired baby, whose temporary name is Georgianna Jane, became the ward of juvenile court here today while two women prepared to prove their maternal rights to the custody of the child.

The infant became court property after police, armed with a court order, forced their way into the home of Mrs. George F. Schaefer, who had refused them permission to enter. A police woman accompanied the officers and took charge of the infant.

Meanwhile, Miss Geraldine Watson, of Los Angeles, appealed to probation authorities in Los Angeles to assist her in recovering the infant which she is alleged to have abandoned in a hotel.

She said the baby was born to her in a Los Angeles hospital. Destitute, Miss Watson told authorities that she hitch hiked to Phoenix, Ariz., to obtain money to support the child. Returning to Los Angeles she said she was informed that a Mrs. Schaefer, of Portland, had adopted the baby, claiming that she was a relative of Miss Watson.

Aunt Is Charged With Torture of Lad

ROGERS CITY, Mich., April 12. (UN)—His chest was seared with burns, Charles Leinen, 9, told officers, when his aunt, Mrs. Alex Awada, held him against a hot stove as a punishment.

Mrs. Awada, who denies the boy's story, is charged with torturing and cruelly punishing. She said the burns were sustained when the boy stood too near the stove while drying his clothing.

The case came to light when the boy's teacher inquired why he had been absent from school. Doctors said some of the burns were of the third degree and might have caused death, but the boy is recovering.

Fulton Citizens Pay 24 Per Cent Of State Taxes

Fulton county paid $1,036,883.36, or 24 per cent of the total of $6,027,675.66 paid to the state of Georgia in 1929 for property, poll and professional taxes, figures released Saturday by Tom Wisdom, state auditor, revealed Saturday.

Chatham county paid 5 per cent, or $317,528.91; Bibb 4 per cent, or $270,673.37; Muscogee and Richmond together paid 8 per cent, or $230,829.35 and $226,051.08, respectively; DeKalb 3 per cent, or $174,798.39; Floyd 2 per cent, or $103,591.73, and Clarke and Dougherty 3 per cent, or $79,376.45 and $80,082.05, respectively.

Eight counties of from 50,000 to 75,000 population were grouped to show a total tax yield of $532,514.38, or 9 per cent of the total. These counties were Coweta, Glynn, Hall, Laurens, Lowndes, Thomas, Troup and Ware.

Thirty counties of from 25,000 to 50,000 population as a unit paid only $1,021,842.91, or 17 per cent of the total, while it required a grouping of 80 counties of a population between 10,000 and 25,000 to make up $1,280,385.34, or 21 per cent. The 33 remaining counties, all under 10,000 population, paid $253,118.34, or 4 per cent.

FINER STRUCTURE WILL BE ERECTED, GEORGE INFORMED

Government Officials Are Convinced That Original $2,100,000 Authorization Will Be Inadequate.

IMPOSING BUILDING IS SEEN AS RESULT

Fourth Assistant Postmaster Philp Will Visit Atlanta April 20 To Make Final Site Inspection.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(Special.)—Culminating a series of conferences held during the past two days Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, today was given definite assurance by treasury and postoffice department officials that an increase of $500,000 to $1,000,000 will be recommended in funds already authorized for the new federal building at Atlanta.

The amount of the increase, it was stated, will be left for future determination, and will be governed by two factors: First, the site to be selected for the structure and the amount the government finds it necessary to pay. Second, the type of building that is, monumental or straight commercial—the government decides to erect.

But in any event, officials in charge of the federal government's extensive building program have become convinced that the original $2,100,000 authorization, of which $450,000 has actually been appropriated, will be inadequate to construct the character of building demanded by a city of the size and importance of Atlanta. Federal officials were persuaded to commit themselves to the proposal for an increase after the matter was placed before them in a forcible manner by Senator George, Senator W. J. Harris, of Georgia, and Representative Robert Ramspeck, of the fifth Georgia district. The actual negotiations were left to Senator George, but Senator Harris and Representative Ramspeck co-operated fully and informed the proper department heads that, after a study of the situation, they were thoroughly in accord with the statement that Atlanta was entitled to a more imposing federal structure than the original authorization contemplated.

All conferences on the subject were held with Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General John W. Philp and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Ferry Heath, who along with Supervising Architect of the Treasury James A. Wetmore, constitute the index departmental committee in charge of federal building activities.

It was during a semi-final conference with Mr. Philp today that Senator George obtained a definite commitment on the increase. The fourth assistant postmaster general agreed with him, as Mr. Heath had earlier, that the government should spend

April 28 Is Set for Opening Dinkler Contractors' Bids

Failure To Begin on Demolishing Aragon Gives Rise To Reports of Long Delay on Project.

With April 28 set as the date for opening contractors' bids on the proposed Louis Dinkler hotel development, possibility of an early start of actual construction on the 20-story project was seen in various development quarters Saturday.

At the same time, however, failure to begin work of demolishing the old Aragon hotel, on the site of which the hotel is to be located, was indicated in other circles as being due to obstacles that may subject the development to indefinite delay.

Dinkler Out of City.

While Carling Dinkler, head of the large chain of hotels and president of the Dinkler Hotel Company, which has leased the Aragon hotel site at Peachtree and Ellis streets, was out of the city and could not be reached for a statement Saturday, he has announced on previous occasions when questioned in regard to rumors of possible delays in the proposed development, that the financing of the large Dinkler hotel project has been successfully completed. Every phase of the work is going forward as planned and the only delays are such as are naturally unavoidable in so large a development, Mr. Dinkler declared in recent interviews.

Reports have been circulated in real estate and development circles to the effect that the lease contract with the George W. Collier estate, which owns the Peachtree and Ellis corner, had been rendered invalid, and that sufficient money could not be raised from loan concerns to carry through the proposed development.

G. Lloyd Preacher, architect for the structure, stated Saturday that completed plans and specifications have been released to general contractors and the date for receiving bids set for two weeks from Monday. "So far as I know," Mr. Preacher said, "everything is in good order for proceeding with the project as planned."

Regarding the delay in clearing the old Aragon hotel site, the architect said that a temporary delay had been occasioned by digging of foundation test holes, it being required that the foundation of the new hotel go six to eight feet below solid rock. In the test holes, rock has been found at an average depth of 40 feet, he said. This phase of the work is to be completed next week, Mr. Preacher explained, indicating that razing of the Aragon would be started soon thereafter.

Wrecking Crew Ready.

At the office of the Carr Construction Company, which has the contract to dismantle the Aragon and clear the site for the new hotel, it was stated that wrecking crews have been held in readiness to begin work as soon as the order is received. However, this is not expected before a week, it was stated. A protecting fence has been up around the old hotel since March 1, when work of dismantling was to have started.

According to the contract of the Dinkler-Collier lease by which the hotel concern acquired use of the Peachtree and Ellis location for 99 years, the lessees must deposit in the bank $200,000 in escrow before they can remove a single brick from the structure now occupying the site. It was reported Saturday that this sum had not been posted to date. Mr. Dinkler was said to be in New York, where, it was reported, he was seeking an advance of the loan in order to comply with this part of the contract and start work on clearing of the site.

Virgil Collier, president of the George W. Collier estate, denied Saturday that Mr. Dinkler had broken his lease contract. He asserted that the hotel man had to date fulfilled every provision of the agreement. "So far as I know, there is no intimation that the lessees will not carry through their development," Mr. Collier said. However, he corroborated the report that the $200,000, required as bond before razing of the structure on the site could be begun, had not yet been placed in escrow. "But," he explained, "the lessees have plenty of time to do that."

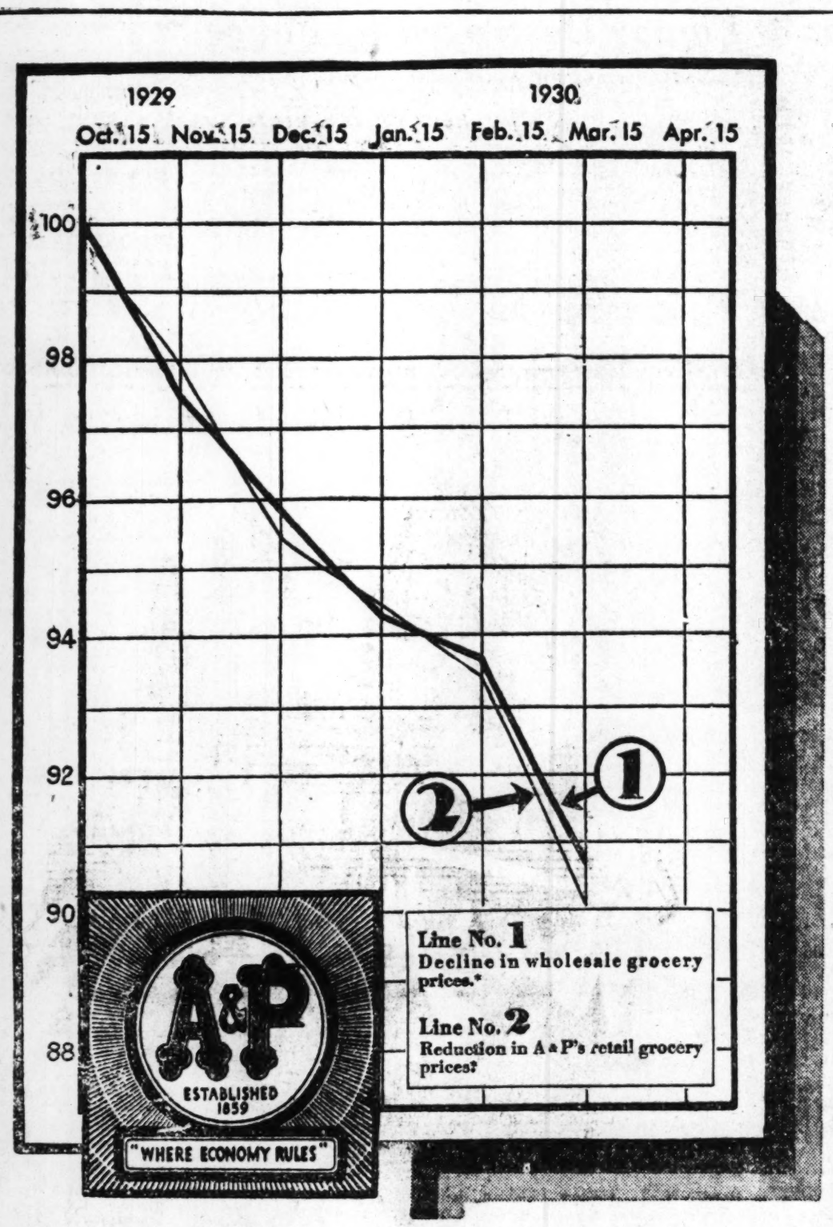

Payments Reported Made.

The Dinkler lease on the Peachtree and Ellis property went into effect on March 1. To date, Dinkler is reported to have paid the two monthly rental requirements, which is based upon $75,000 per year for the first five years. Under the lease agreement, allowing five years before substantial improvement must be made upon the property by the lessee, the Dinkler interests would not be obligated to build or to remove the old Aragon structure for some time.

The Dinkler plans, however, called for immediate construction of a $6,000,000 20-story hotel, containing 600 rooms and for erection in rear of the hotel of an eight-story garage. A $4,000,000 addition of 400 rooms is planned for a later date.

91¢ Will Now Buy What $1.00 Bought Last October

HERE'S GOOD NEWS! Grocery prices are down! Compared with last October grocery prices average 9% lower.

This means 91c now buys what you had to pay $1.00 for only a few months ago.

A&P's millions of customers are getting the full benefit of every saving which has occurred to-date due to declining wholesale prices.

Since October 15th the wholesale prices of important staple groceries have declined 9%.*

Since October 15th A&P's retail prices on such staple groceries have been reduced 9%.*

This is possible because the A&P stores do not carry big inventories . . . therefore A&P is in the fortunate position of being able to pass on to its customers promptly . . . the full benefit of the lower prices which falling markets bring.

And another reason why your dollar goes further at the A&P Food Stores is because less than 2½c of it represents A&P's profit.

MORE MONEY SURE FOR POSTOFFICE

more money in the city if it is to put up a building in keeping with the importance of federal activities there and Atlanta's commercial position in the southern states.

Present plans of Mr. Philp call for going to Atlanta, in company with Assistant Secretary Heath, on April 20 or 21, for the purpose of making a final inspection of sites before announcing a decision. He and Mr. Heath will probably spend two or three days in the city, conferring with civic leaders in an effort to work out problems both as to location and type of building desired. It is his hope that definite conclusions may be reached while there, at least so far as the site is concerned. Actual building plans will necessarily require more time. Still it is possible that certain general conclusions may be reached as to design, which may be used as a basis for later deliberations.

In the meantime, treasury department officials are expected to include in the next appropriation bill containing funds for federal buildings a recommendation for increasing the $450,000 already actually appropriated. This, however, is separate and distinct from the recommendation scheduled to come along later suggesting the additional amount to be asked for the total cost of the structure.

PERKERSON PARK RETENTION URGED.

Opposition to retention of any part of the Perkerson tract for park purposes was expressed Saturday by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, who joined Councilman John A. White and others in the fight to turn the entire 419-acre tract back to the Perkerson heirs and permit Fulton county to acquire it for park purposes if the county wished to develop it.

"I never really felt that Atlanta should have attempted to acquire so large a park site," the mayor said Saturday. "I supported it because of the fact that so many people favored it. I feel now that the borough is in no financial condition to assume any further obligation."

Mr. Ragsdale had nothing to say concerning the criticism leveled at him by Councilman John A. White, chairman of the parks committee of council, who charged that the parks committee had been ignored by the chief executive in appointment of a special council committee to consider the feasibility of retaining 50 acres.

"The parks committee was ignored in all these park purchases," Mr. White said, "and, I believe, that is one reason why the grand jury is finding so much fault with them. We paid too much for them in my opinion, in some instances at least. In the future I shall insist that the parks committee be represented in any transaction involving operation, maintenance or purchase of parks or park property."

Several other members of council will join Mr. White in the fight on retention of any part of the Perkerson tract, which the tenth ward delegation in council is seeking to acquire through lease rights.

SEA CAPTAIN TELLS HOW HE PREVENTED BALDNESS
Hair Was Thin on Top and Full of Dandruff. Had Become Very Gray at Temples, Too
A SIMPLE HOME TONIC ON SCALP WORKED LIKE MAGIC

Captain Hunt Looks at Least 15 Years Younger, His Friends Say
"I've got a thick, good looking, young appearing head of hair, in spite of my years, thanks to this marvelous Tonic called Lea's," declared Captain Willard E. Hunt, well known Sea Captain of Newburyport, Mass.
"These old sea dogs around my home port marvel at my youthful appearance and a lot of the old gray-heads are wisely taking my advice and using Lea's Hair Tonic nowadays. My hair was thin and bad—I was getting bald—hair came out in handfulls, but no more. My scalp used to be covered with dandruff, but that's gone, too, and the gray hairs I had have all turned back to youthful color; it's no wonder folks say I'm looking fifteen years younger; it's a fact," continued Captain Hunt.
Thousands of prematurely gray or bald people have regained a luxuriant, youthful head of handsome hair by using Lea's Hair Tonic which druggists are introducing now. All one need do is rub a little into the scalp with finger tips now and then—experts cannot detect and change is so gradual closest friends pay no attention. Every bottle of this colorless, harmless tonic is backed up by the nationally known Lea Tonic Co. If skeptical apply to spot size of dollar few days and watch results. Druggists sell on money back guarantee or send dollar bill pinned to this ad to Lea Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md., for regular bottle, full directions, postage paid to your door. Gray hair returns to same color as the rest and hair becomes thick and beautiful. All signs of dandruff disappear.

Opening of New Union Depot Is Postponed for Few Days

Event Will Take Place April 20 or 25, After Work on Viaduct Is Completed.

The opening of the new Union depot, between Forsyth and Spring streets, has been postponed until about April 20 to 25, pending completion of flooring in the north end of the Forsyth street viaduct, it was learned Saturday in the office of the Georgia public service commission.

The new structure, which represents an approximate investment of $500,000, will not be thrown open to the public as soon as it was at first planned, because plans for the flooring of the northern end of the Forsyth viaduct have been delayed.

James A. Perry, chairman of the commission, who has been in constant communication with the officials of the N. C. & St. L. railroad, stated Saturday that although the station was practically completed, it had been decided to delay the opening until work on the north end of the Forsyth viaduct had been completed.

The original plan was to put down a temporary floor on the north end of the span and thus connect the station and Spring street viaduct so that the new depot could be opened. However, this plan has been abandoned, Mr. Perry stated, and there will be no opening until the permanent flooring is completed on the north end of the viaduct. In the meantime work is being rushed on the southern end and officials were of the opinion that it also would be open within a few days after the northern an end will have been completed.

The new Union depot will accomodate the 28 trains of the L. & N. and the N. C. & St. L. railroads, which arrive and depart daily.

15 Reds Jailed

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—(AP)—Fifteen alleged communists were convicted in municipal court today on charges of taking part in the riot here March 6. They will appear for sentence Monday.

28 ARRESTS FOLLOW HOWL OF WAR 'VETS'

BUCHAREST, Rumania, April 12. (AP)—A demonstration for higher pensions by disabled World War veterans and war widows here today resulted in 28 arrests and severe injuries to 20 persons.

There long has been a demand in Rumania for higher pensions, and at a meeting in the center of the city of veterans and widows today agitators incited the manifestants to make a violent effort with the object of embarrassing the government.

The authorities forbade the demonstration, and when a column of manifestants attempted to parade through the principal streets they were met by batons and fire hose in the hands of police and soldiers. The demonstrators replied with a bombardment of stones and clods. The injured numbered many more than the 20 severe cases which were taken to the hospital.

The government issued a communique blaming agitators and the several thousand malcontents who had joined in, declaring that the war sufferers themselves maintained an orderly attitude.

This agency, fostered by the Urban league, is one of the most important organizations doing social work among negroes, and was formerly directed by Forrester B. 'UNEMPLOYED' MARCH TO CAPITAL PLANNED

Foster Outlines Proposed Hike From Chicago to Washington.

NEW YORK, April 12—(AP)—Plans for an unemployment demonstration march of "workers" from Chicago to Washington, were announced here today by William Z. Foster, communist leader who is in jail awaiting sentence on a charge of unlawful assembly growing out of the communist demonstration in Union Square last month.

The march will start on July 5, Foster said, after "a colossal mass meeting" in Chicago July 4 in which more than 100,000 "workers" and members of the communist party will participate.

"On the fifth," Foster continued, "10,000 of the delegates meeting in Chicago will begin a march to precipitate the unemployment situation and bring it to a crisis before the fall elections."

The delegates will finish their march at Washington, he said, where they will make a formal protest to President Hoover over unemployment.

"The capitalistic class is scared stiff by the present crisis precipitated in that assemblage on March 6," said Foster, referring to the "Red Thursday" riot.

Former Newsboy, Wealthy Bride, Sail for Canada

SOUTHAMPTON, England, April 12.—(AP)—A former British newsboy and his bride, a New York heiress, sailed on the liner Montrose for the new world today.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cecil Durban, whose marriage was announced the day before yesterday, are on their way to Canada, "tremendously happy and very optimistic for the future."

Mrs. Durban, born Vivienne Huntington, daughter of the late Charles Pratt Huntington, New York architect, and a cousin of Archer Milton Huntington, millionaire and author, said: "We are so wrapped up in each other that nothing else matters. We are just looking forward to the future, which we hope and believe will bring happiness and contentment to us both."

Mr. Durban, who until his marriage on March 13 earned his living by selling newspapers outside the Folkestone railway station, was just as enthusiastic.

"When we get to Canada I am going to hunt for a job as electrician, and, since I know a little about the work, I am hoping to have no difficulty in that respect. Although my wife has money, I want to earn my own living, and after a few years at least to have my own business."

'Casey' Lambert Saved by 'Chute

ST. PAUL, April 12.—(AP)—Stafford L. "Casey" Lambert, well-known St. Louis flyer, and Herbert Condie, of Ferguson, Mo., architect and airport designer whom Lambert recently taught to fly, escaped death in parachute jumps from a plane today. A wing fell from the plane while Lambert was going into a banked turn at approximately 190 miles an hour over the golf links of the Sunset Hill Country Club, in St. Louis county.

Lambert, flying at an altitude of about 1,200 feet, saw an aileron of the right wing flutter. Suspecting mechanical trouble, he called to Condie to get ready to jump, simultaneously nosing the plane for greater altitude.

At about 1,500 feet the right wing of the plane broke from the fuselage and crashed. Lambert and Condie jumped just before the craft started into a nose dive.

Rum Conspirators Sentenced to Jail

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 12.—(AP)—Sentences were passed today on 39 defendants in the government's Pottawatomie county liquor conspiracy case by Judge Edgar S. Vaught in United States district court.

Frank Fox, former sheriff of Pottawatomie county, was given the maximum penalty for conspiracy, two years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., and a fine of $1,000. Randall Pitman, county attorney, who government attorneys charged was at the head of a county-wide liquor ring, was acquitted at the trial in February.

Without exception the eight defendants who stood trial and were convicted received heavier penalties than the 31 who pleaded guilty. J. W. (Smoky) Motsenbacher, alleged by the government to have headed an alcohol ring in the county, however, was the only other defendant to receive the maximum sentence and fine.

Many of the defendants who pleaded guilty were given suspended sentences or sentences already covered by the time they have been in jail, permitting their immediate freedom.

American Tells of Life With Mexican Kidnapers

:: INTERESTING EXPERIENCES WITH BANDIT CAPTORS TOLD ::

(Bristow, American oil operator, was captured by Mexican bandits early in March and held for ransom. His son last week effected his release. This is Bristow's first revelation of his harrowing adventure.)

BY J. E. BRISTOW.

(Copyright, 1930, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

TEPIC, Nayarit, Mexico, April 11. This bandit business is not very profitable for the bandits, and it was mighty poor business for me during the month I spent climbing mountain sides or compelled to hide in canyons in the wilds of Nayarit, so my captors wouldn't be caught.

When I saw the railroad Wednesday morning by moonlight it was the prettiest sight I have ever looked at. I could have kissed the rails, I was so thankful. A month with bandits in the mountains of Nayarit would make a Christian of any man—that is, if he managed to get home to tell about it.

When I arrived in Tepic weeks ago and started into the mountain country to look at a mine I didn't know I would not be back here for so long, or that I would travel more than 150 miles and have only a blanket to sleep on and under and just the sky for a roof for more than a month.

If I had had any such thought as that I would have stayed home, rested my 63 years by my own fireside and tried to find a mine in my back yard.

I started from Tepic March 5, by automobile, to look at a mine I had made a payment on. This mine is near a little ranch called Rancho San Tafe, about 60 miles from Tepic. That doesn't seem far, but the mere number of miles doesn't mean much in this country, especially when you have to cover most of them on a mule and never on level ground.

We went first by automobile to Santa Maria Del Odo. There we left the road and took to muleback. I had engaged a man named Carlos Fields as an interpreter. I don't speak Spanish. I needed some one who knew the country and could get along with the natives.

Fields Hires Men.

Fields had hired two other men for me, Alfonso Occiguida and Emilio Perez. They were to help at the mine. There were also two Mozos along. Mozos are sort of all-around men, very necessary in Mexico. One of them was in charge of the mules. We had nine of those animals.

We left Santa Maria Del Oro with our train and took the mountain trail to the mine. We were two days on the road. The night of the second day we reached Rancho San Tafe. We expected to camp there while I was looking over the mine.

It isn't much of a place, this so-called ranch. The house is built of grass and cane and has only one room. A family lives there, a man and his wife.

The following morning we climbed to the mine, which is up the mountain side, looked things over and decided what to do about operating. That night we went back to the ranch, which is about half way down the steep side of the mountain.

I planned to leave for Santa Maria Del Oro the next night, for we had completed our arrangements for our work and were eager to get back and start things going. But Fields objected to leaving and talked me into staying another day.

Fields said he wanted to look at a possible lead property up the river a little way. The river is in sight of the mine and is on the valley east of where we were. It is called Rio Santiago. I agreed to do as Fields wished.

The night of that next day we were sitting around outside the little ranch house discussing how we would work the mine. It was around 7:30. Suddenly six men brandishing rifles came running into the clearing. I could see them in the moonlight, and they looked dangerous.

I was sitting next to Fields. When I saw these men I leaped up and ran into the house. I thought there were rifles there. We had had them in our car, and when we gave up the car and took to the mules the rifles had been taken along. So I was sure the guns were in the house. But they weren't.

I had hardly gotten into the house when three of the bandits were on me. They jabbed their rifles into my stomach. I knew the answer to that, and held my arms up. I have only one hand. I held that in the air, with the stump of the other as erect as I could get it.

Bandits Lead Way.

Fields came in and the bandits took us outside. Fields told me we had to mount our mules and go with the bandits. I mounted my mule and Fields and Occiguida did the same with theirs. The bandits pointed a gun at Emilio Perez, who is a little fat, and he scurried out and climbed aboard a mule.

The bandits led the way. We moved around the mountain, crossed a little clearing and climbed to the summit of a craggy knob. Not a word was spoken.

We arrived at a clearing and found a man sitting on a rock. He looked us over. This man was Cruc Delgado. He had two front teeth missing, there was a squint in his left eye, he had a droopy mustache, and all in all he was a toough-looking customer.

Fields talked with the man who had headed the bunch who caught us. His name was Chane Flores. Flores talked with his chief. Finally Fields told me I had better give him (Fields) a couple of blank checks signed with my name, as he had made a deal to release me for a thousand pesos. He said he would go to Tepic and get the money.

I have an account with a banking firm in Tepic, the only bank in the whole state of Nayarit, and Fields knew it. I told him I had only 800 pesos there. Fields said that would be all right, that he would raise the remainder himself.

I didn't want to sign the checks without filling in the amount but Fields got pretty vicious with me and I had to do it. With the armed bandits standing around I told friends I knew he wouldn't be back and that he was going to do me. He left, and I haven't seen him since. He never got any money, though.

After Fields departed the bandits moved a little and camped. There we waited two days. The other men with us the bandits sent to the mine, telling them to work it. They took all of my ore for the use of the bandit gang and confiscated our mules.

The bandits did a lot of quiet talking among themselves. I couldn't catch most of what was going on, not knowing the language. That is, I didn't know it then. But I can talk a lot of it now.

We kept moving and hiding, moving and hiding. The whole thing was a nightmare. I worked hard to keep the bandits friendly. They were decent to me generally, but once in a while their real nature would show.

Food Runs Short.

They tried to keep me fed. One day food was very short, as we had had to stay in the mountains. The federal soldiers were chasing us, in the hope of rescuing me, so the bandits had to lie low. All we had that whole day was three eggs. And the bandits gave me two of those. For five days we lived an bread and water.

Once five of the gang went to a village and got drunk. Then they wanted to hang me. But the chief, Delgado, intervened. The bandits were getting tired of waiting. I know they would have shot me if the soldiers had caught up with us. It was to my best interests to help them evade the soldiers.

There really was little chance of these fellows being caught, however. They had a spy system equal to that of the war, and they knew all the time what was going on.

One night when we were out of food and my stomach was about caved in, we camped under a tree where a lot of wild turkeys were roosting. The bandits hesitated to shoot the turkeys for fear the sound would bring the soldiers on us. We were close to the soldiers' camp.

I learned to play the bandits' card games and I taught them to play poker to while away the tedious hours.

We made one big trip, traveling from noon one day till 5 o'clock the next morning to get to the volcano Ceboruco. There we made our final camp. I was worn out. I had lost my glasses the third day, and that made things even more difficult for me. There were soldiers on both sides of the canyon where we camped. We hid behind the rocks. I was just as afraid that the soldiers would find us as the bandits were.

At last the bandits decided to let me go. When my final day of captivity came they clustered about me and said good-by. There were eight of them. They had killed a turkey and had found some vile liquor, so they gave me a farewell party. Then they started me off for Tepic with an escort.

Nice fellows, in some ways, those bandits. But I was never so tired of people in my whole life as I was of those eight Mexicans. And especially that fellow with the squint eye.

PARIS, April 12. — (AP) — The French foreign office said today that French troops had not clashed with pirates in Indo-China, as reported in dispatches from Shanghai.

It was added that the French consul at Lungchow was forced to flee to Tonkin March 25, but the government has no news of serious events. The foreign office said there was a red connection with this and other actions of the pirates.

More Summery Weather Due In City Today

Appearance of scattering white suits and an occasional straw hat might have persuaded some folks that Saturday was warmer than Friday, when the thermometer hit a new high for 1930 at 81. But Director C. F. von Herrmann said the temperature was the same.

Fine, clear and continued warm is the prediction for Palm Sunday.

Saturday morning's minimum temperature, incidentally, was the highest for 1930.

2 Negro 'Mammies' End Lives Same Day

SHREVEPORT, La., April 12.—(AP)—The coroner here today was told that two old negro "mammies" had committed suicide in one day.

"Aunt" Susie V. Lee, 75, hanged herself in the attic of a white family's home due, it was believed, to despondency caused by the idea that her white folks had grown tired of her.

Carrie Minor, 53, swallowed a quantity of poison which killed her. She fought off relatives trying to administer an antidote, the coroner was informed. She was reported despondent over the loss of $3,500 to a fortune teller.

REVAMPED LEVIATHAN SAILS FOR EUROPE

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—Reconditioned after three months in dry dock, the United States liner Leviathan sailed today for Europe with 570 passengers.

General John J. Pershing, chairman of the battlefield monument commission, was among the passengers, making his annual visit to France in connection with American battlefield monuments.

WORLD JURISTS FINISH WORK OF NATIONS

Much Is Left Undone as Hague Conference Adjourns.

THE HAGUE, April 12.—(AP)—The conference for the codification of international law, attended by jurists from all over the world, wound up its work today without achieving most of the work it had been summoned to do.

Out of three commissions into which it had been subdivided, only the nationality commission produced results. These were embodied in a convention opposed by the United States but finally voted, 40 to 1.

David Hunter Miller, editor of treaties for the American state department, said he could not sign the convention because of a number of unacceptable features, and the inter-American commission of women, of which Miss Doris Stevens is chairman, vigorously assailed it.

In his closing speech, President Theodorus Heemskerk, whose order closing the Peace Palace, where the sessions were held, to all except accredited journalists and delegates, was resented by the women, admitted that the nationality convention had caused difficulties.

However, he said, "though part of the subject, the nationality of married women has given rise to some feeling outside the committee of the conference. I venture to say that the texts adopted were inevitable."

The commission on territorial waters ended its work simply by recommending that the League of Nations Council convoke a new conference at an opportune time to deal with the question. The commission on responsibility of states for damage caused in their territory to the person or property of foreigners frankly recognized its failure to reach any agreement at all.

U. S. STEEL IS DUBBED ADMINISTRATION PET

Congressman Byrns Cites Pig Iron Tariff as Proof of Charge.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Charges that the United States Steel Corporation is the "special beneficiary of the republican administration" were made here today in a statement issued by Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, chairman of the democratic national congressional committee.

Representative Byrns cited as an example of his claim the pig iron schedule of the tariff bill restoring the house rate of $1.125 per ton on pig iron. The senate had cut the house rate to 75 cents.

"The huge profits and heavy dividend distributions are evidence that the steel trust does not need such tariff protection," Byrns said, adding that "the tariff bounty bestowed is collected in higher prices to consumers of hardware, cutlery, farm machinery and every other product of iron and steel."

Rheumatic Pains Were So Severe Could Hardly Walk at Times, Says Georgia Woman.

Medicines can win friends in one way and one way only—by producing results. And what a marvelous record of matchless achievements Sargon has made! So remarkable, so unusual have been the accomplishments of this new, scientific compound that, were the facts not known and verified, they would challenge belief itself. Yet, those who have put Sargon to the test know by actual experience that it paves the way to new and splendid health. Take, for instance, the case of Mrs. Lumma O'Neal, well-known resident of Manchester, Ga., who recently made the following statement while in Atlanta:

"I'd always been a strong and healthy woman up until about a year ago. Then it seemed like my whole system got in a poisoned, disordered condition, and I developed rheumatic trouble in my lower limbs that caused them to swell and pain me to where I could hardly walk. I was very nervous and excitable. Violent sick headaches would last three or four days at a time; and I'd have dizzy spells until I couldn't stand up. A slow-acting liver kept me feeling sluggish and drowsy all the time. My stomach was terribly upset and nearly everything I ate caused heart palpitation and shortness of breath that would frighten me almost senseless.

"I'm like a woman made over again since I started taking Sargon! I never had a better appetite, and it's certainly grand to be able to enjoy anything I want to eat, without any fear of after effects. The rheumatic pains and swelling have completely disappeared, my nerves are strengthened and I sleep just fine!

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills got my liver to working right again and put an end to my constipation, and I don't know what it is to have a dizzy attack or sick headache any more. My whole system seems cleansed of poisons and filled with wonderful strength and energy.

"I'm telling all my friends about Sargon and I'll be delighted to write anyone who is suffering as I was, about all this marvelous medicine does!"

The Sargon Man is at Jacobs' Main Store, 48 North Broad St., Grant Bldg., meeting the public and giving the facts about this remarkable new scientific discovery. He cites case after case of Sargon's wonderful powers at work; personal instances of health renewed and happiness restored, right here in this city. Sargon may be obtained at all Jacobs' Drug Stores throughout Atlanta.—(adv.)

In the upper picture, F. W. Ivey, breeder of pedigreed racing pigeons, releases six of his classic racers for a demonstration of their speed and prowess. The birds, which face death from natural enemies and lately from wanton huntsmen, circle in flight formation above the Ivey loft for about five minutes before landing on their home flies. Below is shown No. 5904, a bird which has flown thousands of miles, revealing the gaping wound in its side made by a fierce pigeon hawk two weeks ago. Although severely slashed by the vicious killer, No. 5904 showed its thoroughbred qualities by flying to its home trap where it is now recuperating under Mr. Ivey's watchful care.

There is no protection against the wanton slaying of tame pigeons, even though they be of the highest pedigree and possess some of the best racing records in the country, Peter S. Twitty, state game and fish commissioner, has ruled following requests for action that would prevent such destruction.

In a letter to F. W. Ivey, secretary of the Gate City Racing Pigeon Club of Atlanta and a breeder of high-grade birds, the commissioner revealed this lack of legal assistance for Georgia breeders, stating that while the law bracketed the slaying of wild bird life there is no existing provision for similar protection to domesticated bird life.

Mr. Ivey, who has one of the most complete pigeon lofts in the south, complained to the game and fish commissioner after a long experience of losses among his birds, all of which have certified records, and several of which during the recent past either have been slain by shotgun and rifle wielders or have limped back into their home flies at 137 Halliday street with broken wings or legs.

Sought Protection.

The spring racing season, which includes the month of April, May and June, has just opened, and Mr. Ivey appealed to the commissioner in an effort to have his birds protected if there was such a means. Mr. Ivey has about 80 fine pigeons of the homing and tumbler species, many of which are bred merely for racing purposes, and some of which have made long distance flights—one or two as great as 500 miles.

He has pigeons of all ages, from squabs a few days old to "olds" several years in age. He has types known as "prisoners" and others merely for breeding purposes, and every bird in his loft is recorded and certified, including its birth, mating, parents, grandparents and brothers and sisters—and its children even unto the third and fourth generation.

Mr. Ivey is an expert on pigeon breeding and habits and among his fourscore birds he can identify at a glance almost any particular pigeon. A few of them have names, but they are mostly numbered, bearing on one leg a small aluminum band which is attached to the pigeon five days after birth and which is removed only after death, if the bird is recovered.

Among his fine racers is No. 5904, born in 1927 and which has flown more than 2,500 miles in one year's racing. Recently a hawk struck No. 5904 while it was en route to its home loft and, though seriously wounded, the bird gamely reached home, where now it is recuperating from a deep gash under its left wing.

"333" Outstanding Racer.

Another outstanding racer in his loft is No. 333, which is known as a "500-mile bird," having flown that distance from Fort Myers, Fla., and No. 201, last year's winner of the race from Roberta, Ga., to Atlanta. No. 255 is another speedy racer, being a "400-mile" type, having made a splendid flight last year from Dade City to this city. The average speed in flight is 45 to 50 miles an hour for racers.

When pigeons mate, which they invariably do at the age of eight months, they stay mated until death parts them or until other circumstances beyond their own whimsicalities separate them. Divorce or philandering is an unknown practice among them. Mr. Ivey recalls one instance where a hen and a cock of different matings failed to return to the home loft, presumably the prey of gunmen or hawks. The "widow" and "widower" left at home were placed together and they now are inseparable companions.

Mr. Pigeon himself is a devoted male. When his wife presents the nest with the inevitable brace of eggs it is hubby who must show up on time every morning at 9:30, where he sits on the small eggs—remaining imperturbably until 3:30 in the afternoon, when he is "relieved" by Mrs. Pigeon. You can set your watch at 9:15 every morning when you see the cock snuggle his mate off the nest and take up his "trick" at sitting on the prospective squablings, Mr. Ivey says. And, again, that afternoon when his mate nudges him out of the nest you can bet it's 3:30.

Mysterious Tumblers.

Tumblers are a strange breed of pigeon. There is a mystery attached to them. They get their name from the fact that once released for flight they intermittently flop over into a quick somersault while flying. This cannot be explained, Mr. Ivey says, except that legend has it that ancient Hindus taught this breed of pigeon the trick of tumbling. Just what the psychology of this tumbling, if any, Mr. Ivey says he doesn't know. Nor does he know anyone else connected with pigeon-breeding who does, beyond the fact that it all is supposed to have originated in a Hindu trick.

The Ivey loft and flies are the most modern structure, designed with a view to expert training of young racers, who, through a special "trap" constructed in the roof of the flies are taught to recognize their home loft by being allowed while still imprisoned in the general loft to "feel" as though they are at liberty, come to know their home with that inexplicable intuition which enables birds to find their way back to a certain spot.

A racing pigeon, when returning to its home loft, alights at its particular trap entrance, pushes into the trap through slender steel bars that allow entrance but are closed against reexit. The returning bird then steps on a little treadle which makes connection with an electric bell in the owner's home, so that the exact time of its return is noted. Mr. Ivey's loft is almost unique in its design, there being only one other in existence of the same type and that, he says, was copied after his own pattern.

HOOVER FAVORS LEAGUE SAYS MRS. NELLIE ROSS

Former Woman Governor Assails President in Public Address.

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former governor of Wyoming, today told the southern women's national democratic organization of New York that though President Hoover has avoided open indorsement of the League of Nations, he and "his republican aides have tried, by various devious tricks, to enter it by the side door—the family entrance." The occasion of her address was a celebration of Jefferson's birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Ross, who is now vice chairman of the democratic national committee, said: "First he believed in the League of Nations. When he became president he could not very well continue to uphold the league, which at heart, he has always believed in. Since then he and his republican aids have not dared openly to come out for the league."

Mrs. Ross asserted that evidence of an effort to enter the league via the "side door" is to be found in the World Court and the recent conference on armament in Europe. "It was a great calamity to the world and humanity when these ideas failed because we were 10 years too late," she said.

Mrs. Ross ridiculed the idea that there is no difference between the republican and democratic parties, an idea she described as "clever propaganda that has its source chiefly in canny republican minds."

"It is true that the republican party has become expert in modeling platforms embodying planks that have a Jeffersonian sound," she said.

Fliers Jump to Safety As Planes Lock Wings

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—(AP) William S. Dohermann, San Francisco, and Henry Michaels, Menlo Park student fliers, jumped to safety with parachutes today when airplanes they were piloting locked wings over the San Mateo airport. Reports said neither was injured. The planes fell about 3,000 feet and were demolished.

Census May Lead Farmer to Count 'Chillun' Again

HASTINGS, Neb., April 12.—(UN)—The census showed one Webster county farmer that a recount of his family was needed to reveal the names of his daughters.

When Carl Portenier, census enumerator, asked the farmer how many children he had, the answer was "nine, all girls."

"Name them," said the enumerator.

The father gave the first four names without hesitation, pondered briefly on the fifth and sixth, faltered badly before giving the seventh, and was unable to give the names of the other two.

The farmer's wife could not speak English. A family on an adjoining farm added an eighth name but the ninth daughter so far as current recollection went, remained unnamed.

Forest Demonstration In Schools Planned

The Georgia forest service has started the third of its demonstration series among the 100 or more rural high schools teaching forestry and having their own school forests, it was announced here today.

Wood samples are displayed and the various uses to which each is put are discussed. In the exhibit is included artificial silk made from wood, artificial glass, paper pulp and other of the less known products of wood.

Woods suitable for veneer, athletic goods, handles, textile appliances, woodenware and others little known to the public are discussed along with the better known uses such as poles, posts, cross-ties and general construction work.

Some of the school communities are reported organizing neighborhood cooperative shipments of logs as a result of the demonstration and it is the plan of the Georgia forest service to develop this practical phase of forestry as far as possible.

Fatal Motorcycle Crash.

LAKE CHARLES, La., April 12. (AP)—J. C. Knight, 26, of Jacksonville, Fla., was killed almost instantly and R. A. Crabtree, of Jacksonville, received injuries in a motorcycle accident today near here. Their machine moving at a rapid rate ran into a team of mules on a freshly scraped highway. The injured man is receiving hospital treatment here.

Mississippi Sues Its Road Commission

JACKSON, Miss., April 12.—(AP)—Recovery of $84,444.89 allegedly due the state from the sale of war materials in 1927 is sought from six state highway commissioners in a suit filed here today by W. J. Miller, state tax collector.

The money, according to the suit, represents funds received by Commissioner D. W. Robins, Tupelo, from the sale of rails to the Mobile & Ohio railroad.

According to a statement of Commissioner Robins as to disposition of the funds, made to a senate investigating committee prior to his resignation, about $45,000 of the money was spent for freight on the rails and the remainder used on state highway projects.

Flood Survey Favored.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—A favorable report on a house bill to provide for a survey of the Choctawhatchee river in Florida and Alabama to ascertain methods of preventing and controlling floods was ordered today by the senate commerce committee. An appropriation of $14,000 would be authorized.

TWO SCHOOL STRIKE LEADERS ARRESTED

President of Knoxville College Student Body and Fellow-Classman Taken In.

HARROGATE, Tenn., April 12.—(AP)—The arrest of two leaders of the student strike at Lincoln Memorial University followed closely today upon the announcement of Judge J. H. S. Morison, acting president of the university, that he had expelled one of the arrested boys and was empowered to "do anything necessary to break this up."

Clay McCarroll, Knoxville, president of the student body, and leader of the movement, and Ernest Fields, also a student, were arrested late today on warrants which a deputy sheriff said charged creating a disturbance and rioting on the campus. McCarroll was expelled this morning and a professor was dismissed.

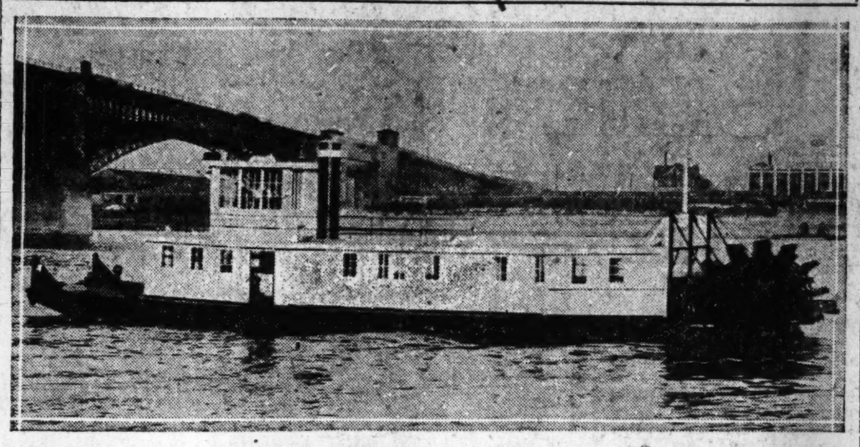

Student leaders charged he was the fifth to suffer because of sympathy with their efforts to bring about changes in the conduct and administration of the university. One of this quintet has said he resigned and was not discharged.

Fields was released on his own recognizance pending hearing Tuesday.

New Type of Towboat To Be Used on Coosa-Alabama River

When operations on the Coosa-Alabama river begin this summer, the newest type of towboat, powered with a Diesel type, six-cylinder, two-cycle, 150-horsepower motor will be used. These river craft represent the most modern developments in power boats. They are 80 feet long and have a 22-inch draft. The Coosa-Alabama Navigation Company, of Gadsden, operator of the line, has just completed a survey of prospects for river traffic and has found hundreds of thousands of tons of freight ready for shipment over the water route.

POLICE RADIO GETS FIVE MORE WAVES

BY MARTIN CODEL.

WASHINGTON, April 8—(NANA) Five more short wave channels, making eight in all, are now available for the police radio systems that are springing up throughout the country to aid in the speedy apprehension of criminals.

Orders just issued by the federal radio commission increased the number of wave lengths for police services. Police broadcasts consist primarily of orders spoken to squad cars from radio stations at central headquarters. At the same time, the commission decreased the number of channels used by electric lighting and power companies from seven to only one.

The increase in police frequencies, the commission insists, has nothing to do with its current quarrel with Governor Green, of Michigan, over the latter's refusal to heed the federal board's requirements respecting the erection of a high-powered station for use by the Michigan state police, at Lansing. Nevertheless, the order is written so that it appears to cover only "municipally-controlled stations."

The wave lengths for police services will be available to all states and municipalities alike, the commission announced, but powers are to be limited according to population so that the use of the channels may be duplicated without interference in various parts of the country. The fact that the Michigan station proposes to use 5,000 watts of power, thus virtually requiring an exclusive wave, precipitated the dispute between the Michigan governor and the federal authorities.

At present, about 25 municipalities employ radio systems, but applications from others are being received at the rate of about one a week. Current applications awaiting approval, usually given as a matter of routine, are from Buffalo, N. Y.; Portland, Ore.; Flint, Mich.; San Antonio, Texas; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Pasadena, Cal., and San Jose, Cal.

The commission, in allotting the additional police channels, imposed the condition "that the station be operated only for the purpose of transmitting dispatches of an emergency nature to squad cars or other mobile units."

Power of 50 watts is allotted to stations in cities under 100,000 population, with a graduated scale of powers up to a maximum of 500 watts for larger cities.

VIRGINIA CHANCELLOR ANNOUNCES BEQUESTS

UNIVERSITY, Va., April 12.—(AP) Bequests to the University of Virginia totaling $1,793,781 were announced by President Edwin A. Alderman at the Jefferson Day exercises this morning.

The gifts include $350,000 donated by William Andrews Clark, Jr., of Butte, Mont., a graduate of the law class of 1899, for a law building, and $300,000 for a football stadium, the gift of Frederic William Scott, of Richmond, Va., rector of the university. Plans already have been prepared for a concrete structure to seat 23,000 spectators.

Among the larger bequests were the following:

From the general education board, $120,000, to be made available over a five-year period for teaching and research in the humanities, including languages, archaeology and medieval history.

From the late John B. Cobb, of New York, $140,000, to be used in adding a new wing to the Cobb Chemical Laboratory, which was the gift of Mr. Cobb before his death.

From Mrs. Evelyn M. B. Tiffany, of Baltimore, $100,000 for the building of an art museum and in addition $80,000 in real estate, valuable paintings and antiques.

From Captain George Zinn of Virginia and Pennsylvania, $50,000 for the establishment of the Captain George Zinn aviation fund.

From the Conrad Hubert estate, $50,000 toward a home for nurses.

President Alderman also said that appropriations recently made by the Virginia legislature include $15,000 for completion of the heating plant, $115,000 for a nurses' home, and $250,000 for an engineering building.

Tomcat and Otters Termed 'Bad Actors'

PORTLAND, Ore., April 12.—(AP) A startling story of a swaggering tomcat named Themistocles and of his cut throat crew of seven otters who live beneath a houseboat on Eauvies island, in the Columbia river, was brought to the state game commission today by Frank Ruthman, sportsman, who asked that the otters be captured and removed to other fields.

Ruthman said the tomcat and his pals made life miserable for Ruthman's decoy duck flock. Themistocles, Ruthman said, spends most of his time beneath the boat house, where any time of day he can be seen in close communication with other members of his band.

The game commission took the request under advisement.

COAST GUARD MOURNS

Bobby, Cat Mascot, Loses Last of Nine Lives.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., April 12.—(AP)—An official communication from the Peaked Hill Bars coast guard station today told a sad story. It read:

"To the Public:

"Subject: Death of Cat.

"After being with the coast guard 19 years, Bobby, the cat mascot of Peaked Hill Bars, has cashed in the last of his nine lives.

"He was born at High Head station, the son of Maria, a summer visitor, and Tom, a native, and when that station was put out of commission was transferred to Peaked Hill.

"Every morning he would walk along the cliff and look out one way or another to see how shipping was getting along or if anything was ashore. Sometimes he would walk along the beach for two or three miles or roam the dunes searching for edible field mice.

"Well, Peaked Hill is without a mascot now. Some of the boys out here wish they had Bob's years of service." He lived all his life on the sand dunes, never went to town, and saw many a shipwreck and many a brave deed performed on the bucl shores of Cape Cod."

HE SUFFERED FOR YEARS WITH PILES

Some Doctor Said Ulcers; Others Abscesses and Others Piles

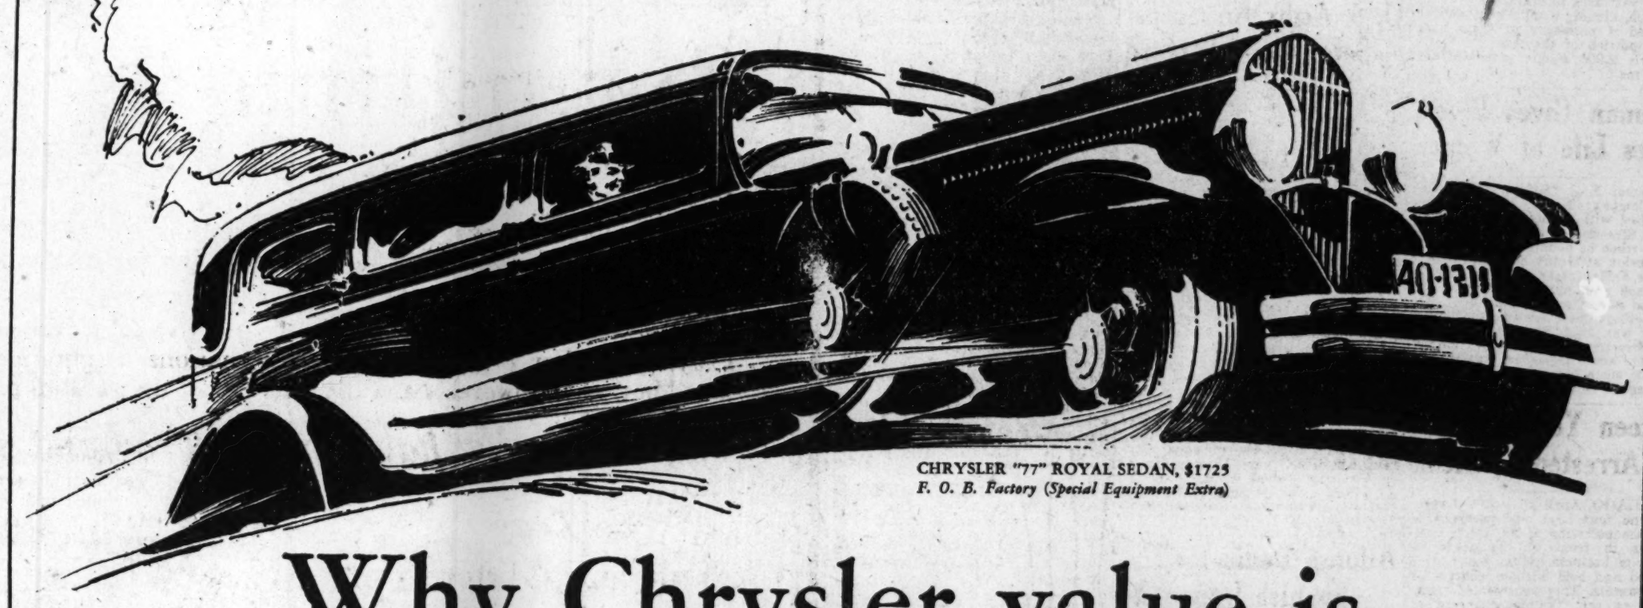

A SIMPLE LITTLE REMEDY CURED IT

"After you have suffered as I did for three years and spend all I did in vain, you surely feel grateful when something comes along and heals you up and makes you well and happy, at my age, 79 years," writes C. F. C. Stamp, who like scores of people here, praises Colac Pile Pills to the sky.

"Some doctors called it abscess, others ulcers and some just piles, but I was in terrible pain with almost a steady flow of bloody fume, or sometimes it was clear red blood. Our family physician, and couple more, did their best for me, and I had already used the remedies advertised in the papers, so you can imagine my relief when I found Colac Pile Pills were each day lessening the pain and bloody flow. It got less and less until it quit, and the bowels moved regular and comfortable again. They surely healed me up, and made me well and happy," continued Mr. Stamp, a well-known farmer of Preston, Iowa.

Seven out of ten past forty years of age are apt to suffer with some mild or serious rectal trouble. Colac Pile Pills—a couple with a swallow of water at meal times—do good to countless thousands. They are sold on positive guarantee of results or money back by leading druggists, or send 75c cash or stamps to Colac Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., for full size bottle return mail.—(adv.)

Draining of Other Mosquito Menaces in State Forecast

Great Interest Aroused by Blasting of 700-Acre Alligator Lake in Jenkins County.

Unprecedented interest aroused by the successful drainage of Alligator lake, 700-acre mosquito-breeding area in Jenkins county, may lead to the early drainage of other malaria menaces in the state, according to L. M. Clarkson, chief engineer of the state health department, who had charge of the Jenkins county work.

Probably the next outstanding effort to rid the state of malaria mosquitoes will be at Duke's pond, another Jenkins county lake containing 3,000 acres of water, he said. Farmers in the community may be the first to take advantage of a law passed by the general assembly three years ago providing for the creation of drainage districts.

Under this law two-thirds of the property owners affected may present a petition to the state board of health asking the drainage of any given area. A board of assessors will then be appointed to make a survey of the project with reference to individual benefits. Each owner will then be taxed the actual costs, according to benefits obtained.

It is probable that Jenkins county farmers will take immediate steps to form an organization for draining Duke's pond, reclaiming the fertile bottom for use as farm and pasture lands, and at the same time destroying one of Georgia's largest mosquito menaces.

Official requests for drainage work already have been received from the counties of Screven, Laurens, Burke, Mitchell, Dooley, Johnson and Jefferson, as well as for additional work in Jenkins county. Surveys have been made in Jefferson county, and two large lakes will be drained there in the near future. Other requests will be followed up and complied with as fast as practicable, Mr. Clarkson said.

A temporary halt in the work at Alligator lake was called at noon Friday, when a final blast brought an unexpected deluge of water, threatening damage to highways and lowland farms. Several days will be allowed for the vast area to drain, after which the ditch, already a mile long, will be deepened if necessary to drain the deeper portion of the lake.

Nearly 2,000 people witnessed the explosions.

Late Friday night a call was issued for blood and eight city firemen offered to submit to a transfusion. DeFoor's blood matched and the transfusion was held Saturday morning. Mrs. Streetman, who has been suffering from acute nephritis, was reported to be much improved late Saturday night as the result of the operation.

Missing Driver Believed Victim Of Foul Play

Police launched a search late Saturday night for J. R. Ward, of 1356 Stewart avenue, S. W., fearing foul play. According to officials of the Excelsior Laundry, at 141 Piedmont avenue, for which he is a driver, he had been missing since 7 o'clock Saturday morning.

S. A. Wix, of 691 Brookline street, S. W., manager of the laundry, came to Captain A. J. Holcombe Saturday night and asked him to help find the missing man as it was feared that he had been slugged and robbed. According to Wix, Ward left the laundry with a load of laundry for delivery and to make his collections.

If he had made all of his collections he would have had more than $110. The truck was found abandoned in front of 118 Sofith Forsyth street late Saturday night.

Visitor Is Arrested On Forgery Charge

After a chase that started at Cain and Peachtree streets and lasted for more than an hour, a man giving his name as Eugene Byrd, 24, of Washington, D. C., was arrested at the corner of Fairlie and Luckie streets Saturday afternoon by Sterling Gresham, chief operative of the Store Mutual Protective Association.

Gresham stated to reporters that Byrd was wanted on several forgery counts in which approximately a dozen local department stores had been swindled on checks of from $20 to $50. Byrd was held under a charge of suspicion.

During the afternoon, Gresham, working with E. B. Clark, another operative, arrested Mrs. L. T. Maye, 56, of 4504 Fourth street, Washington, D. C., in a downtown store. She is alleged to have had about $100 worth of stolen goods on her person. She was released under a $300 bond on a charge of larceny. The officers stated that there was no connection between the two Saturday arrests.

U. S. Army Air Corps Sets World Record

MATHER FIELD, SACRAMENTO, April 12—(AP)—The United States army air corps set a new world's record for altitude combat formation flying today when 19 planes of the 95th pursuit squadron reached a height estimated at 30,000 feet. The previous record w[illegible]00 feet.

The fliers said that at an altitude of about 26,000 feet they experienced difficulty in maintaining formation and that when they tried to maneuver in compliance with orders from their leader their planes "slipped."

Above this altitude, they said, about all each pilot could do was to keep the nose of his ship climbing and select his own path.

The pilots wore fur-lined clothing weighing 50 pounds. Their faces were covered by especially designed leather masks through which was a tube leading from the oxygen tanks. Radio head sets were built into the helmet worn by the flight leaders.

The three flight leaders under Captain Elmendorf were Lieutenants A. I. Woodring, Joseph Hopkins and K. J. Gregg. The pursuit squadron is regularly stationed at Rockwell field, San Diego.

Alfonso Dedicates Spanish University

MADRID, April 12.—(AP)—King Alfonso rode in a "rubberneck" bus today with a group of newspapermen from Spanish-America and had a gay time guiding the visitors over the grounds of University City, the great group of educational buildings under construction here.

The king tramped over the grounds, watched American steam shovels gouging out hillsides for college buildings, chatted with delighted laborers and for one of the few times in his life made a public speech. He usually speaks only on state occasions, and then rarely.

Alfonso expressed pleasure that the great newspapers of all the Spanish-speaking countries had sent representatives to the inauguration of the "Palacio de la Prensa" (palace of the press, which has been opened as a museum of journalism), and said the university hoped to combine the most desirable features of the world's great schools.

University City is a monument to the king. On the twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession the Spanish people proposed a popular subscription for a monument to him, but the king suggested that the money go into something that would benefit the public rather than a statue.

Ten-Year- Old Boy Slays Chum, Eleven

CANTON, Ohio, April 12.—(AP)—John Routz, 11, is dead tonight and his 10-year-old playmate has been taken by the police, after a street fight among five boys over a chocolate Easter bunny.

John was shot through the abdomen. He went to the home of Charles Christeen, 10, after the fight and tried to push open the door, police were told. Young Christeen, police said, had prepared himself with a gun and fired as his play-fellow came through the door.

The Routz boy, according to the story furnished police, disputed the Christeen boy's ownership of the chocolate bunny. They fought for it and other boys joined in the fray. Christeen was beaten and he went home and got a gun. His playmates said. Routz followed him to end the argument and met his death.

Representative William E. Hull, republican, Illinois, who with the chairman, spent an hour in the executive offices, said they expected the house to pass the bill next Wednesday.

Pearman's Widow Claims 'Plot' Land

TEXARKANA, Ark., April 12.—(AP)—Claims to approximately 3,100 acres of land in Miller county which figured prominently in the "Folta-Pearman murder" mystery and a confessed insurance plot, were entered in Miller county circuit court today by Mrs. Maude A. Pearman, widow of William R. Pearman, and two children, Robert A. and Jalie.

The suit was based on a warranty deed executed January 6, 1930, by Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Bass, of Columbia, Mo., to "William Folta," conveying the property subject to $111,000 mortgage. Bass is held in jail at Bentonville, Ark., on murder charges in connection with the death of Pearman, who had posed as "William Folta."

The claims of Mrs. Pearman and her children ask that Pearman and Folta be declared "one and the same person" and the "cloud" on the title existing by reason of the use of the name "Folta" be removed by decree.

Though the complaint suggests this is the only "cloud" on the title of the land records show that Pearman, alias Folta, later executed a mortgage on all property in Bass' name and acknowledged himself indebted to Bass in the sum of $112,000, evidenced by four promissory notes.

It was in execution of this deed of trust that $200,000 insurance was taken on Pearman's life and assigned to Bass as collateral in what Bass has confessed was a plot to swindle the insurance company. He has signed a release from the insurance. The land is located about eight miles southwest of Garland City, in the Red river bottoms.

Power Company Pays $8,719,053 Salaries Yearly

In order to provide the services furnished by the Georgia Power Company and its subsidiary companies, 5,532 employes were required in the year 1929.

The payroll, all of it for citizens of Georgia, totaled $8,719,053.

The company bought during the year 1929 from Georgia merchants and dealers supplies and materials costing approximately seven million dollars, while several million dollars were expended for new facilities.

These facts are brought out in the annual operating report for 1929 submitted to the board of directors of the company.

The report also brings out the fact that at the end of the year the Georgia Power Company and its subsidiaires, the Columbus Electric & Power Company and South Georgia Power Company, served retail 304 cities and towns with 143,140 customers and sold physical power wholesale to 53 communities with 26,505 customers. The combined area of the territory served was listed as approximately 47,185 miles, having a population of 2,170,000.

The street railways of Atlanta, Augusta, Macon, Athens and Rome carried during the year 1929, 99,405,684 passengers, approximately the same number carried in 1928.

"The service over the entire system has greatly improved," say the report, "and in the Atlanta metropolitan district interruptions were only one-fourth as many as in 1928.

Progress was made in the extension of electric service to farms, 45 rural lines serving 1,170 customers being placed in operation during the year.

TWELVE UNIDENTIFIED AFTER WRECK OF BUS

Bodies So Badly Mangled Task of Naming Victims Seems Hopeless.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 12. (AP)—Bodies of 12 of the 19 persons killed yesterday when a fast Santa Fe mail train demolished a Pickwick Greyhound motor bus at Isleta, near here, remained unidentified today.

So mangled were the bodies that identification by letters, baggage and bus tickets was the only possible method open, and in some cases it was fruitless, since officials had no way of determining ownership of the torn clothing and the wrecked and partially burned luggage.

Another discrepancy developed in the death list today when authorities were advised that Alice Stanglan, listed as dead, is alive in California. Her father, Richard Childers, of Artesia, Cal., was killed, and Mrs. Stanglan's name was taken from letters found among the wreckage.

Somewhere among the bodies is a mother, father or custodian of two unidentified babies. While telegrams have been pouring into Albuquerque from relatives of the dead and from those who believed their relatives might have been killed, not a single wire inquired about the babies.

COMMITTEE MAY STOP PARKER NOMINATION

Open Opposition to Judge Divulged; Negroes Fight Carolinian.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(UN) Opposition to the confirmation of John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as associate justice of the supreme court reached such proportions today that there was open speculation over the fate of the nomination in the senate judiciary committee which will consider it Monday.

The first outright announcement of opposition to the nomination came today from Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, a member of the committee. Other senators are known to oppose Parker's confirmation, but Ashurst is the first senator to announce his stand definitely.

The Arizona senator did not reveal his objection to the North Carolina jurst, but he has been studying Parker's decisions in the cases to which organized labor has objected.

The sub-committee which investigated the nomination will submit a favorable report on it to the full judiciary committee Monday. The sub-committee report, however, will be divided. Senators Overman, democrat, North Carolina, and Herbert, republican, Rhode Island, favor Parker's confirmation but it is understood Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, third member of the sub-committee, will oppose it.

It had been generally believed the Parker nomination would be approved by a comfortable majority in the judiciary committee, but Ashurst's announcement has cast some doubt on the outcome.

An adverse report by the committee would carry weight with the senate, though such reports are not always followed and there is no indication there are enough votes to defeat confirmation.

It was believed Ashurst and Borah would be joined in the committee by Chairman Norris, republican, Nebraska; Senator Blaine, republican, Wisconsin; Senator Robinson, republican, Indiana, and perhaps others.

Republican senate leaders frankly were worried by the situation. They sought to get President Hoover to withdraw the nomination but it was reiterated at the White House today the president will not do so. The labor protests against Parker do not worry them as much as the fight being waged against him by the association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Republican senators from states in which the negro vote is a real factor are faced by an embarrassing situation in the Parker case. It was because of this that the president's friends in the senate tried to get him to withdraw the nomination.

BROTHER TO CONTEST OESTERREICH WILL

Claims Fraud in Document Leaving Million to Unfaithful Wife.

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—(AP)—John L. Oesterreich, Pasadena, Cal., real estate broker and brother of Fred Oesterreich, slain eight years ago, entered an already ramified case today with the announcement that he will contest the will of his brother. Meanwhile, Otto Sanhuber, 36-year-old sewing machine mechanic, janitor and erstwhile denizen of attic cubby holes, waits in the county jail for arraignment Monday on charges of murdering the former Milwaukee manufacturer.

John Oesterreich announced that he and his brother, Willian, and their sister, Mrs. P. C. Tietz, both of Chicago, had engaged an attorney to contest the will which he asserted left all the slain man's estate to his widow, Walburga Oesterreich.

The Pasadena broker professed knowledge of a final will made by his brother which disposed of an estate of approximately $1,000,000 and bequeathed $50,000 each to himself, his brother and their sister. Harry Voss, manager of the manufacturer's Milwaukee factory, and the Christian Science church, also were beneficiaries to the extent of $50,000, according to Oesterreich, who added that Voss had seen the will among his employers' papers in Milwaukee.

Mrs. Oesterreich is scheduled to appear before the county grand jury Monday for questioning regarding the killing and other angles of the case. While Sanhuber's confession exonerated her of any blame for the shooting, the woman has refused to discuss the case with the district attorney. The prosecutor's office has threatened that "more than one indictment might be returned," unless she talks.

Sanhuber's confession of the slaying and his subsequent testimony before the grand jury told of living in tiny attic compartments in the Fred Oesterreich homes over a period of 18 years. He killed Oesterreich, he said, on August 22, 1922, because he heard him quarreling with his wife and thought she was being hurt. It was his love for the wife of his one-time employer, he asserted, that caused him to live in the dingy compartments.

Although the charge against Sanhuber calls for the death penalty, he is expected to be permitted to plead guilty to second degree murder and be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Delta Sigma Delta To Honor Byrnes

Theta Theta Chapter of Delta Sigma Delta dental fraternity gave a banquet last evening at 6:30 o'clock in the Georgia ballroom at the Henry Grady hotel, in honor of Dr. Ralph R. Byrnes, supreme grand master of the fraternity. Some 75 members were present, including chapter members and alumni.

Several interesting talks were made on this occasion. Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, principal speaker of the evening, and one of the leading Delta Sigs throughout the realm of the fraternity, spoke in praise of Dr. Byrnes as supreme grand master and of his pronounced ability to fill this office, the highest in the fraternity. Dr. Byrnes is considered one of the most popular Delta Sigs who has ever held the office of supreme grand master. Not only is he extremely popular in his fraternity, but he is recognized both nationally and internationally as a leader in his profession. His ability as a great dental educator may be verified by the fact that he is executive dean at the Atlanta Southern Dental College.

Among the other speakers were Dr. Norman C. Poer, deputy of the local chapter, and Dr. Thomas B. Sharp, assistant deputy. Dr. Poer has for the past two years been a most popular deputy and loyal supporter of the chapter. Dr. Sharp, recently appointed assistant deputy, is also popular among the boys, and the members of the chapter feel grateful in having such capable deputies.

The occasion of this banquet served as home-coming day for Theta Theta Chapter for this year. At a recent meeting a definite date was passed on and adopted by the chapter for the annual home-coming day. This date will be the Friday just before Easter, at which time there will be given a banquet in the early evening, and following this will be the annual senior dance.

Miss Riley To Tell Of Atlanta's Operas

Appreciation and enjoyment of the operas to be presented in the approaching Atlanta season will be enhanced by hearing the discussions of these operas over the radio within the next two weeks.

Miss Helen Coyne Riley, representative in the south of the Juillard Foundation, established to bring about a greater appreciation of music, has consented to give a series of four broadcasts over WSB on the Atlanta operas.

These will not be the usual "operalogues," giving the plots and stories, but rather a discussion of the musical themes. They will be brief, and illustrated by Miss Riley's playing of the themes. She is a widely known pianist and student of music.

Miss Riley's "Music Appreciation" broadcasts over WSB are scheduled as follows:

Wednesday, April 16, 3:30 to 4 p. m., "Trovatore," to be presented on Friday night of the Atlanta season.

Saturday, April 19, 7:15 to 7:30 p. m., "La Boheme," the Puccini opera to be given as the Saturday matinee, May 3.

Wednesday, April 23, 1:30 to 2 p. m., "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the operas to be given on Saturday night, May 3.

Saturday, April 26, 7 to 7:30 p. m., "Louise," the new French opera of Gustave Charpentier which will open the Atlanta season on May 1.

Negro Republicans Carry 97 Counties

Practically incomplete returns including 151 counties in which republican meetings were held April 5, show 97 counties will send negro delegations and 54, white delegations to the republican state convention, Ben Davis, publisher of the Atlanta Independent and former republican national committeeman, announced Saturday.

The returns show 119 negro delegates and 78 white, Davis stated. Ten counties have not yet been heard from.

Thirty of the elections will be contested, it was said, proceedings having already been instituted in 29 counties by whites against negroes, and in one county, Chatham, by negroes against negroes.

CORPSE OF GIRL IS FOUND HIDDEN IN U. S. CEMETERY

No Clue Left By Murderer Who Is Thought To Have Attacked Girl Early in Night.

CAR DESERTED MILE FROM BODY

Evidence Shows Young Stenographer Fought Assailant Until She Was Shot Through Head.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(UN) Military and local police joined tonight in a hunt for the murderer of Miss Mary Baker, attractive young employe of the navy department who was shot through the head and her boddy hidden under a culvert adjoining the east wall of Arlington national cemetery.

Her automobile, with blood-soaked seat, was found about a mile from her body.

The Arlington county coroner announced after an examination that Miss Baker, who was the daughter of an Oak Grove, Va., Episcopal minister, had been criminally assaulted. Police established that she also was robbed.

Justice department agents, called in by Sheriff Howard Fields, of Arlington county, together with homicide experts of the Washington, D. C., police department, assigned a squad of men to guard Miss Baker's home while they questioned two young women with whom she lived and a man, believed to have been a friend of the slain woman. A search for a man was begun on the basis of the investigation.

The coroner also found powder burns on the side of Miss Baker's face and finger prints on her throat, indicating she had been strangled before being shot. A broken parasol, said to have been carried by the murdered woman, was found a few yards away from her bloody automobile and police believed this indicated she had attempted to fight off her assailants. She had been shot three times.

Miss Baker and a girl friend attended Lenten services late yesterday afternoon but she never reached home. The murder apparently occurred during the night.

The body was hidden in the ditch under the culvert and was not found until after noon today as a result of a search started when Deputy Sheriff A. A. Richards, of Arlington county, discovered the bloody automobile about daylight.

Miss Baker was described by girl employes at the navy department as a charming girl 27 years old, slender and blonde. She formerly lived in the Evangeline hotel here and 10 days ago moved to a cottage in Lyon Park, a suburb, where she lived with two girl friends.

Miss Baker was at work yesterday. She left to attend services at the Epiphany church. She was driving her Ford sedan.

After church services she was to have met her roommate.

Sheriff Howard Fields, of Arlington county, said he had no clews as to the murderer or to the reason for the shooting.

Military police from Fort Myer were called to patrol the highway in the section where the body was found, as it is a part of the Fort Myer reservation.

Miss Baker apparently had been assailed while driving along the secluded road near the cemetery.

The murderer, it appeared, then drove along the right side of the road near the culvert, where the body lay in about a half foot of running water.

After throwing the body out, police believe the murderer drove to within 300 yards of the south entrance of the famous old cemetery, abandoned the automobile and boarded a bus or hitch-hiked in to Washington, about three miles away.

Two Men Arrested In Taxicab Robbery

Two young white men were arrested late Saturday night and faced with charges of holding up a taxi driver on the Howell Mill road, near the water works, Friday night and, according to Detectives Roy Whatley and B. E. Blair who arrested them, they are alleged to have admitted their crime.

The two gave their names as Clyde Griswell, 20, of 240 Gibson street, and P. M. Fowler, 22, of 439 Pulliam street. They were arrested at the latter address. They were subsequently identified by J. D. Bryant, of 829 Virgil street, the taxi driver whom they are alleged to have robbed.

Both men were held under a blanket charge of suspicion Saturday night.

STATE ASPIRANTS PLAN CAMPAIGNS

Candidates for Offices Begin To Bob Up as Rules Are Formulated.

Representatives Pay Little Heed to W. C. T. U. Officers' Request; Desire Harmony Most of All

BY FRANCIS W. CLARKE.

Following the formulating of the rules and regulations for this year's democratic state primary by the state committee at its meeting in Atlanta Friday, candidates for state house offices began to bob up all over the state and it is certain that the campaign will soon be in full swing.

Many of those who have been mentioned in connection with various offices in the capitol have been withh lding formal announcement pending the meeting of the state committee and the decision of the governor in the matter of calling an extra session of the general assembly. Now that the uncertainties which existed before the committee met and before the governor indicated that he would call the legislature together, have been cleared away, a steady stream of announcements may be expected, with the candidates starting out in earnest in the effort to corral votes.

Formal announcements for governor by George H. Carswell, secretary of state, and John N. Holder, former chairman of the highwa board, may be expected within a week or ten days, according to statements made Saturday from authentic sources. This would put five candidates actively in the race, Richard B. Russell, Jr., speaker of the house of representatives, having already formally announced, and James A. Perry, chairman of the public service commission, and former Senator E. D. Rivers some time ago having let it be known that they would make the race, although they have not as yet formally announced.

Perry to Speak.

Mr. Perry announced Saturday that he had accepted an invitation to address a gathering of voters of Meriwether, Taylor, Harris and Upson counties at Woodland on Saturday at 7 p. m. and that at that time he would go fully into the presentation of the policies on which he will make his race.

This would leave G. Ed Maddox, chairman of the state executive committee, as the only one of the persistently mentioned candidates not to have made known his decision. Judge R. C. Bell, of the court of appeals, and Edgar Dunlap, of Gainesville, former head of the American Legion in Georgia, have been urged to enter the race, but it is thought now that announcements from them are improbable.

Mr. Maddox has studiously refrained from expressing his intention and his closest political friends in the state declare they are in the dark as to what he will decide to do.

Even if he should decide not to offer, however, a hotly contested race may be expected from the five it is now considered almost certain will pay their entrance fees. Each of the five have statewide followings and it is practically certain that most of them will stress somewhat widely divergent policies in making their races. While the platforms of the respective candidates will undoubtedly be similar in covering all of the questions now before the people, the individual candidates will undoubtedly lay particular emphasis on certain planks, thus giving the voters an opportunity to pick their favorite not only on the basis of the candidate himself, but with due consideration of policies.

Effect of Extra Session.

There can be no question that the call for an extra session of the legislature will complicate matters considerably so far as the candidates for governor are concerned. The reworking of the state's finances and the reorganization of the state government both hold many danger spots for those seeking the place of chief executive.

All the candidates for governor will undoubtedly be called upon by the voters to express themselves on the tax deliberations of the general assembly, which will might well put a candidate in the position of having to choose between plans advocated by opposing members of the legislature but who are supporting him. He would thus be confronted with the serious danger of losing some of his support because of a clash with the views of one side or the other.

Probably more acute would be the situation facing the candidates in the matter of the reorganization of the state government, by reducing the number of departments and the cutting off of overlapping employes. Unquestionably considerable saving to the state could be effected by consolidation of departments, but it is also certain that if a candidate too openly favors it he will surely stir up opposition from his own ranks. Practically every one of the departments which would be effected by the proposed reorganization have considerable staffs of traveling representatives, who naturally would not favor the election as governor of a man pledged to an effort which might deprive them of their jobs.

Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of schools, was the first candidate to qualify for the democratic

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Declining to lend themselves to any program which may have the effect of promoting discord in democratic ranks on the eve of a national congressional campaign, members of the Georgia congressional group, almost without exception, have turned an emphatic thumbs-down on the request made this week by State W. C. T. U. officials that they join in demands for the resignation of Chairman John J. Raskob, of the democratic national committee.

If certain elements in the party, led by Senator Furnifold M. Simmons, of North Carolina, and Senator Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, are bent on stirring up strife in an effort to save their political scalps this year, they will find no aid and comfort in Georgia—at least so far as an overwhelming majority of the state congressional group is concerned.

Members Unconcerned.

Both Senator Simmons and Senator Heflin are up for re-election this year, and both are having the fight of their lives to continue in office. They have generally been credited with being the horns and tail of a movement to revive the issues of 1928 by leading an attack on Mr. Raskob, whose open affiliation with a national prohibition modification organization unfits him for further service as the official head of the party, Senators Simmons and Heflin charge.

It should be said just here that no member of the Georgia delegation is concerning himself personally with the fight of either Simmons or Heflin. They take the view that it is none of their affair and they are carefully refraining from making any expression, public or private, that may figure in the North Carolina and Alabama campaigns.

But the delegation is practically unanimous in opposing any program, whatever its source, that has as its objective a split in democratic ranks at a time when the nation is preparing to elect an entire new congress and a third of the membership of the senate. Moreover, at a time when democratic prospects loom exceedingly bright. It is not at all unlikely that the minority party will capture control of the house next November while it is certain to make substantial gains in both branches.

Foolish to Fight.

In the face of these prospects, individual members of the state group take what is regarded as the quite sensible view that it would be nothing short of foolhardiness to precipitate a fight on Mr. Raskob because he happens to hold liberal views on the much agitated prohibition question.

It does not matter to them that they are drys, to the last one of them. It is realized that any move to draw an inter-party line on the prohibition issue would result in marked division in the ranks of the party, working to the injury of candidates in both sections, to some degree.

The letter of this week to each member of the delegation was signed by Mrs. Marvin Williams, as president, and four other state officers of the Woman's Temperance body. It asked that they follow the lead of former Secretary of the Navy Daniels, of North Carolina, and demand the immediate resignation of Chairman Raskob, who was quoted in the letter as making some remark about the election of dry democrats which he later denied emphatically during his appearance before the lobby investigating committee.

Called By Republican.

Mr. Raskob was called before the committee by Senator Arthur Robinson, republican, of Indiana, for the obvious reason of trying to develop something that would obscure the charges and attacks being made on Chairman Huston, of the republican national committee, who had gotten into deep water in his earlier testimony regarding Muscle Shoals.

The democratic chairman's appearance did not develop any new evidence of his prohibition modification activities, yet it was followed shortly by demands for his resignation by both Simmons and Heflin. The Georgia W. C. T. U. letter found its way to Washington about the same time.

Since then it has become manifest that the Simmons-Heflin revolt program has all but collapsed. Democrats of both houses have frowned on it in a way that makes it difficult for either of them to pursue it without engendering bitter feelings that may react against their candidacies in the two states. Still, it is not clear that they are yet willing to drop it entirely.

Cox Replies to Letter.

Typical of the replies being sent Mrs. Williams is one written today by Representative Eugene Cox, of the second Georgia district. His letter follows:

"I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication signed by yourself and other officers of the Georgia Women's Christian Temperance Union, urging that I call for the resignation of the present chairman of the democratic national committee.

"Mr. Raskob is chairman of this committee as a result of the action of the party in convention at Houston. I am an organized democrat and concerned in improving the fortunes of my party, because I believe it to be

EFFORT TO REVISE GOVERNMENT SEEN AS TAX MENACE

Fear Expressed That Hardman Will Put State Reorganization Bill Before Extra Session.

The intention of Governor L. G. Hardman to include a bill for the reorganization of the state government in the matters to be laid before the extraordinary session of the state legislature called for May 1, was seen as a certainty in political circles Saturday, when the opinion was advanced that such a bill might prove a stumbling block menacing the success of the taxation program.

The chief executive was absent from the city Saturday, and no further announcements concerning the extra session were made from his office. It was generally understood that a more detailed statement of his legislative program would be made public by the governor this week, probably about Wednesday.

With a substitute for the Boykin income tax bill ruled from speculation pending a decision of the supreme court on its constitutionality, observers at the capitol saw the suggestion of a reduction of exemptions under the gross sales tax law from $30,000 to $3,000 a year as an effort to bolster the revenues of that law to the tax yield expected from it at the time of its adoption by the legislature last summer.

At that time it was thought that the law would bring about $3,500,000. Practical experience with the last quarter of 1929 showed that about $1,300,000 was the most that could be expected from it.

Other possible tax measures suggested by the governor in his call for an extra session were the placing of additional "teeth" in the tax on cigarettes and cigars; and a tax on cosmetics.

Officials at the state capitol and members of the legislature, among whom the inclusion of the reorganization bill in the call of the governor has been a paramount subject of discussion for the past week, see the consolidation scheme as a menace to a constructive program of taxation measures.

"I would support such a bill only after it was proved to me that it would effect, first, a more economical administration of state affairs; second, that it would tend to a more efficient administration, and, third, that it would not cost the place of a single man at the capitol until after the expiration of his present term of office," one member of the legislature asserted.

"I do not believe that a reorganization bill such as the one introduced at the last session would pass," another said. "I could not see my way to support it at the present time."

Four vacancies in the house are to be filled for the extra session. They were created by the deaths of Representatives Fermor Barrett, of Stephens county, Toombs DuBose, of Clarke county, and John Botswick, of Morgan county; and the resignation of Representative Robert C. W. Ramspeck, of DeKalb county, now a member of the national house of representatives.

'Jake' Paralysis Sufferers File $40,000 Suits

Forty thousand dollars in damages for paralysis alleged to have been caused by the drinking of Jamaica ginger are sought in petitions filed Saturday in Fulton superior court by two plaintiffs, James M. Spence, 46, and W. T. Carley, 40, both of Troup county.

Spence asks $25,000 damages and Carley seeks $15,000 from Fred H. and Lee Bostwick and the Bostwick Drug Company. The petitioners charge that the Bostwick company manufactured a "fluid extract of ginger" and sold it through retail grocers of Troup county. The petitioners bought some of the ginger extract, recommended on the label as an aid in breaking up a cold, and after drinking it they became paralyzed in feet and hands, the plaintiffs charge.

C. W. Chancellor, also of Troup county, filed a similar suit Thursday against the Bostwicks for $10,000 damages. The three plaintiffs charge that "said 'fluid extract of giner' or 'Jamaica ginger' was but a little better than sheep dip," and that the preparation contained a liberal supply of creosote and carbolic acid. Attorneys E. T. Moon, of LaGrange, and Reuben A. Garland, of Atlanta, filed the petitions.

Ex-Mayor Convicted.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 12.—(AP)—Former Mayor E. B. Jermyn and Harry J. Friend, ex-civil service commissioner, were found guilty of conspiracy in criminal court here today. They were tried on charges that graft was paid to them by heads of a slot machine syndicate which operated in an open-handed manner in this city for many months during the Jermyn administration.

WORST LOBBY LAID TO SHOALS BIDDER

LaGuardia Promises Record Scandal If Cyanamid Company Offer Is Revived.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Efforts of the American Cynamid Corporation to lease Muscle Shoals were denounced today by Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, who predicted that an attempt to revive the company's proposal for operation of the Alabama project would result in "the biggest national scandal ever broken in Washington."

The house military affairs committee has before it two bills to dispose of the project, one the Norris resolution to provide for governmental operation, already adopted by the senate, and the other the Wright bill to lease the property to the Cynamid Company for 50 years. A determined effort has been launched by southern members of the committee to force early action on the senate measure.

The New Yorker said the senate lobby committee, which in recent weeks has taken voluminous testimony concerning Muscle Shoals lobbying activities, "has not scratched the surface of the efforts of the Cynamid Corporation to jam their bill through congress."

After recalling efforts in the last congress to obtain approval of the Cynamid bid for the project, LaGuardia said if there is "any attempt to revive the Cynamid bill, I predict it will be the biggest national scandal ever broken in Washington, and will be so far reaching that it will affect both political parties."

"I have certain information in my own files which might be described as rather risque. In addition, I intend to ask John M. Morin, of Pittsburgh, former chairman of the house military affairs committee, to turn over to me his files from previous congresses. Mr. Morin consistently opposed the Cynamid's proposition, and his files should contain information interesting in the extreme."

Asserting that the Cynamid company had exerted tremendous "pressure" on members of the last congress, the New Yorker said "lobbying activities included every bit and kind of lobbying that is often told in fiction.

"There wasn't a thing with which men may be tempted that wasn't invoked to make friends for their bill." He added, "even persons of doubtful reputation were sent to Washington to see members of congress. Parties galore and entertainment unstinted."

Thousands of investors have been induced to buy land at Muscle Shoals, he said, and now are being "canvassed and told their investments depend on the Cynamid bid going through."

'REDS' TO RETURN FOR TRIAL HERE

Powers and Carr Will Be on Hand April 21, Attorneys Announce.

Although still at liberty and the objects of a nation-wide search after having been indicted on charges which are not bailable under the laws of Georgia, M. H. Powers, organizer for the communist party, and J. C. Carr, organizer for the Young Communist League, will be in Atlanta on April 21 when the indictments found by a grand jury are set for trial in Fulton superior court, their attorneys announced Saturday.

Paul Pullman, national representative of the International Labor Defense, an organization affiliating with the communists, arrived in Atlanta Saturday and held a conference with O. C. Hancock, who represents Powers and Carr. Hancock said that his clients were ready for trial.

The young communist organizers came to Atlanta about two months ago and figured in a small sized teargas bombing of a meeting place on Auburn avenue. They were arrested on charges of "unlawful assembly" and "throwing tear gas bombs" by the police and held for the city court under bonds of $1,500 each, which they posted through a surety company.

Meantime Solicitor-General John A. Boykin investigated activities of the communists in Atlanta and sent indictments to the grand jury charging them with "inciting to insurrection," a crime for which the code prescribes the death penalty, and of "circulating insurrectionary papers."

Fulton county officers have been unable to locate them since the grand jury returned the indictments.

"The International Labor Defense," Pullman said Saturday, "is an organization seeking to defend the interests of the working class and its leaders from the attacks centered on it by the police and capitalistic courts and is in Georgia to defend and seek the release of Powers and Carr."

Rev. Rembert Smith Announces He Will Demand Probe Into Activities in 1928 Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Ga., April 12.—Declaring that the political activities in 1928 of four Methodist bishops in support of Herbert Hoover "were a violation of the rights of the church and especially of the rights of the members who were democrats," Rev. Rembert Smith, pastor of the M. E. church, South, here today announced that he would prefer charges against the group when the general conference meets at Dallas in May.

"The bishops are amenable to the general conference of the church," Rev. Smith said, "and they will face the responsibility put upon it by the political activities in behalf of the republican party and Candidate Herbert Hoover by Bishops James Cannon, Jr., of Washington, D. C.; E. D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, N. C.; H. M. DuBose, of Nashville, Tenn., and J. M. Moore, of Dallas, Texas. The approaching general conference must either approve or disapprove the unprecedented political activities of these bishops."

"The charges which I intend to submit to the general conference," Rev. Smith said, "will include an attack only upon the political activities of the four bishops which I consider to have been contrary to the traditions, the ideals and the laws of the church. No criticism whatsoever of the personal character or the customary efficient and distinguished services of these bishops will be expressed in the brief which I shall submit. My primary purpose is that the confusion created by the political activities of 1928 may be cleared away and that the pathway for the future progress of the church may be pointed out with all possible distinctness."

"Bishops Cannon, Mouzon, Moore and DuBose claim that the general conferences, in their recent deliverances about prohibition, gave them warrant and even direction to go into personal and party politics," Dr. Smith pointed out. "While the resolutions of the general conferences have been strongly in favor of prohibition they have not included any instructions or permission to the general superintendents of the church, as such, to support any particular party or any individual political candidate. If these instructions pointed to any party they did not point to the republican party or the democratic party, neither of which has ever been or is now 100 per cent prohibition. Neither of the major parties has ever approved in its platform the principle of prohibition.

"The prohibition party is the only party in the nation which is altogether dry. The general conferences did not direct the bishops of the church to support any party at all and the deliverances of the general conference in 1922 and in 1926 upon which the four bishops rely as directing them to support Candidate Hoover and the republican party are strained beyond recognition by the interpretation placed upon them by these four bishops.

Support Not Required.

"They would have been strained if they had been construed to mean the bishops of the church, as such, should support the candidate of the prohibition party, but this misinterpretation would have been quite small when compared with the far-fetched conclusion of the four bishops that these resolutions of the general conferences of 1922 and 1926 required them to support Candidate Hoover, who had no record as an aggressive dry and the republican party which had a record of nugatory negligence under the administration of the prohibition enforcement program of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon for eight years.

"If the general conferences of 1922 and 1926 had directed such political activities as the four bishops engaged in these general conferences, themselves, would have violated the constitution of the church in which the episcopacity is clearly defined and delimited. The episcopacy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under its constitutional charter which has existed since 1846, is not political and this charter itself cannot be changed without the permission of every annual conference in the church.

Legality of Activities.

"Political activities are possible to the bishops only when episcopacy has been done away, and no general conference can legally direct bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to support particular candidates or parties, to make stump speeches, to give out political messages, to organize mush-room political movements, to send questionaries to preachers or laymen as to how they will vote, to accept expense money from political committees or to spend the time required for their episcopal labors in political activities. The inherent nature of Methodist's episcopacy as determined by the plans of John Wesley, by the ordination vows of Coke and Asbury in 1784, by the charter of episcopacy fixed upon in the first delegated general conference in 1812, together demonstrate the non-political character of the office of a bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"If the general conference had directed and the charter of the episcopacy had been permitted in general, political activities on the part of the

ORATORY FINALS WILL TAKE PLACE HERE SATURDAY

Speakers Will Compete for Georgia Honors in House of Representatives.

Under the sponsorship of The Constitution, nine contestants from as many Georgia districts will compete at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon for the honor of representing this state in the national semi-finals. Five boys and four girls have won the opportunity to try for the zone contest.

Judges of the oratorical powers of the contestants will be three men of state-wide acquaintance, known for their fairness and good judgment. Their names will be announced within the next few days. Upon the decision of the judges will rest the award of a gold first prize of $100 to the state winner, and a gold second prize of $20. Each district winner will receive $15 in gold.

Contestants Asked to Report.

Contestants are requested to call at the desk of the city editor of The Constitution, on the fourth floor of the Constitution building, at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning or as soon thereafter as their train arrives. Contestants and those accompanying them will be guests of The Constitution at luncheon in the Cave of the Ansley hotel at 12:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Dr. J. S. Stewart, of Athens, Georgia manager of the national contest, will act as host for The Constitution, and will meet the contestants at the office of this newspaper, where they will be made thoroughly at home. As soon as all of the contestants have arrived, pictures will be made, and the party will go to the Ansley.

The list of contestants and their prepared subjects follows:

After the final contestant has talked on the prepared subjects, the extempore addresses will begin. Contestants will be rated on both addresses. The extempore addresses are to be limited to four minutes each, and will deal with particular phases of the general subjects chosen for the prepared addresses.

Winners of the zone contests will be given a free trip to Europe as well as an opportunity of competing in the national finals at Washington, D. C. The Georgia candidate will compete in the zone finals at Pittsburgh. The winner of the national championship will receive a handsome silver loving cup and the right to compete in the international finals. Winner of the international finals will receive a valuable trophy.

Two Women Slain In Country Home

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 12.—(UN)—Three shots rang out from a small house at Frog Level this afternoon. G. P. Bailey, farm hand, rushed out. Neighbors, entering, found the bodies of Mrs. Grace Aultum, 27, and her sister, Mrs. Lodie Harrington.

Both had been shot.

Bailey, 42, was arrested by county officers a few miles from the scene a short time later. Deputies said he had been drinking.

He had been "keeping company" with Mrs. Harrington, who has been divorced. Mrs. Aultum's children, Cecil, 7, and Ruth, 2, were playing in an adjoining yard when the shots were fired.

Neighbors found Mrs. Aultum lying dead on the floor, a bullet hole in her head. Mrs. Harrington was found on her bed, in a pool of blood, in an adjoining room.

When Bailey dashed out of the house neighbors said he was wearing Mrs. Aultum's coat, which he discarded, and then leaped into his automobile.

SHERIFF OFFERS SEIZED PROPERTY TO HIGH BIDDER

Attorney Says Drastic Action Was Taken To Prevent Any "Conference" and Stop Delay.

TREASURER, NOT LAWYER, MUST ACT

County Holds Taxation Just and Reasonable, As No Protest Has Been Filed Against Levy.

SEBRING, Fla., April 12.—(AP)—Atlantic Coast Line passenger train No. 191 was seized here late today by Sheriff Oscar Wolff in an attachment order issued by State Comptroller Ernest Amos against the railroad for delinquent taxes. There were no passengers aboard.

The sheriff first expected to attach the carrier at Avon Park, but waited until it arrived here because the United States mail contract did not run out until the train arrived in Sebring.

Officers said the attachment of the train as it reached its terminus here also would prevent train No. 192 from going north tomorrow morning, as train No. 191 today would have been No. 192 northbound tomorrow.

Three locomotives of the railroad also were attached late today by the sheriff.

Officials were faced with the prospect of attaching a total of five trains, one fruit extra, two freight and two passenger.

County Attorney Lee said he had given the railroad 48 hours to satisfy the county that it would pay the taxes, but that he had received no word in reply and that the matter had been referred to the general counsel of the railroad instead of the treasurer, because, he said, he feared the whole thing might be tied up in long litigation, he took quick action to prevent such a procedure.

The three other locomotives of the railroad, the only engines in the county, were seized with miscellaneous freight cars, motor cars and other equipment.

The county attorney indicated that if the taxes are not paid quickly it would affect the financing of the school system of Highlands county for the next school term.

Declaring they do not plan to interfere with the movement of the mails, officials tonight allowed the northbound train from Clewiston to Haines City to proceed without molestation. This train carries mail and the officials said they did not intend to "get mixed up in government business."

Just before the seizure of the passenger train No. 191 a fruit train passed through Avon Park without stopping, although the officers had been lying in wait for it. The sheriff said he had planned earlier not to seize passenger trains, but when a freight failed to stop he decided to attach No. 191 as soon as it discharged its mail here.

Earlier in the day the sheriff had seized the Coast Line right of way and track. The papers were served on W. W. McFarland, the railroad's agent, and listed beside the trackage the tool houses, section houses and depot.

County Attorney J. M. Lee and the sheriff were at the depot and announced they were ready to hold for sale to the highest and best bidder for taxes all trains as they arrive. The back taxes, the county attorney said, amounted to approximately $40,000, delinquent since last April 1.

A telegraphic suggestion from Attorney-General Fred Davis that levy for sale for taxes be delayed a few days "pending possible settlement," as the matter of adjustment of the taxes was subject of negotiations, arrived after the county attorney had directed the sheriff to levy and Colonel Lee declined to interfere.

In announcing his inability to halt proceedings already initiated, the county attorney stated, "Highlands county is not interested in negotiating for a 'possible settlement.' The only thing we are interested in is the payment of taxes. They are past due, were honestly levied, were not questioned by the railroad, which we are informed has merely joined or is planning to join a taxpayers' strike which is a blow at the foundations of the commonwealth.

"We happen to be in position to collect these taxes and we are going to do it if there is any law in Florida. I can't afford to permit myself to be jockeyed into a further delay that would permit the railroads to bring up legal technicalities to throw the matter into the courts for endless litigation which would be fatal to our plans for financing our school term at this time.

"The Seaboard Air Line has paid its taxes and the majority of our taxpayers have paid or are arranging to pay.

"I have advised the railroad officials that we will halt proceedings the moment they assure us they will pay their just taxes and pay them in time to permit our schools to finish this term. But if their plan is to fight the payment of taxes and jeopardize the best interests of our county and our school children, then I

FLORIDA FLOOD MENACE MAY BE FORESTALLED

Engineers See Prevention of Disasters With Aid of Government.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Should congress approve authorization of $4,066,000 for levee construction around Lake Okeechobee, now placed in the general rivers and harbors bill, the federal government will move to prevent recurrence of the disastrous 1928 storm and flood damage, following a program originally recommended by local engineers.

While a total federal contribution of $4,666,000 was recommended by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, the house committee drafting the bill was forced to curtail expenditures wherever possible and the Okeechobee authorization was reduced by $600,000. This will result in levees three feet lower than suggested by the board engineers, but coinciding with recommendations of local interests and army district engineers.

Under present legislation, state and local interests will have to contribute greater amounts to construction of flood control works. Specific recommendation of board engineers called for $3,812,000 contributed by state toward building of federal improvements and construction of north shore levee at cost of $1,214,000.

"About 2,000 lives were lost in the 1928 hurricane," Major-General Brown, chief of army engineers, reported. "No one can foretell when a similar hurricane may occur in the future. Protection must be designed for the extraordinary and unexpected. Safety of lives of inhabitants, protection of their property and future development of the Everglades depend upon the levees being made high enough and strong enough to be safe against any contingency which can be reasonably anticipated."

Levees to be built, extending along south and north shores of the lake, would be made of muck and earth, excavated from lake, with rock facing. Removal of the earth from the lake would be counted upon to furnish navigable channel around the south shore of the lake.

Mrs. Owen, who succeeded in securing the adoption of the Lake Okeechobee project by the rivers and harbors committee last night, planned to see President Hoover next Monday to secure administration co-operation for keeping the full amount of authorization in the bill regardless of how severe the scaling down may be found necessary to keep the total near $100,000,000.

Chink Fights Acquittal On Bum Check Charge

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Occidental justice received a lesson in oriental honor today when I. K. Chiang, an 18-year-old Chinese, demanded what he claimed to be his due—just punishment for a wrong-doing.

But occidental laws are occidental laws, for better or for worse, and Chian's oriental philosophy was left to its own devices for expiation. An Evanston court simply refused to allow Chiang to prosecute himself.

Chiang wrote a $6 check, just as he had seen many another man do, and cashed it—with no money in the bank. Informed by the court of his crime, he made restitution, and the merchant who cashed the check withdrew prosecution.

"Honorable judge," pleaded Chiang, "I come from a venerable and honorable family. I demand you punish me some way for the wrong I have done, only liars and scoundrels fear punishment. I am neither."

"Sorry, but the case is dismissed," said the court.

Chiang departed, puzzling in the logic of occidental justice.

Chicago Theaters To Let Deaf 'Hear'

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Three Chicago moving picture theaters, including one in the loop, have advised the Chicago League of the Hard of Hearing that they will install equipment that will enable the 300,000 deaf people in the Chicago area to hear the talkies "talk."

A campaign was started last year among the deaf, calling upon public places to install electrical hearing aids. Several churches already have made such equipment available.

FORMER OIL OFFICIAL HELD IN BAIL DEFAULT

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—(AP)—[illegible] in default of $25,000 bail, Jacob Berman, former Julian Petroleum corporation official, today was in the county jail awaiting trial April 23 on an old indictment charging forgery and embezzlement in connection with the financing which led to the collapse of that company.

Berman was arrested yesterday on an order from Superior Judge Marshall F. McComb, invoking an indictment returned by the grand jury in 1928.

Metropolitan Opera Company To 'Hit Trail' Next Sunday; Stars Will Arrive Here From Richmond Season on May 1

Some of the famous stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company who will appear here during this year's season, opening May 1. At the top are shown, left to right: Beniamino Gigli, famous tenor, in "La Boheme" Saturday matinee; Lucezia Bori, soprano, in title role of "Louise," Thursday night, and Armand Tokatyan, tenor, in "Cavalleria Rusticana," Saturday night. Those at the bottom are Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, in "Trovatore," Friday night, and Editha Fleischer, soprano, as Musetta in "La Boheme," Saturday matinee.

Only a week remains of the most successful season in New York ever enjoyed by the Metropolitan Opera Company, and on next Sunday the long special trains loaded with artists and orchestra folk, ballet girls and chorus, stage hands and scenery, will begin their swing around the circuit of the few American cities which are so fortunate as to be visited by the greatest opera organization in the world.

First Baltimore, then Washington, and then Richmond, for a three-day visit. And on Thursday, May 1, the trains will roll into the Atlanta Terminal station. The Atlanta season is to open that night with the Charpentier opera, "Louise."

A glance at the New York newspapers reveals that the opera season there not only has been one of the most largely attended, but one of the most artistic, even the most captious of music critics praising Mr. Gatti-Casazza, general manager, for the excellence of the productions.

Foremost of his achievements this year, according to the critics, is the production of "Louise," with Bori and Trantoul. The opera was a tremendous favorite ten years ago, with Geraldine Farrar in the title role, and it is by all odds the most popular work in the repertoire of the Paris Grand Opera house. But no such magnificence of stage setting had ever been achieved as that which Joseph Urban provided for the third act of the Metropolitan's production.

Trantoul Astonished.

Mr. Trantoul himself, who had sung the tenor role in Paris, was astonished, as he told reporters, at the scale upon which the Metropolitan Opera Company presents its works. In "Louise," for instance, a cast of nearly 40 principal singers, whose names are featured in the programs, are called upon for the minor parts, and it is probable that the salary roll for a night's performance of this opera is an exceptionally large item.

But the greatest interest shown by out-of-town opera patrons whose reservations have come to the Music Festival Association's office, 84 Broad street, appears to be in "Trovatore," in which Rosa Ponselle and Martinelli will be the principal stars. The ancient Verdi work is an old story to Many Atlantans, but it has never failed to draw a tremendous audience, perhaps because all the world loves a "tune" and "Trovatore" is filled with them. It will be presented on Friday night, May 2.

The Saturday matinee will be "La Boheme," most popular of all Puccini's operas, with Bori and Gigli (his only appearance this season) as the Bohemian lovers, Edith Fleischer as Musetta and De Luca as Marcello.

"Twins" Close Season.

The twin operas, often heard here, will end the season on Saturday night, May 3. They are "Cavalleria Rusticana," in which Leonora Corona, the Dallas (Texas) girl, will sing Santuzza, one of her greatest roles. Armand Tokatyan, the Armenian tenor, will share the honors with her. It will be followed by "Pagliacci," with Lawrence Tibbett in his famous portrayal of Tonio, the clown; Martinelli singing the magnificent "Sob Song" and Queena Mario as Nedda.

The sale of season tickets closed Saturday at the store of the Cable Piano Company. There will be a week's interval for checking sales and cutting the strip sof season tickets into tickets for single performances, and on Monday, April 21, patrons may begin buying seats for the operas of their choice. This sale will continue through the season.

Orders from out-of-town patrons, however, will be received and filled at any time, and should be addressed to the Music Festival Association, 84 Broad street. Special blocks of seats have been reserved from the season sale to be sure of meeting all demands of Atlanta's visitors.

HEAD OF SEABOARD WILL BE IN BOX.

Among the boxholders of the Atlanta season of Metropolitan grand opera, May 1 to 3, will be W. H. Coverdale, of New York, and a party of his friends. Mr. Coverdale succeeded the late S. Davies Warfield as chairman of the board of the Seaboard Air Line railway, and has asked that the box on the right of the Atlanta auditorium which Mr. Warfield occupied so many seasons, be reserved for him this year.

"Mr. Warfield was for years one of the largest subscribers to the opera guarantee fund," said Charles Howard Candler, vice president of the Music Festival Association. "He was a friend of Atlanta and of Atlanta grand opera. Mr. Warfield was an outstanding figure at every season, always bringing a group of eastern friends and entertaining lavishly.

"We are most happy to learn that Mr. Coverdale is to be with us this year, to occupy Mr. Warfield's old box and take part in the life of opera week. We trust that he and his party will like Atlanta as well as his predecessor at the head of the Seaboard."

Senor Antonio Martinez, prominent Havana citizen and music lover, announced here Saturday that a party of 20 or more residents of Havana would come here to attend the annual season of opera. Senor Martinez said that Mayor Miguel Gomez and Mrs. Gomez, said to be one of the most beautiful women in Cuba, might be in the party.

Youths Vindicated For Slaying Man

LAUREL, Miss., April 12.—(AP)—Charges of murder against Claude Owen and Elmo Andrews, youths of Laurel, for the killing last Sunday of W. D. Thompson, of Quitman, today were dropped at a preliminary hearing here for the two.

R. C. Sharborough, justice of the peace, received the testimony and held that the man was killed in a threatening advance on Andrews. Thompson's neck was broken with a fence rail. After the slaying the youths reported immediately to officers.

Spectacular Fire.

YAZOO CITY, Miss., April 12.—(AP)—The Moses Wholesale Grocery Company was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin early today with a loss of approximately $150,000. The fire gained such spectacular headway before being discovered that the large stock of goods went up in smoke in both the two-story brick building and a frame annex. Scores of volunteers were aroused from their beds to aid in checking the blaze.

Mayor Is Indicted On Liquor Charge

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 12.—(AP)—Mayor T. H. Gideon, of Springfield, was indicted today by a United States grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition laws.

Indicted with the mayor were G. C. Pike, former chief of police, now in Leavenworth Federal prison under sentence of a year and a day for another liquor conspiracy; his former assistant chief, H. L. Teaf, and approximately a score of others.

The indictment of Mayor Gideon climaxed more than a year's investigation of charges of corruption in the city administration. Mayor Gideon is charged specifically with giving Cecil Foster, alleged bootlegger also indicted, police protection in the operation of a giant whisky still.

MURDERS, SUICIDES NET EIGHT VICTIMS

HOVEN, S. D., April 12.—(AP)—Three persons, found dead on a farm late last night, evidently were victims of a double murder and a suicide, authorities said today.

The dead:

Joseph G. Miller.

John P. Miller.

Gertrude Mary Miller.

Frank Stait, state's attorney, said he believed John Miller killed his brother and sister and committed suicide. The killings probably occurred last Tuesday or Wednesday as newspapers from April 8 were still in the mail box.

Lack of activity around the farm for the last two days caused an investigation by neighbors.

Stait said he believed John had killed his brother and sister and hanged himself while temporarily insane.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Thomas Campbell, 40, her daughter, Millie, 15, and Andrew Simons, 24, were found dead of gunshot wounds on the Campbell farm, near Hilton Beach, St. Joe island, today.

Provincial police said Simons apparently had killed the mother and her daughter and committed suicide. He lived with his mother on another farm two miles away, and had been courting the Campbell girl, police said, for nearly a year.

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—(AP)—John Fetter, 29, shot and killed his wife, Mildred, 25, probably fatally wounded his four-year-old daughter, Jean, and then fatally shot himself in the head today. Fetter died en route to the hospital where surgeons said the child also would die. Fetter was without a job.

R. A. Henderson, Jr., Heads Florida Bar

ORLANDO, Fla., April 12.—(AP)—R. A. Henderson, Jr., Fort Myers, was unanimously elected president of the Florida State Bar Association at the closing session of the organization's twenty-third annual convention here today.

Fleeting competition to the election of the Fort Myers attorney occurred when John C. Cooper, Jacksonville, was jointly nominated for the office. He subsequently withdrew in favor of his opponent.

Ed R. Bentley, Lakeland, was re-elected secretary and treasurer of the association and W. J. Evans, Miami; T. M. Shackelford, Tampa, and Phillip D. Beall, Pensacola, were chosen to fill the three vacancies in the executive council. Site for the next annual convention was not determined, selection being deferred until the middle of the year when the city will be chosen by the executive council.

TENNESSEE GOVERNOR SEEKING RE-ELECTION

Horton Throws Hat in Ring, Seeking Second Gubernatorial Term.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 12.—(AP)—The democratic primary campaign was definitely under way today following Governor Henry H. Horton's formal announcement last night of his candidacy for a second elective term as governor.

He will oppose L. E. Gwinn, Memphis attorney, in the primary of August 7. Mr. Gwinn will open his campaign with a speaking engagement at Franklin, May 26.

Governor Horton said State Senator W. K. Abernathy, of Selmer, will be his campaign manager and that Senator Abernathy will open headquarters in Andrew Jackson hotel here early next week.

Wife Slayer Tells Police 'He's Sorry'

GREAT FALLS, S. C., April 12.—(AP)—Larry McLeod, 25, killed his wife, Lucille, late last night at their home here by cutting her throat with the small blade of his pocket knife. A short time later, holding the bloody knife in his hand, McLeod told Police Chief J. C. Steel "I am sorry I did it."

Mrs. McLeod, aged 28, was the mother of two small children, one six years and one 13 months old.

Chief of Police Steel said that when he reached the house he found McLeod standing in the street, the knife in his hand.

"I am sorry I did it, but just could not live under what was going on," the officer quoted him as saying.

Mrs. McLeod was formerly Miss Lucille Clipper of Rogersville, Tenn.

Professor Foresees Voyage To Moon About Year 2050

:: PRINCETON SAVANT DESCRIBES LUNAR SHIP ::

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—Dr. John Q. Stewart, associate professor of astronomical physics at Princeton University, believes that a dozen decades hence men may travel to the moon.

Basing his calculations on the progress in the rate of travel made during the past century, he expounded his theory in an address before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences last night.

By 1950, he said, a speed of 1,000 miles an hour will be possible and by the year 2050 man will have devised a means of traveling at the rate of 50,000 miles an hour, the speed necessary to make the journey to the moon.

To attain such a speed a fuel capable of releasing many times the energy obtainable from coal, gasoline or dynamite must be made available for engineering purposes, he said.

He described a possible ship for a lunar voyage as a sphere bristling with cannon, which would be propelled into space after the manner of a rocket.

Such a ship, he said, would be about 110 feet in diameter and weigh about 70,000 metric tons. It would carry a crew of 60 and a group of scientists as passengers.

Starting from a desert where the discharge of the propelling cannon could do no harm, Dr. Stewart said, the moon-ship would take off about a half hour before noon and about three days before the full moon.

In six minutes the sphere would be 12 miles up and shoot out of the earth's atmosphere at the rate of 200 miles an hour. After two hours and 29 minutes, he estimated, discharges from the earthward cannon could be stopped and the ship would travel toward the moon at the rate of 190 miles a minute.

At a height of 12,200 miles, which would be attained in 72 hours, the craft would cross the moon's orbit. Cannon would be fired to cushion the drop of the sphere onto the moon's surface.

The voyagers would find themselves on a satellite which is airless, waterless and lifeless, where days and night are two weeks long and where temperatures range from 212 degrees fahrenheit at noon to the temperature of liquid air at midnight.

Gravity on the moon being only one-sixth of that on the earth, men would be able to carry several hundred pounds of apparatus to provide air and regulate the temperature. They would travel in garbs similar to diving suits.

The return would be made by "shooting" the sphere off the surface of the moon and navigating it back to earth by means of the cannon.

Chicago Gas Up.

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—The price of gasoline was advanced one cent a gallon today to 19 cents (including the three-cent state tax) in the Chicago area. Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, said the annual increase in price at this season is attributable "to generally greater firmness in the gasoline market."

Economy Knife Sharpened For River, Harbor Bill

Hcuse Committee Plans To Prune Allotments in Omnibus Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—A drastic scaling down of all river and harbor projects and allotments to be included in this year's omnibus bill has been undertaken by the house rivers and harbors committee at the request of President Hoover.

Many items in the bill are being reduced in an effort to comply with a request made by President Hoover to keep the amount as low as possible.

Although it had been expected that the measure would carry authorizations of more than $150,000,000 a compilation today showed it had been reduced to about $108,000,000. Several other projects, however, including the $27,000,000 Erie canal proposal, however, are yet to be considered.

Chairman Dempsey, of the rivers and harbors committee, plans to go over the items again before the bill is reported to the house. Demands of supporters of the upper Mississippi, the upper Missouri, the Tennessee river and the Erie canal projects aggregating many millions are being met by partial allotments, according to the measure's present provisions.

Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, ranking democrat on the committee, said he favored including all the projects approved by the committee into the present omnibus bill, because thought the authorization totals more than $200,000,000 it would not call for an outlay of more than a small portion annually for many years.

Several projects of considerable size already cut down by the committee include the James river, Virginia, channel, for which the authorization was reduced from $4,500,000 to $3,500,000. This was accomplished by narrowing the proposed channel 50 feet for its entire length.

In the Miami harbor project, the committee also accomplished a reduction by abandoning for the present an authorization for widening the channel and adopting only a $250,000 turning basin enlargement program. The Miami river channel program was cut to $800,000 from more than $1,000,000 and some reductions also were made in the Lake Okeechobee improvement, in both cases selection of work to be abandoned for the time being was left to the army engineers.

A proposed $600,000 authorization for the Pensacola-Mobile canal was reduced to $75,000 by the committee which felt that commerce on that waterway did not justify the large expenditure.

Mail Order Firm Completes Plans To Locate Here

P. D. Scaggs, general superintendent of the John Read Company, large mail order house of Chicago and New York, was in Atlanta during the past week making arrangements for the establishment of a branch in this city to handle the business in this section of the country.

The company was formerly operated as Bernard-Hewitt & Company, which recently announced plans to establish a branch in Atlanta, the John Reed Company having the same executives and officials as Bernard-Hewitt & Company.

Plans are for the company to be in operation by August 1, with a force of 500 employes. The Lullwater building, 441-447 West Peachtree, and the third floor of the United Motors building (across the street) have been leased for the plant.

The John Reed Company operates as a C. O. D. mail order firm and has is main plant in Chicago with branch offices in New York.

Officials of the company feel that in establishing a branch in Atlanta, they will be able to serve the nearby states with more satisfaction in quicker deliveries, and at the same time give employment to hundreds of people in sections the business is coming from.

The company operates on an extensive basis, issuing eight catalogs each year with four sales fliers, going to approximately 10,000,000 persons. The postage bill amounts to approximately $7,000 a day, according to Mr. Scaggs.

Establishment of the plant here will prove a benefit to the southern manufacturers, bank, railroads, express and transportation companies, and other firms that the company would do business with, Mr. Scaggs points out.

John J. Thompson Company negotiated the lease for the locations here, and the Massell Realty Company is doing the remodeling and construction work under the supervision of Ivy & Crook, architects.

Union Indemnity Co. Appoints Agent Here

The Union Indemnity company, of New Orleans, one of the Insurance Securities, Inc., group, has appointed the well-known insurance firm of Leopold J. Haas and E. Arthur Haas as general agents of the Atlanta district for casualty and surety business.

The Union Indemnity company writes all classes of casualty and surety. W. Irving Moss, of New Orleans, is its president and directing head.

Woman's Division Sponsors Campaign

The beauty of richer life of the southland has been preserved through the famous gardens of the older cities of this section and it is the hope of the woman's division that Atlanta gardens will be a worthy heritage of the Key City of the south. The woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce, sponsoring clean-up, paint-up, plant-up Week, April 13-18, stresses the importance of the aesthetic side of the annual campaign, through its chairman, Mrs. Virginia Gouedy, and emphasizes the plant-up feature. Miss Regina Corrigan will assist the chairman.

Robbery of Taxicab Driver Under Probe

County police Saturday were investigating the hold-up of a taxicab driver on Howell Mill road early Saturday morning. The driver, J. D. Bryant, of 820 Virgil street, reported to police that he was robbed of $6 in cash by two young white men who engaged him to take them to the waterworks section.

The hold-up occurred when the youths got out of the car at the end of the ride and held a gun on Bryant, the driver reported. County Policemen A. A. Stovall and C. O. Casey are investigating.

GUESS TO MAKE RACE FOR STATE SECRETARY

Carl N. Guess, of DeKalb county, Saturday announced his candidacy for the office of secretary of state subject to the action of the democratic primary in September.

"The office is one of the most important in the state government, and a candidate aspiring to it should have, among other qualifications, some record of public service," he said.

"I was a member of the upper and lower house of the general assembly from 1919 to 1926, during which period of time I was chairman of general judiciary No. 1 for four years, and other important committees which the speaker assigned me. I was appointed on the mansion leasing commission. the results of this commission is, that in lieu of a dilapidated manison with no revenue to the state, there is now erected property at a valuation of $3,000,000 which reverts to the state at the expiration of the lease.

"The president of the senate appointed me chairman of the W. & A. railroad commitee, and thereafter on the W. & A. railroad commission, the work and labor of this commission in protecting the state's rights is of record.

"The democratic primary is something like five months off; during this period of time I want the educational institutions to investigate my labors for the various institutions, this to include those splendid institutions for our girls located at Milledgeville, Valdosta and the ninth district school near Clarksville. I was a member and vice chairman of the labor committee for six years, and ask that organized labor throughout the state look into my record. I want the Georgia Press Association and editors of every newspaper in Georgia to look up my record in 1922 or 1924, when drastic legislation was introduced affecting the advertisement rates and referred to the committee in which I was chairman. I notice the issue of distribution of auto tags in counties rather than under the present system has been made an issue. I look upon the members of the general assembly as intelligent gentlemen and know better what the people of their counties want than I do, and if they see proper to make a change it would meet with my full approval if elected to this honorable office."

I'm Very Happy, W. P. Price Says, Back on the Job

William P. Price, purchasing agent of the borough of Atlanta, Saturday was back at his desk at the city hall, "a happy man."

Mr. Price was freed Thursday night by a jury in Fulton county superior court on charges of a conspiracy to defraud the municipality in the purchase of supplies.

Saturday he was receiving the congratulations of his friends in Atlanta and throughout the state.

"I am a very happy man," Mr. Price said. "I knew deep down in my heart that I was not guilty of any wrong-doing, but I did not know just how the jury would react to the charges as presented to it.

"I have great faith in the right and felt that I, an innocent man, would not be convicted. There have been messages of congratulations from all parts of the state and some from other states. My loyal friends have paid me the highest compliment any man could ever receive. They believe in me, and they stuck by me. I can never express my appreciation.

"Sometimes it takes a great shake-up to really wake us up. I am awake, and in the future will guard the office in which I am serving with even more zeal that I did in the past."

Planes Seek Lost Aviator in Vain

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Two land planes and an amphibian soared over the Indiana dunes and the waters of Lake Michigan today seeking trace of the monoplane in which Ralph Fisher Skelton, artist and sportsman, left Ann Arbor, Mich., for Chicago Thursday afternoon. One of the searchers landed momentarily at Niles, Ill., to report no success.

As the hours wore on and clearing skies aided the fliers, fear grew that Skelton, who had aspired to fly across the Atlantic, had been forced down to his death in the narrow span of lower Lake Michigan.

Jason Tuggle New Pigeon Club Head

Jason Tuggle, local pigeon fancier, will take over the office of president of the Atlanta Pigeon Club at its next monthly meeting on May 13. Mr. Tuggle was named head of the organization for 1930 at the annual election of officers last week.

Other officers elected were Roy Turner, vice president; Fred Thompson, secretary, and J. H. Huggines, treasurer. The annual banquet was held at the Winecoff hotel. In addition to the election, it was featured by reports of activities during the past year and discussion of a program for 1930 in promoting pigeon raising.

Grecian Juniors Send Currants to Atlanta

Girls in the home economics classes in the Atlanta junior high schools used currants from Greece in their experiments with cakes, cookies, breads and puddings the past week—and what sweet delicacies they turned out to be! So said the instructors.

Last Christmas the Atlanta Junior Red Cross sent 2,500 boxes to Greece. This week the juniors here received from the juniors there two pounds of the toothsome currants grown in that country as an expression of their interest in the work done here.

Doran Asks Dry Sleuths To 'Sharpen' Their Noses

New Tricks in Conversion of Industrial Alcohol To Be Sought Out by Prohi Agents.

BY CECIL OWEN,
United News Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Dry enforcement administrators have been directed by Prohibition Commissioner Doran to keep up a keen scent for new tricks in converting industrial alcohol for drinking.

Substantial quantities of synthetic methanol, a form of wood alcohol, are coming into the market, Doran said. He warned administrators to see that this chemical, disastrous to drinkers, is not converted by bootleggers and sold for beverage purposes.

He also urged administrators to exercise utmost diligence and tact in handling of permissive alcohol system which he said is of paramount importance in effective enforcement.

Doran's instructions were embodied in a letter sent to administrators in preparation for the transfer of all prohibition enforcement agencies except the alcohol permit section to the justice department, as provided in the bill which passed the house and now is pending in the senate. The permit section will remain in the treasury department.

"I would like each administrator," Doran said, "particularly of those districts where alcohol control is a problem, to make a thorough survey of his inspection forces with a view of employing the greatest number possible on these diversion problems.

"Any unusual or new operation that comes to your attention should be promptly reported as our ability to deal effectively with changing conditions rests to a great extent on the promptness and accuracy with which we are able to note these symptoms of changes."

Only a certain amount of "routine inspection" is necessary with reference to physicians and druggists, Doran said. He asked the administrators instead to concentrate on diversions of alcohol by firms obtaining it under permit from the government. The prohibition organization was congratulated by Doran for its work in this direction during the past year.

"The organization," he added, "is able to cope intelligently with the criminal regardless of the particular field in which he selects to operate. In no field is there a display of greater intelligence and poise than in the permissive field where commerce and industry must receive due consideration. No one can be infallible in the granting of permits. It also takes moral courage to dispatch public business with a knowledge that in the future some of the permittees may be found violating the law.

"No guarantees can be had as to future conduct, but diligence will reduce the undesirable element."

state primary on September 10, Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the democratic state executive committee, announced Saturday.

Dr. Duggan sent in his entrance fee of $150 early Saturday morning.

"I think that is a sufficiently formal announcement that I expect to run," he said.

Unquestionably the path of the gubernatorial candidate must be treaded more carefully this year and with greater care in the consideration of policies than possibly ever before.

Candidates Galore.

While the rumored opposition to Senator W. J. Harris has not materialized it seems certain now that there will be an unusually large number of candidates whose names will appear on the ticket on September 10, the date of the primary.

The announcement of Carl N. Guess, of DeKalb county, was released for publication Saturday, making the second formal announcement for this office. State Senator Lewis Moore announced some weeks ago, and at least two or three more candidates are expected. Among those which have been most prominently mentioned are Judge J. J. Flynt, Dr. N. L. Ballard, John B. Wilson and Arthur T. Harris.

It was learned following the meeting of the state committee Friday that Jere Wells, superintendent of schools of Fulton county, is considering making the race for state superintendent of education against Dr. M. L. Duggan, the incumbent, and that Representative Charles Stewart may make the race for commissioner of agriculture against Eugene Talmadge. Stewart, who is one of the best campaigners in the state, made the race against former Commissioner J. J. Brown and Talmadge two years ago.

Representative Parker New, of Laurens county, has let it be known that he is considering making the race against Attorney-General Napier, and Representative Culpepper, of Fayette, may also enter this contest.

Guy O. Stone, of Glennville, is actively running against Perry T. Knight for the public service commission.

Entries Close June 3.

With a month and a half still to go before the closing date for entries there can be expected, according to judgment of those familiar with the situation, enough more candidates to make this year's races the most populous for a decade. Predictions are freely made that the candidates will immediately begin shelling the woods and that during June, July and August the campaign will be so actively waged by so large a number of office seekers that new records for intensity will be set.

Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendant of education, paid his entry fee Saturday, being the first of the state candidates to qualify for the primary.

FLORIDA COUNTY SEIZES RAILROAD

am afraid we will have to go ahead along the lines we have started."

PRESIDENT SAYS TAX IN DISPUTE.

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 12.—(AP)—George B. Elliott, president of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, said late today that Colonel W. E. Kay, of Jacksonville, Fla., of the railway's legal staff, would confer in Tallahassee Monday with Florida state tax authorities relative to unpaid 1929 taxes levied against the railway.

Mr. Elliott said he expected a settlement to be made at that time. Until he had further knowledge of seizure of the railway's right-of-way and track at Avon Park, Fla., by Sheriff Oscar Wolff, of Highlands county, he did not care to comment, he said.

Mr. Elliott admitted certain items in the taxes listed against the railway were in dispute, but said he did not care to reveal the details.

GEORGIANS DECLINE TO ATTACK RASKOB

the party that promises most in equalizing the benefits of government. I am unwilling to play into the hands of the republican party, now desperately endeavoring to withdraw public attention from the conduct of the chairman of its national committee, for the resignation of whom no request has been made upon me to demand, but which, if made, not being a member of his party, it would be grossly improper for me to make.

"Party machinery provides a method for the severance of the official relationship that exists between Mr. Raskob and the democratic party. I am content that this matter should be handled in the orderly manner, and therefore most respectfully decline to comply with your request.

"Very truly yours."

GEORGIAN ATTACKS POLITICAL BISHOPS

bishops of the church, as they did not, such political activities as the four bishops engaged in were, in many particulars, reprehensible, involving ruthless tresspasses upon the rights of the laymen of the church. In the course of the 1928 campaign one of the four bishops insinuated that men and women who remained democratic were not Christians. Another accused of 'infamous hypocrisy' those who would not yield to his political dictation and insinuated that Bishops W. A. Candler and Collins Denny had manufactured modern 'false decretal' of the general conferences. Another broadcasted the charge that Governor Alfred E. Smith was a drunkard, and suggested the righteousness of the breaking of solemn pledges of party loyalty. The fourth suggested that Southern Methodist preachers make what would have been the equivalent of 64,000 pulpit 'stump speeches' on Sundays against the candidate of the democratic party in 1928 because he was a member of the Roman Catholic church.

Bishops Misrepresentative.

"If the four bishops had conducted their campaign on the highest possible plane of statesman-like fairness, such a campaign would have been contrary to the laws of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, under the control of which the bishops of the church should labor. But the campaigns of the four bishops in the few details above suggested were grossly misrepresentative of both the laws and the spirit of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and were calculated to create and did create damage in the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and were calculated to create and did create damage in the church and friction in the state.

FOR CHILDREN'S COUGHS SHE USED LIN-O-NINE FOR YEARS

"From Nine Months Up Our Children's Colds and Coughs Never Worried Us

CERTAIN, SAFE, SURE-FIRE INGREDIENTS

"Dr. Kerr, the famous man who created the formula for Lin-O-Nine, lived in Danbury, my home town, so I've always known it was perfectly safe and harmless and have given it to my children from nine months up. The children have continued to use it since grown-up, it is so pleasant and effective," declares Mrs. Frank P. Morgan, 68 West Wooster St., Danbury, Conn. Everybody in Danbury, Conn., knows what Lin-O-Nine will do for even the worst sort of wintry coughs and colds and it will be found in the medicine chest of practically every farmer in New England. It is classed among users and druggists as safe, sure and effective as Castoria for children. Not a drop of dope or alcohol or anything else to injure one, and so nice to taste, kiddies smile when taking it. Elderly folks with weak stomachs easily upset by medicines, find it ideal, and a pleasant, regulating, strengthening tonic, too.

Now it may be obtained of local druggists for either 50 cents or $1 per bottle, or send money or stamps to Famous Kerr Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., and the, will pay the postage on a bottle to your door. Coughs and cold in winter sometimes lead to dangerous troubles, so it is a wise precaution to safeguard against it in a family.—(adv.)

BRUENING GOVERNMENT WINS BY CLOSE MARGIN

Reichstag Sustains Chancellor by 217 Votes to 205 Against.

BERLIN, April 12.—(AP)—The cabinet of Chancellor Bruening, aided by a threat of new elections, again steered safely between the nationalist opposition on the one side and the communist and socialist opposition on the other in the reichstag today.

By a vote of 217 to 205 nationalist attempts to hold out on the government in matters of taxation while simultaneously pushing their agrarian plans were defeated in that Chancellor Bruening out-manoeuvred them with a resolution binding the finance and agrarian programs together.

After this test vote the government, throughout the day's second reading of the finance bills, obtained approval so that passage on the third reading seemed assured.

While Chancellor Bruening was strengthened by President Von Hindenburg's decree of dissolution of the reichstag which he had in his pocket, the prospects of a pleasant Easter vacation and travel also had some effect, for the reichstagers are not keen about bringing on the difficulties of dissolution and re-elections at the present moment.

As a final gesture of defiance this afternoon the communists introduced a motion of non-confidence, but this was voted down, 222 to 203.

Among the measures adopted on second reading was an increase on the tax on benzine and benzol from six marks per double hundredweight to 10 marks and also an increase in the beer tax of approximately 50 per cent.

The duty free importation of 50,000 tons of frozen meats will cease July 1 under the measure.

The cabinet also is empowered until March 31, 1931, to change the duty on grains of all sorts as is deemed necessary provided the average wheat price does not exceed 260 marks average and the rye price 230 marks average a ton.

ADMIRAL BYRD PLANS REST OF TWO MONTHS

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd will retire to private life, for at least two months, within six weeks after he returns to New York in mid-June from his south polar voyage of exploration, Captain H. H. Railey, his representative here, announced today.

His arrival in New York with his two ships, the Eleanor Bolling and the City of New York, is now set tentatively at June 14, and he would like to be able to dispose of his immediate engagements within 30 or 40 days after that date in order to have an uninterrupted time to spend with his family, to codify the scientific data collected on his expedition, to rest and to work on a book scheduled for publication in the fall.

His itinerary in the month after his return is in the hands of Captain Railey, who for two years has acted for Admiral Byrd in matters pertaining to his expedition which required attention in the admiral's absence.

Byrd and his expedition is tentatively set for Saturday, June 14. On the following afternoon he and his party will leave for Washington, where on June 16 he will pay official calls, probably at the White House, the house and senate chambers and the war and navy departments. In the evenings he will be a guest of the National Geographic Society at a meeting in his honor at which President Hoover is expected to preside, and at which motion pictures made by the Byrd expedition in the antarctic will have their first showing.

MRS. SHARP TO HEAD YOUNG HARRIS COLLEGE

Mrs. J. A. Sharp, widow of the late president of Young Harris, has been selected to fill her husband's post until the next commencement, it was learned in Atlanta Saturday.

The announcement was made by C. S. Bird, Atlanta attorney and alumnus of Young Harris, speaking in behalf of the board of trustees. Realizing that the post left vacant by the recent death of one of Georgia's leading educators would be exceedingly hard to fill, according to Mr. Bird, the trustees have deferred action in making a selection until after the June commencement. In the meanwhile Mrs. Sharp has been asked to occupy the office of her late husband.

BURGLAR IS ROUTED

Seeks To Rob House Near Police Station.

Calling the police for help, Mrs. Mary Moses, of 176 1-2 Decatur street, brought newspapermen and call officers running from the police station shortly after midnight this morning and they routed a would-be burglar who was attempting to enter the rear door of the Franco Grocery Company at 176 Decatur street, exactly in front of police headquarters.

Mrs. Moses saw a negro man attempting to force the door and going to a front window called across the street to the police. The negro escaped but left a heavy crowbar behind to show that he had been there.

$30,000 IN JEWELRY TWO-GUN MAN'S LOOT

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—(AP)—A two-gun holdd-up man today overpowered two men in the office of Zeithing and Company, jewelry manufacturers, and escaped with merchandise valued at between $30,000 and $40,000.

William H. Zeithing, president of the firm, said most of the loot was in gold and platinum jewelry and loose diamonds. The plant is in the heart of Newark's jewelry manufacturing district.

AIR VIEWS AT CANDLER FIELD

"JIMMY" DOOLITTLE AND A CURTISS HAWK.

The first demonstration tour of European countries by representatives of the American aircraft industry got under way at noon Thursday when Lieutenant James H. Doolittle, famous army pilot, and two companions, Captain James M. Cannon and Lieutenant James E. Parker, sailed from New York on the liner Vulcania for Greece, Turkey, the Balkans, the Baltic states, Poland, Scandinavian countries and Switzerland.

Lieutenant Doolittle resigned early this year from the army air corps to enter commercial aviation, after a remarkable record as an experimental, racing and acrobatic pilot.

The present four-month tour, planned by the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, will demonstrate four planes never before flown in Europe. They are the Curtiss Hawk and Curtiss Falcon, standard pursuit and observation planes in the United States army, navy and marine corps. The first demonstration will be held late in April in Athens before high governmental and military officials. From Greece, the mission will fly through the Balkan countries, Turkey and north to Poland and the other countries on the Baltic. After visits to Norway and Sweden, the planes will be flown across Germany to Switzerland, the last country to be visited before the return about August 1 to the United States.

With a continuation of Saturday's fine weather in prospect, a bigger-than-usual crowd of aviation fans is expected at the airport this afternoon, with several extra added attractions in prospect. The most interesting of these is the Goodyear blimp "Defender," which is scheduled to arrive at Candler Field about 10 or 10:30 o'clock this morning and to spend about three hours here before continuing its flight from Florida. J. H. Gray, manager of Candler Field, Saturday was busy marshalling his forces into a ground crew which will see to the mooring of the big craft. A glimpse of a member of the lighter-than-air family is rare in these parts and it is quite likely that many Atlantans will revise their Sunday dinner schedule in order to inspect the "Defender" during its brief visit today. The ship was slated to reach the Atlanta airport some time Saturday night, but murky weather in south Georgia made a night flight inadvisable and the blimp remained tied down at Albany.

One of Davis Airlines' new planes, a four-place Travel Air monoplane, powered by a J-6 Whirlwind "seven" of 225 horsepower, will be at Candler Field today, in charge of Art Brown, pilot for the company. The new ship, which was flown here from Wichita by Johnny Gill, negotiated the long hop, with a stop at Birmingham for passengers, in the fast time of eight and a half hours. The monoplane will be used by the Davis company here for cross-country work, as will a new Hisso Travel Air, just acquired by the airlines. The latter, powered with a Hispano-Suiza "E," of 180 horsepower, is a three-place, open cockpit biplane, with cruising speed of around 115 miles an hour.

Davis Airlines' pilots Saturday played prominent roles in an air show which he 106th observation squadron, commanded by Major Sumpter Smith, put on for Birmingham aviation fans. No races were on the schedule, the events being confined to stunting, contributed by Doug Davis and Johnny Gill in the company's J-6 "seven" Travel Air racer; a parachute jump by Emmett Plunkett, who is connected with the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service here, and formation flying by members of the national guard squadron. In addition to the racing job, the Davis company had on hand the Hisso Travel Air and a seven-place Travel Air monoplane, the latter in charge of George Shealy.

With the concrete for the foundation already in place, Southern Air Transport, Inc., building a $25,000 hangar at Candler field, Wednesday will begin the erection of the steel work for the modern new building, Lee Sanders, divisional manager for the company here, stated Saturday night. B. A. Slater, airport engineer for the Aviation Corporation, is making Atlanta his temporary headquarters and is looking after the construction work. The new structure will be ready for occupancy within five weeks, Sanders stated. In the meantime, S. A. T. headquarters will be maintained at the hangar of the Blevins Aircraft Corporation, which was purchased several weeks ago from Southern Air Transport and moved to the Blevins site at the northwest corner of the field.

By the middle of this week Beeler Blevins, burned out on the night of March 4, will be able to take up where he left off in offering aviation service to Atlanta. This morning he is to leave by train for Detroit and is due back in Atlanta some time Tuesday with the first of the planes with which he will renew operations. Ship No. 1 will be a Stinson Junior, powered with a 210-horsepower Lycoming motor, which was a part of the Stinson exhibit at the Detroit Aircraft exposition. This Lycoming job, a recent development of the Cord Corporation, of which Stinson is a subsidiary, has attracted much attention at various air shows and meets, as much by its beauty as by its exceptional performance. Two new Kinner-powered Wacos, combination commercial and training planes, also will be brought here by Blevins as soon as he receives word from the factory at Troy, Ohio, that they are ready for delivery. The department of commerce granted its approved type certificate for the new ship a few days ago and the company plans to rush production.

E. W. Hightower, chief pilot for Beeler Blevins and popular member of the Candler field contingent, Saturday was the recipient of the felicitations of his numerous friends, the occasion being his marriage yesterday afternoon to Miss Mary Stillman, popular member of the College park younger set and daughter of Leo Stillman, assistant cashier of the First National bank, Atlanta. The couple were married by the Rev. J. G. Patton at the bride's home. George Morton, business manager of the Blevins' Aircraft Corporation, acted in the capacity of best man, while Miss Sarah Stillman, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Mr. and Mrs. Hightower left immediately for a few days' visit to the groom's former home at Nelson, Ga.

A number of visitors were recorded at Candler field Saturday. Captain J. O. Donaldson, of Newark, N. J., president of the Newark Air Service and third ranking living American ace, arrived with Mrs. Donaldson in a D-H Gipsy moth. They will spend several days here at the home of Mrs. Donaldson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McCullough. Others who stopped by, all getting service at the Curtiss-Wright hangar, were W. M. Hampson, of Baltimore, in a Challenger Robin, on his way to Chattanooga, and C. A. Lee, flying a Stinson Junior, powered with a Whirlwind "seven," from Daytona Beach, Fla., where he has been operating during the winter, back to his home in Milwaukee. He carried as passengers Ralph Green, Floyd Bowers and "Bud" Fisher, the latter not, incidentally, the comic-strip cartoonist. Lieutenant Spencer Callaway, an Atlanta boy, flew over from Maxwell field, Montgomery, in a Douglas O-2 to spend the week-end with relatives here. Lieutenant W. A. C. Davis, of the United States Navy Air corps, gassed his Vought Corsair at the Southern Air Transport hangar and continued his flight to his Pensacola base.

TARIFF CONFEREES ACCEPT HIGH SCALE

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Higher protection from foreign competition for American producers of wrapper tobacco, cotton textiles, and various raw and porcessed commodities of flax, hemp and jute was provided under agreements reached today by the senate and house conferees on the tariff bill.

High spots in the day's work were seen in the compromise by which present duties of $2.10 and $2.75 a pound, respectively, on "stemmed and stemmed wrapper tobacco," were increased by 17 1-2 cents a pound, and in acceptance of the senate's additional levee of 10 cents a pound on all goods, except rags, made from long staple cotton.

The house bill had provided an increase of 40 cents a pound in the tobacco imposts. The senate had restored present rates.

The cotton goods rate increase was to compensate manufacturers using long staple cotton, which was taken from the free list by the senate and given a tariff of 7 cents a pound.

Work on three complete rate schedules was completed today, bringing the total up to 11 since the tariff adjusters began their task a week and a half ago.

With only four rate sections awaiting adjustment, Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, head of the senate conference group, predicted all duty differences will have been composed by the middle of next week. Then the task of conciliating the disputes over administrative clauses will be started in the hope that the entire bill might be completed well before May 1.

Only six rates have been passed over thus far by the conferees so that the house proper might vote upon them. They affect sugar, cement, lumber, shingles, silver and casein.

Besides agreeing to the long staple cotton goods rate increase, the conferees today accepted the following senate duties in the cotton schedule, compared with present rates:

Sewing thread, one-half of 1 cent per 100 yards, now the same; tire and cord fabric, 25 per cent, now the same; blankets and blanket cloth, 30 per cent, but not less than 14 1-4 cents a pound, now 25 cents; shirts, not knit or crocheted, 45 per cent, now 35 per cent.

"Hit and miss" rag rugs, 75 per cent, now 35 per cent, based on the American selling price; rags, including wiping rags, 3 cents a pound, now dutiable at various lower rates; rope used as belting for textile machinery, 40 per cent, now 30 per cent.

Another senate amendment approved provides a minimum rate of 55 1-100 of a cent per average number per pound one plain cotton cloth, containing yarns the average number of which exceeds No. 90.

House cotton rates approved, as compared with existing levies were:

Tapestries and other jacquard—figured upholstery cloths, 55 per cent, now 45 per cent; war 6-knit gloves, 60 per cent, now 50 per cent.

The duty on cotton chenille rugs was increased from 35 to 40 per cent by another compromise.

'29 GAS TAX REVENUE OVER 431 MILLION

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—A total of $431,636,454 was collected in the form of gasoline tax in the 48 states and District of Columbia during 1929, reports made public today by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture show.

This figure represents the tax on 13,400,180,062 gallons of motor fuel and includes a 12-month collection in 46 of the states and District of Columbia, and a five months' collection in Illinois and eight months in New York. These two states were the last to adopt this method for part payment of highway expenditures.

The average fee per gallon collected was 3.22 cents as against 3 cents in 1928, according to the reports. During the year 20 states increased the rate of taxation either one or two cents. The highest tax per gallon was six cents, and the lowest two cents. At the close of the year three states had a six-cent tax, eight a five-cent tax, 19 a four-cent, one, Utah, a 3 1-2 cent and ten a three-cent tax. Seven states and the District of Columbia collect two cents per gallon.

The pioneer states in gas tax collections are Oregon, Colorado, North Dakota and New Mexico, official of the department said. These states levied their first tax in 1919. Now all other states have followed.

Most of the states collecting the gasoline tax use the funds thus obtained for road building and maintenance, the records disclose. The entire net revenue in 34 states goes for this purpose, while in the other 14 and the District of Columbia a total of $24,405,207 was used for other purposes.

Three of the states used part of the money to support public schools, eight gave part of it to cities for repair and improvement of city streets, six deposited small sums in the general fund, while in one, New Jersey, a small fraction of the receipts was turned over to the department of commerce and navigation.

The following table shows total motor fuel receipts and total number of gallons taxed in the southern states:

State.	Tax.	Gallons.

16 KIDDIES ESCAPE BLAZE AT HOSPITAL

IRVINGTON, N. Y., April 12.—(AP)—An employe was fatally burned and 78 children, 16 of them bedridden, were carried or led to safety today when fire destroyed Irvington House Cardiac Home, a private hospital for children with heart disease.

Edward Bryce, 28, handyman and mechanic at the institution, was so badly burned about the body that he died.

The 14 nurses at the hospital, directed by their superintendent, Miss Buffton, braved the heat and flames to carry the 16 bedridden children, wrapped in blankets, down fire escapes and inside staircases to the garage and other buildings on the hospital grounds. An explosion preceded the fire.

Ordered From Building.

Miss Buffton ran three times through the building, accompanied by five nurses, to make certain that all the bedridden children had been carried out. She and the nurses were ordered from the building by firemen.

Most of the other children were on the lawn when the fire broke out. Organized into lines, they were led away in orderly fashion by the nurses. Neighbors brought them blankets and clothes and other coverings to protect them from the cold and lent automobiles for their transportation to homes and the grounds of the Ardsley Country Club, a fashionable golf club at Ardsley-on-the-Hudson, two miles away.

The bedridden children together with six others, were taken to Dobbs Ferry and Tarrytown hospitals. Dr. Herman Schmitz, house physician, who, with Mrs. Irma Levy, of Dobbs Ferry, president of the organization which operates the house, took charge of the situation, said that none of the children had been affected by smoke or fear.

Miss Buffton said that she believed numerous fatalities might have occurred had more children been in the home, for following the explosion in the basement, smoke and flames poured into the building.

Bryce was trapped in the burning basement for 35 minutes before police and firemen, who came from Dobbs Ferry, North Tarrytown, Tarrytown and Irvington, took him out. Bryce was repairing the oil-burning furnace when it exploded.

The explosion, which shook the entire building and was heard throughout a large area of the fashionable Hudson river communities, and the fire caused no panic among the children, Miss Buffton said.

Those children who were not taken to hospitals were eventually placed on cots on the grounds of the Ardsley Country Club, where they will remain overnight. Tomorrow they will be returned to 23 hospitals in New York, which had sent them to Irvington House and which are now making arrangements for them in a similar institution on Long Island.

VETERANS' TAG DAY TO BE HELD JUNE 3

Funds for Trip to Reunion at Biloxi, Mississippi, Are Sought.

An early start in the plans for raising funds to send Confederate veterans of Fulton county to the general reunion opening at Biloxi, Miss., on June 3 was seen in announcement Saturday that April 16 has been designated as "Confederate Reunion Tag Day."

The tag day fund raising activities are being sponsored by the Atlanta camp No. 159, United Confederate Veterans, and will be under the charge of Mrs. A. O. Woodward, as chairman of the camp's finance committee.

An unusually large attendance at the reunion this year is expected, due to its location at the old home place of Jefferson Davis, Mrs. Woodward stated. The reunion will continue for three days and is likely to be the last one held in Mississippi, the tag day chairman said.

The funds to be raised from sale of tags on April 16 will be used to defray the expenses of those veterans from the Old Soldiers' Home and all others in Fulton county unable to pay their own way, Mrs. Woodward stated. A large number of veterans who otherwise would have had sufficient finances, due to irregularity of pension payments, will need outside aid this year, Mrs. Woodward said. A highly favorable round-trip rate has been especially made for the occasion by the railroads, the chairman remarked.

Women planning to aid in the tag day sales are requested to call at the campaign headquarters, rooms 814-815 Mortgage Guarantee building, Tuesday, where they will be given detailed information, Mrs. Woodward said.

Peach 'Pre-Cooling' Urged by J. A. Perry

"Pre-cooling" of peaches before they are placed in refrigeration cars for shipment Saturday was advocated by James A. Perry, chairman of the Georgia public service commission, as a means of holding down peach losses in this state.

Mr. Perry said that he had become convinced, fro ma study of the situation, that the time intervening from the minute the peach is taken from the tree until it is put on refrigeration cars is where the greatest damage is done.

"By test in actual experience it has been demonstrated that if a peach is immediately brought to proper temperature when taken from the tree it will carry four or five days longer than if taken from the tree and carried to an iced car with usual loss of many hours' time intervening."

For that reason, Mr. Perry said, pre-cooling stations should be established in the orchard, where temperatures would correspond with those of the refrigeration cars. Much loss to shippers could thus be avoided, he said.

Era of General Peace Seen For Europe by Dr. Garner.

Basis of Co-operation Between United States and Latin-America Offered by Dr. Rippy.

"There is an era of general peace ahead in Europe," Dr. J. W. Garner, University of Illinois professor, asserted in the closing address of the third annual Institute of Citizenship at Emory University Saturday morning. Speaking on "Europe Ten Years After the War and the Outlook for Peace," Dr. Garner summarized observations gained from four trips to Europe since the World War, the most recent of which was made last summer. "I doubt whether any of us will see a general war in Europe again. The people are at last convinced that war does not pay and they are tired of it."

Mutual trust and consent are essential to genuine co-operation between the United States and Latin-America, Dr. J. Fred Rippy, Duke University professor, said in concluding his series of talks on Latin-American problems. He outlined in the closing morning session a basis of co-operation between the United States and Latin-America.

Shorter Meeting Planned.

Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of the university, extended his thanks to the League of Women Voters and others who had made the institute a success. He also announced that the fourth Institute of Citizenship probably would be held in February next year and that it would be limited to two or three days instead of an entire week.

Dr. T. H. Jack, presiding, extended thanks for co-operation he had received on behalf of the executive committee of the institute and stated that further announcements concerning the date of next year's institute would be made in the next few weeks. Dr. C. B. Gosnell, director of the three institutes held on the Emory campus, also spoke briefly.

"Americanization of Europe is undoubtedly taking place," Dr. Garner state. "Europe is being flooded by American typewriters, American baked beans, American chewing gum, safety razors and 95 per cent of the movies are American-made. In Paris there are American hotels, restaurants, 5 and 10-cent stores, newspapers and bars, doctors, dentists and even Rotary Clubs. The French are upset at the Americanization of their chief city, Paris.

"Europeans want things to stay as they are and have been. They regret the spoliation of rich art galleries and great libraries by American millionaires. As an American I would dislike to see a city like Paris become Americanized. The one thing that attracts Americans to Europe is that it is different.

Admired But Not Loved.

"Americans are generally admired in Europe, but not loved. You could hardly expect debtors to love their creditors. American foreign policies since the World War have been criticized. The tariff policy has stirred up opposition the like of which has never been known before. It is bound to invite reprisal and retaliation and we can hardly blame the people of Europe if they take a leaf out of our own book in making their tariffs. The much talked-of United States of Europe would present a united front to the tariff system of the United States.

"It seems to me now that Europe is entering upon a new era of co-operation. A new spirit of Locarno is taking the place of the distrust and hatred that prevailed before and after the World War. At least that can be said to have softened. There is a feling of injustice on the part of the defeated and there are a few danger spots.

"However, there is an era of general peace ahead in Europe. I doubt whether any of us will see a general war in Europe again.

"Where is the indication of peace? Look at what Europe has done in the past ten years. Europe today is knit together by a network of arbitration and conciliation treaties. All of the nations have joined the League of Nations except Russia, all have joined the world court, and all but Russia have signed agreements to submit points of legal matters to arbitration. It is to be regretted that as much could not be said for the United States."

Dr. Garner outlined the conditions in France, Germany, Spain and England.

Conditions in France.

"Economically speaking, France is in an excellent condition. She was spared the strikes which have distressed England and has no unemployment worth mentioning. On the other hand, stabilization of the franc had worked great hardships, but the loss of wealth among great numbers has not made communists of them, nor is communism making headway in France.

"Germany had been transformed from a creditor nation before the war to the most debtor nation. Yet Germany in six or seven years has recovered the industrial supremacy of Europe. The Germans have adapted themselves to conditions better than any other belligerent nation of the World War. She has agreed to the Locarno pact, joined the League of Nations as soon as the door was opened, joined the world court and signed the Kellogg pact without reservation, doing even better than the United States has done in thus promoting world peace. The other side of the picture includes unemployment and distress because of the stabilization of the mark and the heavy taxes."

Spain was described as very prosperous under a dictator. "Spain is spending more money today in the construction of good roads, reservoirs and in irrigation projects, and in the improvement of her cities than any other country in Europe.

"Of the countries I visited, Great Britain appeared to be in the most serious situation." Widespread unemployment, a condition which statesmen have been unable to alleviate, losses in her manufacturing supremacy, extensive strikes, lack of demand for British coal which has seemingly permanently closed British mines, were among things described.

"But economically, socially, politically and financially England is sound to the core. England was able to stabilize currency when other nations could not and Great Britain has paid her debt to the United States without whining. It is hard not to have faith in people like that. Never since the United States has become an independent nation has it been so sincerely desired by the people of England to have American good will and friendship."

Basis of Co-operation.

Professor Rippy directed a search for the proper basis of co-operation between the Americas at his round table. "The real basis of all co-operation," said Dr. Rippy, "must be found in mutual difficulties and problems and in varying capacities of individuals and peoples. There could be no co-operation unless each had its own peculiar problems and talents. Mutual trust and consent is needed.

"Latin-America is not able to employ force in dealing with us and we ought to avoid coercion in dealing with Latin-America. We may dominate a few of the states and offend many. We should also remember that when a strong power and a weak power have disagreements, the strong power will have its way unless a disinterested third party is called in.

"We have in Latin-America a great opportunity for service as well as profit. Our final niche in history may depend largely upon the policy that we pursue toward Latin-America."

W., applications for membership are pouring in daily. He was of the opinion that through the co-operation of the General Outdoor Advertising Company many of these applications have been made possible. A total of 34 large posters have been placed on billboards over the county, inviting veterans to join the V. F. W. organization.

LUKE ARNOLD IS SEEN AS YORK'S SUCCESSOR

Alderman R. E. Gann, of Sixth Ward, To Nominate Lawyer for Place.

Selection of Luke Arnold, attorney, as a compromise candidate to succeed Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward, loomed Saturday following a conference between friends of Mr. Arnold and Claude Barnwell, businessman, who has been mentioned prominently for the post.

Mr. York resigned following his conviction about two weeks ago as the first defendent in the probe of alleged graft in municipal circles.

Alderman Robet E. Gann, of the sixth ward, announced Saturday he would nominate Mr. Arnold for the vacancy at the next session of council, April 21.

It was said Saturday that Mr. Arnold is satisfactory to labor and that he has a large following in council who will support him for the position.

In discussing the matter Mr. Barnwell declared he has withdrawn in favor of Mr. Arnold. It also was reported that Madison Bell, also mentioned prominently for the position, will not oppose the selection of Mr. Arnold.

One Week of Extra Credits In Prize Campaign Offer

April 19 Ends Greatest Opportunity in Constitution's Contest.

One more week!

After that the 100,000 and 50,000 extra credit offers in The Atlanta Constitution's $25,000 prize campaign will have passed into campaign history.

Everywhere candidates are working fast—gathering new subscriptions to make $30 clubs, for each $30 worth of new prepaid subscriptions earns 100,000 extra credits and each $30 worth of new contract subscriptions earns 50,000 extra credits. It's the GREATEST credit opportunity of the entire campaign and candidates are apparently making the most of it.

This extra credit period offers the best way to lay a foundation of credits that will win the $3,120 Pierce-Arrow sedan and $1,000 in gold, the $2,835 Franklin sedan and $500 in gold, or any of the other 16 automobiles or 20 radios.

Important Date.

The all-important date right now is April 19—the close of the 100,000 and 50,000 extra credit offers. The thousands of extra credits to be gained during the remaining week makes victory in this race for valuable prizes all the easier.

With the close of the extra credit offers also comes the end of the $500 in gold offer. Five hundred dollars in gold will be given to the seven candidates turning in the highest amounts in new subscription business during the period starting March 26 and ending at 9 p. m. April 19. This amount in gold is in addition to the regular awards to be given at the close of the campaign May 31, and a candidate can win one of the gold awards and also one of the regular awards.

The extra credit offer is the greatest opportunity offered both those now in the campaign and those just entering to pile up a huge total for themselves, and their efforts will never count again as much as they will between now and April 19.

Now is just the time to get into the campaign. With this added inducement for new subscriptions new entrants will have very little trouble with a systematic campaign, of taking the lead.

Enter Now.

Get into the race now. Surely with 18 automobile, gold and 20 radios to be given you can win one of that large list for yourself. Then there are the cash commissions to be paid. If you are active throughout the campaign you are BOUND to be rewarded for your efforts, as liberal cash commissions will be paid to all active non-prize winners.

The campaign is young. Men and women with initiative and energy can get in now and win.

How about YOU?

Three Active Candidates

Mrs. Olivia LeGette (left), secretary to Captain Grover C. Fain, of the police department; H. A. Blair (center), 63 Peachtree, druggist, and Mrs. H. Turner Loehr, 428 Simpson avenue, N. W., whose husband is a railway engineer, are three active candidates in The Atlanta Constitution's $25,000 prize campaign and are in to win prize cars to be awarded by The Constitution.

Montana Woman Lost 19 Pounds of Fat In 4 Weeks

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

When stout women can lose fat and at the same time gain in energy and vigor.

Gain in charm and vivaciousness.

Gain a healthy complexion and have eyes that sparkle with buoyant health.

And at insignificant cost—isn't it time to use common sense?

Please read this letter carefully:

"Gentlemen: I first saw your advertisement in a Billings, Montana, paper and decided to try Kruschen Salts.

I was the first to purchase a bottle in Billings.

I started taking them every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give "Kruschen Salts" a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better. Kruschen Salts had a decided effect upon the quantity of food I took and stimulated my desire to greater activity.

I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many of my friends, in fact, have a number of them taking Kruschen Salts.

May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. Just try one bottle and by following directions, I am sure it will convince any one. I bought my second bottle to-day."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at Jacobs' Pharmacy or any drugstore in America.—(adv.)

The insurance department of the Empire Trust Company has been functioning since the establishment of that organization in 1912, while the Barnard Boykin & Company was established about five years ago. Both concerns have carried a general insurance line.

80 GEORGIA COUNTIES APPOINT HISTORIANS

Grand juries of more than 80 counties, acting on a resolution of the last legislature, have appointed historians to prepare county histories in preparation for the observance of the second centennial in 1933 of the founding of Georgia. Miss Ruth Blair, head of the state department of archives and history, announced Saturday.

Other counties are expected to make their appointments within a few weeks, Miss Blair stated, and by the end of the year a small army of historians will be on their way toward the creation of a new record of the counties of the state.

Miss Blair told of some of the work already under way, saying that in many instances the effort represented a labor of love for the state and its people.

"Many of them have been gathering the interesting facts and fancies relating to their counties for years," she said, "and now they welcome the opportunity to put them in order, to be preserved along with other records so treasured by the department of archives."

Included in the list of those already named in the respective counties are judges, editors, teachers, educators and public spirited citizens. Some of them are already authors of books and histories, while many have contributed to the state with service in the legislature and other departments of the state government. But regardless of past experience or record, all are said to be equally eager to embark on the endless research and poring over musty books and documents which is the necessary task of the true historian.

Three Co-operative Hog Sales Arranged

Three co-operative hog sales have been arranged for this week, and poultry pick-up cars will make 22 or more stops, it was announced Saturday by the bureau of markets of the state department of agriculture.

Sales will be held at Eastman on Tuesday, McRae on Wednesday and Cuthbert Thursday.

Poultry pick-up cars have been routed by the bureau to make the following stops during the week:

Monday—Blue Ridge.

Tuesday—Thomasville, Eton, Chatsworth, Ellijay and Cedartown.

Wednesday—Moultrie, Fairmont, Dalton, Jasper, Rockmart.

Thursday—Tifton, Cartersville, Acworth, Canton, Bowman and Dallas.

Friday — Fitzgerald, Marietta, Woodstock, Elberton.

Saturday—Comer.

Incompleted reports indicated Saturday morning that April sales have exceeded $100,000, while completed reports for the first three months reached the grand total of $901,880.83, which compares with $647,268.88 for the first three months of last year.

April sales thus far include three cars of cattle loaded at Leesburg, approximating $10,000; between 27 and 30 cars of hogs which grossed about $35,000; a car of feeder pigs sold at Douglas for $985, bringing eight cents f. o. b. Dallas. Poultry offered during the month has been heavy and it is expected that when all reports are in the total will exceed $50,000.

Belated Motor Tag Buyers Are Warned

A warning that after May 1 a penalty of 20 per cent of the cost of the tag will be charged against all who have not purchased their 1930 auto licenses by that time, was broadcast by George H. Carswell, secretary of state, Saturday.

"This is the law and the motor vehicle department has no option in the matter of charging or not charging the extra fee. Therefore in order that this penalty may be avoided, all motorists who have not procured their tags should do so at once," Mr. Carswell stated.

Mr. Carswell said that license tag sales were running about $100,000 ahead of this date last year, and that a total of about $5,000,000 would be collected during the year.

Mrs. James Maddox, of Rome, wife of Judge James Maddox, of the Floyd superior court, and president of the Georgia unit of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Legion, was the principal speaker on a special program presented before the Harold Byrd Post No. 66 of the American Legion which met in the U. D. C. chapter house at Decatur Friday night. Mrs. Maddox was here in the interest of organizing a woman's auxiliary chapter in Decatur.

In addition to her speech other matters of interest were discussed, including the gift of a new sand lot baseball diamond to Decatur by Hugh Burgess. Grading on the diamond will begin Monday with Mr. Burgess and Frank Anderson, coach of Oglethorpe, in charge.

Tech Alumni Raise Research Work Fund

The revolving fund for research work at Georgia Tech which a small group of alumni started out to raise early in February has been underwritten by a group composed of Preston S. Arkwright, Eugene A. Brooks, '12; S. Candler Dobbs, Jr., '22; C. L. Emerson, '08; M. A. Ferst, '11; W. H. Glenn, '91; Robert Y. Jones, Jr., '22; Ferd Kaufman, '94; George T. Marchmont, '07; Berrien Moore, '04; Dr. Floyd McRae, '10; L. W. Roberts, Jr., '08; Robert W. Schwab, '07; Robert B. Wilby, '08; Goodloe H. Yancey, '06; Charles Collier, '10, and a few others.

It is understood that the amount of this fund to be repaid from the non-competitive research work and when the fund has served its purpose in placing a department on a self-sustaining basis, and has been returned to the governing board, it will be transferred to still another department.

3-Year-Old Child Injured by Auto

Betty Ruth Craddock, 3-year-old daughter of Mrs. Jessie Craddock, of 410 1-2 Crew street, was seriously injured early Saturday night when she stepped from a row of parked automobiles, into the path of a machine said to have been driven by L. Levy, of 592 North Boulevard street.

The accident occurred at Crew and Rawson streets. The little girl was taken to Grady hospital where an examination revealed that her skull was fractured, and an emergency operation was performed at once. No case has been made against Levy.

Mrs. S. E. Knox, of 672 Woodland avenue, Saturday night, was struck down at the intersection of Euclid and McLendon streets, by a car said to have been driven by E. D. Nelms, of Decatur. She was injured about the back and given treatment at Grady hospital. No case was made by Motorcycle Officers Foster and Queen.

Census Prospects Are Sent Coupons

Coupons by the thousands Saturday were going from the office of Dr. Elizabeth Broach, director of the census for the Atlanta district, to any census prospects who might possibly have failed to be counted by the enumerators in the government's decennial check of population.

One coupon is for those who themselves might have been overlooked, for any reason, and another for the names of those others might think have not been officially listed. Every effort is being made to complete the count by Wednesday night.

Building and Loan Association Lauded

Declaring that the Building and Loan Association in Decatur had done more in the upbuilding of Decatur and Fulton county than any other single factor, Scott Candler, mayor of that city, addressed the Lions Club of East Point Saturday.

The purpose of his address, he explained, was to develop work in East Point by the organization of a branch of the division of the Columbia Building and Loan Association of Atlanta. John H. Tait was invited by the Lions to outline the plan at a later meeting.

COLLEGE STARS SET 6 MARKS IN RELAY MEET

Ed Hamm, Farmer and Sanford Among Holders of Records.

By Herb Clark.

Six Southern Relays records were broken Saturday afternoon beneath the flying feet of some 400 of the south's best college athletes, competing on Grant Field in the eighth annual meeting.

A lanky young sophomore wearing dark blue of the University of North Carolina and hailing from Wilmington, N. C., personally supervised the splintering of two of those records. Young Charley Farmer's pistoning legs carried him over the 100-yard course in the excellent time of 9.8 seconds for the first of those records, and those same pistoning legs carried the Tarheel half-mile relay team from a mediocre second place to a flashing first in the record time of 1:29.6.

TARHEEL RECORD.

Farmer's mates accounted for two other records in the course of the day's action. The yearlings passed the baton over the two-mile route and coming back in 8:22, which positively ruined the old time of 8:40.4. And the Tarheel varsity mile relay quartet clipped half a second from the previous mark, crossing the finishing line in 3:24.7.

Ed Hamm, Georgia Tech's "Jumping Jacket," pasted 7 1-4 inches to his own old relays mark of 22 feet 2 1-4 inches in the broad jump, and retired from the competition. He was well ahead of the field and had stiffened a leg in an earlier event.

Sandy Sanford, did the balance of the record breaking as he added a quarter-inch to the old high jump record, sailing over the bar at 6 feet 3-4 inches.

CENTURY MARK.

This Farmer lad is one of these now whangs. He defeated a fast field in his heat of the century trials, stepping past the judges in 9.8 seconds. This is faster than old Dixie has been used to. Then, just to prove that there was no trick in it, Farmer repeated in the finals, 9.8 seconds again. And his field in the finals was plenty fast.

There was a note of tragedy in those finals. Ed Hamm, of Tech, and Percy Brown, of L. S. U., had been doped, with Farmer, as the class of the entry. Both Hamm and Brown had had little trouble in the trials. Both were expected to place nicely in the finals.

Yet the records show neither name. The records list Strong, of Chattanooga, as the second place winner, and list Smith, of Alabama, as the show sprinter.

Farmer's dashes took a title from Berriman, of Centre; Chandler, of Georgia; Cummings, of Virginia, and Gordon, of Indiana.

STILL AT IT.

Charley was not yet satisfied, however. Another quartet lost a title because of his prowess. The other quartet was a half-mile relay team from the University of Florida, who last year set a record at 1:31:2. Saturday these 'Gators set out to hold their claims. They led the field by almost five yards when the last man started. The Tarheels were in second place, and Charley Farmer was their anchor man. Charley slipped—that is the word—over the track, around Forrest Munger, of the 'Gators, and home in front by yards. And the new record was 1:29:6. Georgia Tech's squad placed third.

Farmer's day of work had come to its end. It had been a noble day of work. Two records do not fall to the lot of many young men in a single afternoon.

The Tarheels had not yet finished, however. The mile relay team fought its way round the track four times to see a new mark at 3:24:7, which clipped an even half-second from the old time of 3:25:2, and took the old record from the Mississippi Aggies, who were on hand to witness the feat. More than on hand, they pushed the Tarheels into it. They placed second to the Tarheels in a furious fight which lasted through four circuits of the track. And the Jackets were again third.

RATS SET RECORD.

That was the day for the Tarheel varsity. The yearlings who had done nothing as yet, cracked down with a vengeance in the two-mile relay, knocking 18.4 seconds from Auburn's old time of 8 minutes, 40.4 seconds. They flashed home in 8:22 with Georgia Tech second and Florida third.

Hamm and Sanford, saying it with leaps, enticed the other two new records into the books. Hamm was not hard pressed as he trounced the field with McCall, of Davidson, second and Bethea, of Florida, third.

Those were the records. There were other races, not so well-timed, per-

'Red' Cagle Signs As Aggie Coach

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 12.—Christine Keener Cagle, one of the greatest halfbacks who ever trod a gridiron, has accepted terms to be assistant football coach at Mississippi A. and M. College at Stakeville, Dr. B. M. Walker, president of the school, announced tonight.

In telegram to Dr. Walker, the All-American star of the army accepted a two-year contract tendered him by the school and will report for duty at the beginning of the next football season. He will be first assistant to Dudy Nobles, newly appointed head coach.

Dr. Walker announced that Captain Thomas A. Austin, former army star, has been assigned to A. and M. College for a period of four years as R. O. T. C. instructor, and will also serve on the football coaching staff.

Camera Shows Stages of High Hurdlers' Stride in Flats Race

How a hurdler measures his stride, "kicks off" and sails away over the timber is clearly shown in this unusual action picture of the 120-yard high hurdle finals in the Tech relays Saturday at Grant Field. From the pose of Terry, of North Carolina on extreme left to the flight of Whittle, of Davidson, over the bar at the extreme right are runners in all stages of the jump. Let the coaches criticize the form. The event was won by Whittle and Terry, far behind in his stride closed a big gap to finish second. Kenneth Rogers, Constitution staff photographer, made the photo.

Rating our baseball club as it now stands—peering over the fence just before beginning to play ball for keeps—is not an encouraging prospect.

The Crackers right now do not resemble a championship club. Considerable rebuilding will be necessary before the Crackers can be a contender.

This estimate is made on a basis of present strength as compared with other clubs in the league at this writing.

Now, the Cracker owners are men of too sound business judgment to sit still and have another fifth place club grow where three or four have grown before.

They will take steps and adopt measures to get a championship contender out there. Unofficially they are not satisfied with the entire stock of talent now on the shelves.

CHICKS AND BARONS BEST.

Looking over the Southern league, and taking the word of competent baseball observers for it, there appear to be two teams above the average.

Memphis and Birmingham look like the class of the field. I am inclined to think that the Chicks have improved over last year considerably and look best. The Barons are potentially as strong as last year but will lack incentive, having won two years in succession.

The Chattanooga Lookouts with the dynamic Joe Engel and his valuable connections higher up look remarkably like a first division club, probably third best in the league right now.

New Orleans has a fair looking mixture of cagey old timers and some youngsters who may or may not be good. The pitching staff, however, looks strong now.

Little Rock has a promising club that may prove the dark horse.

Nashville is unimpressive, but undoubtedly hard to beat at home.

Mobile is the eighth club in the league.

On present strength this column would rate them in order Memphis, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Atlanta, New Orleans, Little Rock, Nashville and Mobile.

As to the final order of finish it would be unpardonable guesswork to figure on probable injuries, strength obtained later from the majors and so on.

THE CRACKERS.

The Crackers have done poorly in exhibition games. Those defeats can be thrown out except in so far as the reverses indicate that the club is due for a slow start.

Several of the players are known to be slow starters anyhow. The pitching staff especially is capable of

COURT COACHES RETAIN TIP-OFF

Basketball Rules Body Makes Few and Minor Code Changes.

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—The international joint basketball rules committee, meeting here today, made several alterations in the rules but rejected the one suggestion that has aroused the most discussion, that the center jump be abolished.

Following the recommendations of the National Coaches' Association and of the majority of those who answered a questionnaire sent out last summer, the committee voted to retain this feature of the game.

The voting in answer to the questionnaire was 330 to 128 in favor of retention of the center jump. And of those who voted, 215 said they had experimented with the proposed change. The only concession to the opponents of the jump was the decision to continue experiments with other forms of putting the ball into play.

ONLY ONE THROW.

Perhaps the most important rule change was that a player who is fouled in the act of shooting a goal now gets credit for the field goal if he makes it but gets only one free throw. Formerly he got two foul shots whether the field goal was scored or not. Likewise, if the goal is made and the foul shot missed, the ball is in play instead of being returned to center for a jump-off.

Other rule changes were concerned principally with the center jump. One rule was that on a jump ball the ball may be tapped not more than twice by either player jumping, in or out of the circle. But if one jumper runs out of the center, the penalty was made a technical foul with one free throw for the opponent instead of merely giving it to the opposing team on the sideline. An exception to the rule was made where a jump-off is made near the basket and one player tips the ball in while the other runs out. Then the field goal counts and the foul is disregarded.

Another rule, made to allow more actual playing time, is that on a free throw the timer's watch shall not be started until the ball leaves the thrower's hands.

Several other subjects came up for discussion without being incorporated in the rules. The idea of using three officials, already adopted by the Eastern Intercollegiate league, was recommended but not made a rule because of financial consideration. On the question of stalling and freezing the ball it was decided to bring up the suggestion of limiting the dribble to

Fine Southern Season Expected By Martin

League Head Expects Atlanta To Be Tough On Rest of Clubs in Dixie Circuit.

By John D. Martin,
President Southern Association.
(Written for The Associated Press)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 12.—(AP)—And, now, here we are at the starting point of another baseball circle. Although this is my 12th season commencement in the school of Southern league experience I regard myself yet an undergraduate. In baseball there are always lessons to learn. No commencement within my memory has ever appeared more propitious for a rattling good pennant race.

Backed by a successful group of Atlanta businessmen, with Rell J. Spiller as executive, the Atlanta club in selecting as manager doughty Johnny Dobbs, former leader of pennant winning teams in three Southern league cities, has assured tough competition for the other clubs.

President W. D. Smith, of Birmingham, who for the past two seasons has presided at championship feasts, is still pennant greedy. Some wise folks say that he paved the way to repeat when he brought Manager Clyde Milan back to the league.

The keen-eyed Joe Engel, new president at Chattanooga, has built a new ball park, secured many new players and signed a new manager—not new in the game, however—Raw Meat Bill Rogers. Chattanooga never started a season with a team more highly rated by experts.

Himself once a great player, President Bob Allen, working in co-operation with his experienced manager, Jack Steele, has assembled a fast looking bunch to give warning that Little Rock must not be counted out in pennant possibilities.

The far-sighted president, Thomas R. Watkins, aided by his quick-thinking field general, Doc Prothro, has gathered together a team at Memphis which has showed outstanding strength in exhibition games.

Jimmy Hamilton, new president of the Mobile club, is a veteran in successfully meeting baseball problems and has repeatedly demonstrated his knack of keeping up the fighting morale of a team.

Jack Whaley, of Nashville, has proven that a successful publisher can be also a successful baseball executive. Among his other official actions, his selection of Clarence Rowland as leader of Nashville's team last year and again this season, is proof of the pudding. You remember Nashville's driving power.

At New Orleans the death of our lamented friend—that truly great baseball man, A. J. Heinemann—placed heavy cares upon the club owner. Mr. Charles Somers, however, from years of major league experience, is adequately equipped to keep his team up in the race. This end, he has a most worthy coadjutor in Manager Larry Gilbert, whose record always has been one, two, three. Larry's punch will keep any team on its toes.

Goodrich Fight Interest Mounts

Two orders for ringside seats from Columbus and four blocks reserved by different Macon fans swelled the advance sale of tickets for the Ted Goodrich-Sammy Baker fight April 22 to record proportions, Max Abelson, matchmaker, declared last night.

Such an early demand from nearby towns indicates that a record crowd will view the second venture of the sensational Atlanta welterweight against a top-notch contender, Abelson added. Goodrich recently knocked out Joe Dundee, who was champion until last summer, and earned national fame.

Goodrich is in Chicago today ready to fight Duke Trammell Monday night at one of the smaller clubs. It will be the first appearance of Goodrich in Chicago. He is anxious to make a good impression in the home town of Jackie Fields, the world's champion.

Georgia Lacrosse Team Beats Tech

ATHENS, Ga., April 12.—(AP)—Georgia's lacrosse team defeated Georgia Tech here this afternoon, 9 to 1, sweeping a two-game series.

Louis Crouch, Ocilla, Ga., scored four of Georgia's nine goals, and Red Mongrief, East Point, scored two with Johnson, Bomar and Gunnels one each. Anderson made Tech's lone score.

CRACKERS BEAT PEACHES, 7 TO 0

Lee Meadows Hurls Brilliant Game; Macon Gets Two Hits.

Atlanta's Crackers wound up their spring exhibition schedule yesterday afternoon with a 7-0 victory over the Macon Peachers at Spiller field. This gave the Crackers an even break in the two-game series, the Macca club having won the first game Friday afternoon.

Lee Meadows, who went eight innings for the Crackers, hurled brilliant ball for the homelings. The Peaches bagged only two hits during the afternoon.

Meadows was opposed by Richardson, who also hurled good ball until the Crackers found his weakness in the seventh inning and drove him from

LEE MEADOWS, FORMER PIRATE, TO SIGN TODAY

Manager Dobbs Cuts Squad; Ivy Wingo Released; Yelle Stays.

By Ralph McGill.

Roy Grimes, who for the past several seasons has been one of the leading first basemen in the International and American association baseball circuits, was purchased from Buffalo Saturday night by the Atlanta club and will report this morning.

This purchase, coming as a complete surprise despite the fact that Cracker officials were known to be casting about for a first baseman, was followed by the announcement that Lee Meadows, bespectacled pitcher, who was for many years with the Cardinals and Pirates, would be given a contract today.

A BUSY DAY.

Saturday was a busy day at the Cracker office. Late in the afternoon Ivy Wingo and Jimmy Long, catchers; Bull Rauch, Jim Brice and Lefty Wierman, pitchers; Doc Silva, outfielder, and Ivy Griffin, first baseman, were cut from the squad as Johnny Dobbs brought the club down to the limit of 18 players required by league rules.

This squad was upset by the purchase of Grimes and the fact that Meadows will be signed this morning. The squad, which will number 20 today, will be reduced today or Monday. The season begins Tuesday at Chattanooga.

Dobbs has not indicated what disposition will be made of Dick Burrus. He said that he would have a look at Grimes before he decided whether he would take him or not.

KOOB SLATED TO GO.

While no announcement has been made as to whom Lee Meadows will replace, it is practically certain that he will take Ernie Koob's place.

Meadows won his contract by going seven full innings against Macon Saturday afternoon and allowing but one hit, a single to right field in the first inning.

Johnny Dobbs, always an efficient trader and buyer in the baseball marts, has been busy as the one-armed paperhanger all the past week. He began it by trading Big Ed Brown to Dallas for Outfielder Si Rosenthal. The Grimes purchase and the decision to release Wingo outright and give Arch Yelle the first-string catching job, was followed by the announcement that Meadows had won a place.

GRIMES' BATTING.

Grimes batted .253 last season in 104 games, getting 11 home runs and 17 doubles. He was used as a pinch-hitter part of the year, and this handicapped him.

The Crackers are still not satisfied. There are other changes in the offing. John Dobbs is likely to produce another out of the hat before the first game at Chattanooga. Dobbs was no more satisfied with his club than the critics and he plans to get what he wants if it is at all possible.

When the sword of Damocles fell Saturday it left the Crackers with several players to dispose of. Two clubs are after Jim Brice, the right-handed youngster whose sore arm prevented him from making the grade this spring. Ivy Wingo was released outright. Brice, Wierman, Rauch and Silva are yet to be disposed of. Ivy Griffin was returned to Milwaukee.

CRACKER SQUAD.

The Cracker squad, as it stands, is as follows:

First Basemen—Dick Burrus and Roy Grimes.
Second Base—Jack Sheehan.
Shortstop—Jimmy Johnston.
Third Base—Milton Stock.
Utility Infielders—Jim Battle, Leo Bader.
Outfielders — Frank Walker, Elton Langford, Si Rosenthal.
Catchers—Arch Yelle, Cliff Knox.

The required five Class B men are: Knox, Sheehan, Bates, Walker and Bader.

MORE TRIMMING.

This squad must be reduced to 18 men before the game Tuesday at Chattanooga, when the Crackers open with the Lookouts in the first game of the season.

The Crackers play today at the federal prison, after an old Atlanta custom. Grimes will work out with the club, but it is undecided whether he will play or not. Grimes comes from Louisville, where the Buffalo club was Saturday.

"Grimes is a hard hitter," said Dobbs. "I tried to buy him two years ago for Birmingham after I saw him hit the scoreboard there. I don't know what I'll do about first base until I see him work.

Because of miserable weather during the last week of training camp and near-freezing weather on a road trip after quitting camp, the Crackers were

Judge Landis Predicts Close Major Races

By Kenesaw M. Landis,
Commissioner of Organized Baseball.

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Baseball and the millions who enjoy clean, fast games should have a great season this year.

The experts pick the Athletics to repeat in the American league and the Cubs to win again in the National, but they may be fooled. All the clubs have strengthened their forces considerably and I look for a hard, fast race in each league right down to the finish.

They look as open as a beggar's hand.

Given any kind of reasonable consideration by the weatherman, who has been forcing a lot of postponed games each spring for several years with his supply of rain and cold blasts, both major and minor leagues should have successful seasons.

I hope every game is an extra inning game and that the best teams win the pennants.

Suspense Heavy as Major League Teams Await Season's Start

CUBS, MACKS ARE FAVORED; UPSETS LIKELY

Harder Row Seen for Athletics; Grimes' Loss Hurts Pirates.

By Walter Trumbull.

(Copyright, 1930, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

NEW YORK, April 12.—The major league baseball season of 1930 gets under way tomorrow when the Boston Red Sox play at Washington, but the real beginning of the race is on Tuesday. Then Washington moves over to Boston, Cleveland plays in Chicago, St. Louis opens in Detroit and the Yankees and Mackmen mingle in Philadelphia.

In the National league the Chicago Cubs open in St. Louis, Pittsburgh goes to Cincinnati to meet Dan Howley's rejuvenated Reds, the Boston Braves play in Brooklyn, and the heavy hitting Phillies make their start in New York.

Every one of those games will carry interest. Because of the many changes in personnel there is more suspense in this year's baseball drama than has existed for a long time.

NEW MANAGERS.

The Yankees, the Chicago White Sox, the Boston Red Sox, the St. Louis Browns, the Boston Braves, the St. Louis Cards, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cincinnati Reds—which is to say half of the big league teams—start the season with new managers, and almost every club has one or more new players in the lineup. Some teams have been almost made over. Naturally there is interest.

By reason of these changes the races this season are harder to dope than usual. It generally is conceded that the Athletics and the Chicago Cubs should repeat, but after you put those two at the top there is little real certainty of anything, except, perhaps, that the Red Sox look to have last place assured in the American league.

Pittsburgh seemed the most likely club for second place in the National league, but the loss of Grimes may make a big difference. The Pirates only finished three games ahead of New York last year. St. Louis was six and one-half games back of the Giants and seven and one-half games ahead of Philadelphia. Brooklyn was one game back of Philadelphia. Cincinnati was four and a half games back of Brooklyn, and ten games ahead of Boston.

PIRATES WEAKER.

To my mind Pittsburgh is not quite as strong; the Giants are stronger and likely to get better breaks than they got last season; St. Louis is about the same; Philadelphia is a bit-

BASEBALL NOTES

Vols Swamp Millers.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 12.—(AP)—Three Minneapolis pitchers gave up 19 hits to Nashville and the Volunteers won easily over the American Association team, 12 to 3.

Sunny Jim Poole, home run king of Dixie, blasted two balls over the right field fence for four bases. A runner was on base each time. Poole also got a triple and a single in five trips to the plate.

The visitors made their three runs in the first inning off two singles and two walks. Boehler finished the game in great style.

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—The New York Yankees made their 1930 debut at the stadium today, taking a 4-to-3 trimming from the Brooklyn Dodgers in the first of the annual exhibition series.

Jake Flowers' home run off Waite Hoyt in the sixth inning put over what proved to be the decisive run after the Yankees had knotted the count in their half of the fifth. Bissonette also found Hoyt for a homer. In his three innings on the mound Hoyt was touched for seven of the Dodgers nine hits and three-fourths of their runs.

Vance and Elliott scattered the Yankees' seven hits, the latter allowing but one safety in the last four rounds. Roy Sherid, who relieved Hoyt, had the Dodgers at his mercy in the final three innings.

Babe Ruth limped around in right field but went hitless, a walk being his best attempt offensively. Despite the chilly weather 10,000 fans were out to welcome the Yankees back home.

KAYE DON OFF FOR CONFERENCE WITH COATALEN

British Racer Not Expected To Return Before Next January.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 12. (AP)—Having indefinitely postponed his attempt to shatter the world's automobile speed record of 231 miles an hour, Kaye Don, British race car driver, left here late today for a conference with Louis Coatalen, designer of his Silver Bullet machine, to decide upon plans for the future.

Don has engaged passage on the liner Aquitania leaving New York for Southampton, England, next Wednesday, but whether he will return home then or wait in this country indefinitely for another attempt on the record will depend largely on the outcome of his conference with Coatalen. He has said, however, that he desires to return home immediately to participate in races in England this summer, and it is considered doubtful if he makes another trial for the record before next year.

THWARTED ATTEMPT.

The English driver has been here six weeks and during that time motor trouble, inclement weather and a rough beach have combined to thwart his record-breaking attempt. The highest officially timed speed he was able to attain in 22 trials during that time was 188 miles an hour, although on one test, which was not officially clocked, he claimed he reached a speed of 198.

Don will arrive in New York Sunday night and expects to go immediately into a conference with Coatalen regarding plans for the future. The French designer has repeatedly urged Don to remain here indefinitely for a good beach in order that another attempt on the record could be made, but it is understood the driver virtually has decided to abandon all hope of making additional trials and return to England.

Before leaving for New York Don said he was undecided whether he ever would return here again or not. He holds a three-year lease on the car, which he obtained from its factory in England, and hinted that if he decided to make other record-breaking attempts he might go to South Africa, where Malcolm Campbell, another English driver and former record holder, made an unsuccessful assault on the land speed mark a year ago.

Fights Tuesday

This is Jimmy Watts, Atlanta boy, who will fight before his home folks for the first time Tuesday night at the Atlanta theater when he meets Joe Lucas, Detroit featherweight, in a 10-round bout.

Lucas Will Arrive Monday for Bout.

Joe Lucas, featherweight mitt slinger from Detroit, will arrive in this city Monday for his fight Tuesday night at the Atlanta theater with Jimmy Watts, home-grown, nationally known fistic product. The bout is being promoted by Eddie Hanlon, who is firmly convinced that it is the best he has offered ring people in quite a while.

Watts has been working at top speed all week getting ready for this fight. He meets, in Lucas, a tough puncher with a mule-like kick in either fist and the Atlanta lad realizes that he isn't in for an evening by the radio listening to Amos 'n' Andy.

HIS DEBUT HERE.

It will mark the first time that Watts has ever fought in his home town. He has traveled pretty thoroughly about the country, gaining favor with fight fans everywhere for his tactics, but this is his first shot at the home folks. He is determined that his shall be a pleasing performance Tuesday night and is eager for a victory over Lucas.

Hanlon has a good card backing up the main bout, which is booked for 10 rounds. He has, in addition to the feature, a couple of other 10-round bouts worthy of consideration. In one of them, Bud Clark, from Vincennes, Ind., will fight Jimmy (K. O.) Smith, of LaGrange.

Young Smith has fought here three times and has won all of his engagements by knockouts. He is a very popular young man about LaGrange and seems to have won something of a following in Atlanta. Hanlon likes his style and says that he has a good opponent in Clark, who is no bad scrapper.

JONES AND CLIFTON.

Casey Jones will mix it with Ike Clifton, another LaGrange pug. Jones is an Atlanta lad and has been fighting in this vicinity for a year or so. He is a welterweight and a promising looking young fellow. He and Clifton fought a draw in LaGrange not so long ago and they were sought for a return match there but Hanlon got to the boys first.

Battling Maddox and Jim Hanson will open the show with a six-round bout that promises plenty of action.

This will give a total of 36 rounds on Hanlon's Tuesday card. The veteran promoter said Saturday night that he guaranteed action in every round and states that it will be a boxing card the like of which Atlanta hasn't seen in some time.

Following is Tuesday's complete card:

Battling Maddox vs. Jim Hanson, 6 rounds.
Casey Jones vs. Ike Clifton, welters, 10 rounds.
Bud Clark vs. K. O. Smith, lightweights, 10 rounds.
Jimmy Watts vs. Joe Lucas, feathers, 10 rounds.

Piedmont, Bowdon Divide Two Games

DEMOREST, Ga., April 12.—The Piedmont baseball nine broke even with the fast Bowdon College team in a two-game series here. Bowden won the first game by the score of 11 to 5. The score was tied 5 and 5 until the ninth inning when the Bowdon sluggers pounded Lawrence, Piedmont pitcher, for four hits and drew three walks to increase the score to 11 to 5. John Mize, for Piedmont, hit safely five times, getting a homer, a triple and three singles. L. Garrett and Simpson were best hitters for Bowden.

The second game was close throughout. The pitching of Spivey, Piedmont, was outstanding. Simpson, of Bowden, hit a homer, and Mize, of Piedmont, got a triple.

Soccer Team Plans South American Trip

The Hakoah All Stars soccer team of New York city will tour South America this summer. Plans call for 12 games in Brazil and four in Argentina. Three or four games also will be played in Uruguay if the world championship tournament series in which the United States will be represented by a strong eleven, scheduled to begin at Montevideo late in July, does not interfere.

HUGE PROGRAM IS SCHEDULED OPENING DAY

Jaycees Seek Record Crowd as Crackers Start Here Thursday.

"One for all—all for one—let's go!"

That is the slogan adopted by the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce in its drive to set a new attendance record at Spiller field Thursday afternoon when Atlanta's Crackers open their home season with Chattanooga as the opposition.

Mayor Ragsdale has declared a half-holiday for all city employes Thursday, and numbers of private proclamations to the same effect are expected. Over 400 telegrams have been sent to leading business houses asking their cooperation by either closing or giving leave of absence to as many employes as possible. Many affirmative responses to the wires have been received by the Jaycee committee, and many more should reach the committee before Thursday.

An extensive entertainment program has been arranged to precede the game.

LUCK PIECE.

Atlanta Lodge No. 78 B. P. O. Elks is to present Johnny Dobbs, new Cracker manager, with a giant horseshoe floral piece just before the game to wish him and his club luck through the season.

A detachment of United States marines is to be on hand with a new flag for a ceremony which is also to precede the game.

And a number of Atlanta's oldest and best rooters have promised to do their own private versions of Nick Altrock as an added prelude.

The preliminaries dispensed with, the ball game is to start. Mrs. John Knox, president of the Atlanta Junior League, will toss the first ball to the box, and the activities will be under way in earnest.

Johnny Dobbs and his crew will do well to unlimber their war clubs right speedily in this first game. Prizes to an astounding number have been offered for feats of slugging and speed.

HOMER PRIZES.

The first home run by a Cracker will bring the wielder of the stick a floor lamp, a wrist watch, a ring, a suit of clothes, and enough groceries to keep the wolf away for a day or so, just among other things. More prizes are slated for a later offering. Triples and stolen bases are also to be rewarded, according to present plans.

Atlanta's school children have been befriended by the Jaycee committee, which has gone before the school board in a drive to secure permission to close the schools early Thursday afternoon to permit as many of the youngsters as possible to be at Spiller field for the game. No action has yet been taken by the authorities, but the Jaycees hope for and expect a favorable response early this week.

Barrett, Memphis Catcher, Is Out

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 12.—(AP)—The Memphis Chicasaws will be without the services of Bill Barrett, catcher, when the 1930 Southern Association season gets under way Tuesday. Barrett went on the retired list today due to an injured leg. When he will be able to play, was considered problematical.

Barrett broke a leg more than a year ago and the effects of the injury still was in evidence during the training season this spring.

WEST IS VICTOR IN MIAMI MEET

MIAMI, Fla., April 12.—(AP)—Jimmy West, Miami, added the fifth title to his 1929-30 seasonal galaxy today when he came from behind to defeat Lawrence Sherrill, Tampa, for the championship of the 16th annual state amateur tournament.

West scurried to the clubhouse with a 2-and-1 victory in a match that ended on the 35th hole, after both he and Sherrill had developed streaks of brilliant golfing in a scheduled 36-hole match over Miami Country Club course. The finalists played through the day under cloudy conditions, and faced a cross wind through the day that held medal scores above par.

Purples Shut Out By Gordon, 15 to 0

BARNESVILLE, Ga., April 12.—Captain Somers' Gordon institute team made it eight victories in a row here this afternoon by blanking the Boys' High team of Atlanta, 15-0.

Dixon, Gordon hurler, allowed only three scattered hits and was never in danger. Features of the game were the battery work of Dixon and Vance and the heavy hitting of Owens, Anderson and Godfrey. Coach Somers used 16 men in the game. Baldwin played best for Boys' High.

OXFORD EIGHT IS NOSED OUT BY CAMBRIDGE

Oxonians Are Unable To Hold Lead, Cracking at Finish.

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, England, April 12.—(AP)—Cambridge University with an American coxswain, R. E. Swarthout, of New York, at the tiller, won its annual boat race with Oxford today by two lengths in a match so stubbornly contested that the result was always in doubt right up to the last three-quarters of a mile.

Followed by the roar of a million excited throats which swept along both banks of the Thames from Putney to Mortlake in the wake of the rival boats, the Oxford crew spurted into a quarter length lead from the crack of the starting pistol, maintained it at a grueling pace for nearly four miles, only to crack up on the home stretch and see Cambridge nose its way to victory.

They made a magnificent effort to win, those boys in dark blue, setting the pace throughout a terrific race. But Cambridge's staying power beat them and at the finish the entire light blue crew remained sitting upright looking fresh while the Oxonians, very much distressed, lay over their oars, gasping for breath.

Cambridge rowed the course of four and a quarter miles in 19 minutes, 9 seconds, fast time under the conditions.

By winning the Cantabs established superiority over Oxford in total wins for the first time since before the American Civil War. It was the seventh consecutive victory for Cambridge, which now has a total score of 41 victories as compared to Oxford's 40 wins, which, however, include two strings of nine consecutive victories. Honors were divided in one dead heat which occurred in 1877.

Caddy Tourney Opens Monday

Barons Set For 1930 With Better Pitching, Well-Balanced Club

'29 CHAMPIONS ARE EXPECTED TO WIN AGAIN

Only One New Player To Be in Opening Lineup Tuesday.

By Zipp Newman.

BIRMINGHAM, April 12.—Strike up the band! Let's have John D. Martin's popular march, "The Pennant Winners," a best seller in Birmingham for two years. The Barons will go down in defense of the Dixie title Tuesday with a finer ball club that took the field one year ago. More experienced pitchers and a better balanced outfield are the improvements to be noted over a year ago.

While the Barons count on the Vols, Chicks and Lookouts to be troublesome in the full meaning of the word, they are not overlooking the Pelicans and Crackers. Johnny Jump-Up Dobbs will bob up with a good ball club before the season is over, if he doesn't start with one. Hand-clapping Johnny has a way of obtaining ball players—that is if the cash holds out.

BARONS PICKED.

Birmingham is picked against the field because the Barons are returning almost intact. There will be one new ball player in the champions' lineup when they take the field in Nashville—Eddie Taylor at short. And Eddie can't be classified as a rookie in playing experience, although he is down on the roster as a class B player. Taylor has looked very keen afield and has walloped the ball hard and far—living up to his reputation as one of the most valuable cogs in the Canton pennant-winning club last year.

Ray Francis, Bob Hasty and Dick Ludolph, who carried the pitching burden for the Barons last year, will have two crafty sharpshooters in Joe Pate and Ray Caldwell to help them this year.

For experience no five other hurlers in the league can match Francis, Caldwell, Hasty, Ludolph and Pate. Milan will have four righthanders and three southpaws. Classifying Ray Caldwell as a Class B player gives Old Deerfoot three Class B hurlers.

ROOKIE FINDS.

Millard Campbell and Fielding Plue, two rookies, were the finds of spring training.

The return to form of Yam Yarvan the big powerhouse of the Baron's attack, has been highly encouraging to Yam's teammates. Yam has looked himself this spring. Frank Gibson, considered the smartest catcher in the league last year, has improved with a winter layoff.

Milan was fortunate to inherit three of the big cogs of the Baronial infield and if Brute Pickering doesn't show a big improvement over his last year's form—the drinks will be on Brute's playmates.

The return of Sturdy and Black means that the right side of the infield will be well guarded. When better first basemen than Sturdy show up in the Southern, they will soon go to the majors.

Jiggy Black painted the clouds with sunshine for the Barons last year. He made fans forget that Judge Landis made a free agent of Jay Patridge.

GOOD HITTERS.

There are no fence busters in the Baron's outfield, neither will there be any broken arms. Susko, Moore Bennett and Weis are all in perfect health. They can run, field and hit, composing a nifty balanced quartet of fly chasers.

Pro Golf Leaders.

Figures showing the prowess of the nation's leading golfers bring out the fact that while people said Hagen was slipping, he actually climbed into fifth place in 1929 medal scoring, while he hadn't even ranked in the first 10 in 1928. And two bright stars, Horton Smith and Densmore Shute, crowded into first and third places in 1929, pushing down the old guard. Diegel, who was first in 1928, dropped only to second, but Johnny Farrell, Joe Kirkwood, Mac Smith, Al Watrous and Bobby Cruickshank dropped out of the first 10 altogether, leaving that steady performer, Gene Sarazen, still among the five or six best. One new face in the big ten, who is likely to play along with Smith and Shute, is long-driving Fred Morrison, from southern California.

Bigelow and His Big Bat

Elliott Bigelow, the bludgeoneer, is expected to be of considerable help to Joe Engle's Lookouts in the Southern association race, which is just around the corner. Bigelow is an adept at the fine art of murdering the baseball and the Lookouts are counting upon him heavily for some healthy base hits and runs this season.

GILBERT LIKES PELICAN CLUB

New Orleans Pilot Believes Entry Will Make Strong Bid.

By Wm. McG. Keefe.

NEW ORLEANS, April 12.—Larry Gilbert's decks are cleared for action and out of the uncertainties of early spring he believes he has rounded up a respectable lineup to throw into the 1930 Southern league pennant race. For clearing up the situation for the Pelicans, the Cleveland Indians are to be thanked.

When the Pelicans come to grips with Jimmy Hamilton's Mobile Bears here Tuesday, a much stronger team will be wearing the N. O. monogram than started the season last year. Gilbert doesn't know at this writing who his starting pitcher will be, but he has four good men to pick from.

"Whitey" Glazner has asked for the assignment of opposing his old mates here Tuesday. He may get it. He is in fine form. So is Oscar Fuhr, the Pelicans' lone southpaw—another ex-Bear. Fred Johnson, still another former Mobilian, never looked better.

HELP RETURNS.

Return of Bean and Mike Powers from Cleveland certainly removed a load from Larry Gilbert's mind. But then, too, the manner in which Tommy Taylor and Eddie Montage have come through in the spring games has been more than satisfactory.

George Detore is a big youngster farmed out by Cleveland and he is supposed to be a terrific hitter.

Bill Wambsgans, at one time one of the smartest and most capable secondsackers in the majors, probably has the keystone job clinched, though Ed Harrington, a newcomer to the Pelican fold, was showing lots of stuff until he was injured.

ANDERSON BACK.

The reliable Don Anderson, who played throughout last season with a fractured bone in his foot, will do the bulk of the Pelican catching. And "Hoot Mon Don" is no green hand behind the bat—nor yet wielding the said bat.

Gilbert believes Blakesley, Eichrodt and Powers give him as good an outfield as there is in the league. He believes Johnson, Fuhr, Glazner and Bean are four topnotch hurlers—as good as any team will show—and he has lots of confidence in Benny Karr having a good year. Frankie Stewart and Les Barnhardt, two rookies from the Three-I league, each have shown lots of pitching form and one of them is almost sure to stick.

McGraw Gets Corner On Southpaw Market

John McGraw's pennant hope this year is based on a trio of star southpaw pitchers—Hubbell, Walker and Pruett. The present crop of lefthanders ranks high, but McGraw has had a long list of better ones during his management of the Giants.

One of the first of the noted southpaws was Hooks Wiltse, of 25 years back. Rube Marquard was good enough to command a purchase price of $11,000, the record price of a ball player 22 years ago. Ferd Schupp, Rube Benton and Art Nehf were others who cost money. McGraw had a chance to get Lefty Grove but chose instead Jack Bentley, who didn't last many seasons.

Vols After Hurler To Round Out Club

New Pitcher Must Be Right-Hander—Rowland Plans to Carry Seven Pitchers.

By Freddie Russell.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 12.—With 17 seats reserved, Manager Clarence Rowland has the 18-passenger Nashville Volunteer bus parked first in line along the Southern league speedway waiting for the light to turn green on April 15, signifying the opening of the thirtieth Dixie pennant chase.

A pitcher, and a right-hander at that, will climb aboard sometime Monday to fill the one vacant place. At present, those assured of positions on the squad are two catchers, six pitchers, five infielders and four outfielders. It was Rowland's intention to carry five gardners, but a last-minute change has indicated the fact that seven ptichers will be included in the 18-player roster.

The seventh pitcher will be chosen from Herb Bradley, Harry Bennett, George Kirsch, Ernie Alten, Bill Droll and Roy Sanders. It is most likely to be either Bradley or Bennett, as the others have been used very little during the exhibition games and the only reason they remain is because Manager Rowland has been unable to place them with some other club.

Ten players of the 1929 club are listed among those sure to be carried. These are Ernie Krueger, George Milstead, George Boehler, Chuck Willis, Thad Campbell, Jim Poole, Jay Partridge, Joe Klugman, Blackie Carter and John Anderson. Rowland thinks the presence of these veterans will be an important factor in taking the Vols to the top rung of the ladder.

MOORE TO CATCH.

Bill Moore, purchased from Mobile, will do most of the receiving, with Krueger relieving and acting as somewhat of a coach to the young pitchers.

Willis and Milstead are the only southpaw hurlers to be carried, and one of them will hurl the opening game against Birmingham. The giant Boehler is in great shape, being 20 pounds lighter than when he reported last season. Campbell's finger has healed entirely and he should be as effective as ever with his knuckle ball.

Jim Poole and Jay Partridge are back at first and second, respectively, withr Joe Klugman slated for the utility job.

TWO NEWCOMERS.

Two central leaguers, Ollie Marquardt and Syl Aixon, will look after the left side of the infield. These boys swiped many bases between them last year and should provide the speed that was missing from the Vols in 1929.

Blackie Carter is a fixture in left, with Red Harvel, on option from Dallas, scheduled to play center. John Anderson will be on the right field dump when a southpaw works for the opposition, otherwise it will be Frank Luce.

Niemic in Baseball.

Johnny Niemic, former football star at Notre Dame, is a member of the Wheeling club. He plays third.

LITTLE ROCK'S CATCHER FEARS DIXIE WEATHER

Travelers Set Except for Absent Player Afraid of Warmth.

By Henry Loesch.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 12.—If Bob McMenemy had not gotten so thoroughly in the notion that it gets too hot in the south to play it seems impossible to persuade him otherwise—the Little Rock Travelers would be in better shape to go out and make a fight for it from the start of the season Tuesday than any previous Little Rock club ever was. That's what Manager Jack Steele thinks of his 1930 club and the fans here quite generally agree with him.

"I am going to get a team of ball players who can play ball and I'm going to have them here in the spring," Jack said last fall.

R. G. Allen, owner of the club, told him to go to it and helped him.

The club needed a third baseman. Allen and Steele went to Milwaukee and bought Harry Strohm. He's a real third baseman, looking just as good here this spring as he did with Nashville in 1925.

GOT SHORTSTOP.

A shortstop was needed. They went to Chicago and got George "Buck" Redfern from the Chicago Americans. He'll be about the best shortstop in the Southern association this year.

They needed a couple of catchers. They bought Bob McMenemy from Milwaukee and all that's the matter with Bob is that he thinks it's too hot to play ball down here and he won't report. That may cause some trouble. They did better on their other catcher deal when they signed Harry Kandler off the "Grape Nuts" team at Battle Creek, Mich. Harry looks like the genuine article behind the bat.

They had to have a couple of outfielders. They got Doug Taitt from the White Sox—Taitt who was with Nashville in 1927 and hit .350. Doug is on the job and says that it will be .350 or better again this year. Then they made a deal with the Dallas club for young Fred Kester, who was up at Canton with Jimmy Hamilton last year. Little Rock swapped Hugh Willingham for him and it seems to have been a good deal.

They wanted some more pitchers and they got them, too. They bought Charlie Barnabe outright from the White Sox. Charlie helped Dallas win the Texas league pennant last spring. They bought Joe Eddleman, wise old left-hander from Milwaukee. Joe rather thinks that the hot weather will help him win 20 or more games for Little Rock.

SECOND SACKER.

They didn't find a second baseman on their buying expedition of the winter but one walked in on them this spring—a young red-headed youngster from Little Rock college. Leo "Red" Concannon. He looks like he might fill the order.

Left from last year they had a flock of good pitchers, including Leo Moon, Jim Moore, Bill Hughes and Charlie Eckert. Phil Mulchay, who couldn't win last year, is back and looks to be in good condition. "Chili" McDaniel of last year's team remains on first base and Eddie Rose still is in left field and he's been hitting like a fiend in the exhibition games.

In the pitching box, in the outfield, at third and short the Little Rock club is immensely stronger than last year. Absence of McMenemy makes the catching department the only weak spot, provided Concannon holds up at second base. What will be done if McMenemy won't come in remains to be seen. The only way out seems to be to get another catcher who isn't afraid of the heat.

"It's the best ball club that I have had here and it will be in the race all the way," Steele said today. "We've got the pitching and the batting punch, we have a great infield and a fine outfield. Kandler is a real catcher and we'll have McMenemy or another man just as good in a very short time. I think that our club is as good if not better than any other in the league."

Darlington Netmen Beat Baylor, 5 to 1

ROME, Ga., April 12.—Darlington school's great tennis team stepped closed to the southern prep title here today by scoring an overwhelming victory over the strong team of the Baylor Academy of Chattanooga by the score of 5 to 1. The Cadets' only victory was won by Bryan, second ranking junior of the south, who ran into the stubborn kind of opposition in Atlanta's flashy Jimmie Halverstadt, captain of the Darlington team, and third ranking junior player of Dixie.

Several times the youthful Darlington ace faltered with victory almost in his grasp after having won the first set but Bryan's superior speed was the decisive factor. The score of this match was 4-6, 9-7, 6-1.

Darlington's first doubles team which has not lost a single set this year, romped away with Bryan and Anderson, 6-1, 6-4. Lafferty, Hoyt and Nixon, of Darlington, won in straight sets. Baylor was weakened by the absence of its second man, Crumbliss. Darlington plays University School in Atlanta Monday and Baylor in Chattanooga again on Monday week.

Purple Golfers Trim Darlington

ROME, April 12.—Boys' High powerful golf team went far towards cinching a southern title here today when it defeated the expert linksmen of Darlington school on the Coosa Country Club course. The outstanding star was Captain Berrien Moore, of the Atlanta quartet, who downed Captain McWilliams, of Darlington, conqueror of Will Gunn last year. Yates and Dodge also won their matches for Boys' High. At a later date these two teams will meet in Atlanta to settle definitely the championship.

Anniversary Fete Planned by Canoers

The American Canoe Association will celebrate its 50th anniversary from August 1 to 15. Louis Stroughton Drake, of Newton, Mass., is commodore and has been active in the association for more than 45 years. Rated as one of the country's foremost paddlers for 20 years he won his first race on the Charles river, Boston, in 1883, and never beaten in a single or double blade contest, as a member of the Wawbewawa Canoe Club.

Chicks' Pitching Best Feature of 1930 Club

Punch at Plate Should Produce Better-Than-Average Number of Runs; Defense Mediocre.

By Herbert Caldwell.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 12.—A town that should get good pitching, with a punch at bat that should be productive of runs but with a mediocre defense, that's a safe and sane summing up of the Chickasaw team that will inaugurate the 30th annual Southern league campaign with the Travelers of Little Rock next Tuesday afternoon.

This deduction is based upon the performances of Chicks during the 13 exhibitions in which they have outhit their opponents in a majority of the games and in most instances have had as good or better pitching than their opponents of a higher classification.

James Thompson ("Doc") Prothro, who learned his A B C's in baseball on the local sand lots, is starting out upon his third season as chief of the tribe, and is satisfied with the team he has to start with.

"I think we have the best pitching staff and more hitting strength than we have ever started a season with," said Chief Prothro. "We are stronger offensively than defensively, but if the pitchers live up to expectations the Chicks should make plenty of runs, and that will balance whatever weakness there is in the defense."

"I believe the race will be closer this season than it a long time," continued the chief, "and figure we will have to beat some good teams, but I believe the Chicks will be in the running from beginning to end."

There have been changes in five positions since last season in addition to four new additions to the pitching staff. Frank Brazill, who played the utility role last season and batted .343, has replaced Sam Leslie at first base. Ray Flaskamper, who batted .274 for Dallas last season, has taken the place of Charlie Engle at short. Frank Waddey, last season with Knoxville, where he batted .354, will be in left. Sam Vick, last season with Chattanooga; Joe Hutcheson who came here late in the season from Jackson, Miss., and Dick Tangeran who finished the season here, are the other three outfielders from which two will be picked. Vick is certain to be one and Hutcheson likely will be the other. Vick batted .333 last season and is a right-handed hitter. Hutcheson batted .360 for Jackson and Tangeran .326 here after coming from Jacksonville.

Gilly Campbell, the youngster who hit .324 for Eldorado last season, has taken the place of Joe Palm as understudy to Johnny Berger behind the bat.

The newcomers among the pitchers are Johnny Walker, here in 1928. He won 25 and lost 9 for Knoxville last season. Tony Welzer, a former Bear who won 10 and lost 13 for Louisville last season; Walter Beck who won 12 and lost 11 for Chattanooga and Leon Pettit, who won and lost five for Eldorado. The leftovers are Clarence Griffin, Roscoe Shepperd and Harry Kelly. Griffin, Walker and Pettit are left-siders.

Harry Dougherty, young third baseman last season with Charlotte, who batted .289, will play the infield utility role. Doc Prothro will be at third, where he played last season, and Royce Williams will be back at second, and Tex Jones back in center field.

MOBILE PLANS BIG SURPRISE

Hamilton Predicts Hard-Hitting, Heads-Up Baseball Team.

By G. J. Flournoy.

MOBILE, Ala., April 12.—The Mobile Bears of 1930 are going to surprise many people who have predicted them to finish way down. Manager Jimmy Hamilton, principal owner and manager of the club, says that the 18 men he has corralled to represent the Gulf city will provide the Southern association this season with lots of heavy hitters and that his team is a first division outfit.

"I have a fairly good pitching staff in Maple, holdover from last season, and Lefy Dyer, from the Terre Haute club, left-handers; Axel Lindstrom, last season from the Canton pennant-winning club of the Cetral league; Early Brown, from the Charlotte team in the Sally league, a hurler whom Bob Shawkey and Jewel Ens both took much interest in during the recent exhibition games here; Harold Roberts, from the Jersey City team; John Burdick, from Akron club, who held the Pittsburgh Pirates to two hits for three innings; and last, but not least, Tom Rogers, from the Macon (Ga.) team, relief hurler; the last five being right-handers. "If this pitching staff is not good enough for the Martin loop then others will be brought in," said Manager Hamilton.

CATCHERS IMPROVED.

The catching staff of the Mobile club is an improvement over last year. Dewey Hill, from the Erie (Pa.) team of the Central league, will outhit and outthrow Leo Mackey, first-string backstop last season; while Ralph Minatree, from the Nashville and Chattanooga clubs of last season, succeeds Billy Moore, now with Nashville.

Rebel Russell, veteran from the majors and last season with the Quincy club in the Three-Eye league, has cinched the first base place with the Hamilton club. Russell has been hitting to far places for years and should prove a terror to Southern pitchers.

Johnny Chapman, who has led the team at the bat in the 18 exhibition games played this year, will take care of second base for the Bears.

Joe Longnecker, formerly with the Jacksonville team in the Southeastern league, has been nominated for shortstop. Longnecker covers plenty of space in his territory and has shown great improvement at the bat in the past ten days.

STANDAERT SHINES.

Jerry Standaert at third base is the class of the circuit. Transferred back to his old position this player, with his leg injury entirely healed up, has played brilliantly.

Dutch Hoffman, a veteran of the Texas, Southern and Central leagues, who helped Jimmy Hamilton win the pennant at Canton, Ohio, last season, will be the utility infielder.

Hamilton will carry four outfielders to start the season. Lyman Lamb, from the Beaumont club, and George Stumpf, the latter a New Orleans boy, will alternate in left field. Stumpf came to the Bears last season from the Baton Rouge club of the Cotton States league in the last two weeks.

Otto Dumas, another standout player with the Bears, will take care of the middle field for the Bears. Few fielders in the circuit compare with Dumas.

Dutch Howard Welch, a utility infielder who has been with the Mobile club for five years, in and out, shifted to numerous clubs last year and then recalled, will be used in right field.

Homans Is Victor In North-South

PINEHURST, N. C., April 12.—(AP)—Eugene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., today won the north and south golf tournament, defeating C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ontario, in the final match, 3 and 1.

The 34th hole, which Homans won to go dormie two, furnished the climax to their match. Somerville put his second shot on the par 5 hole on the green for an easy birdie 4 and appeared to have a good chance of squaring the match when Homans was just off the green with his second.

Homans then chipped into the hole for an eagle 3 while Somerville took two putts for his birdie.

On the 35th Homans then drove to within eight feet of the pin while Somerville's tee shot caught a trap. The Canadian then conceded Homans a birdie two and the match.

Purple Netmen Defeat McCallie

Boys' High tennis squad stormed through a match with the Cadet netmen from McCallie on the Piedmont park courts Saturday morning without the loss of a single set, trouncing the visitors, 6-0.

Never during the course of any of the individual matches were the Purple players pushed.

Morrison opened the attack for the Atlanta squad by turning Massee back at 6-4, 6-2. Tumlin kept the work going at full tilt as he yielded but two games in downing Rogers at 6-1, 6-1. Wooten scored a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Murff, and Glenn completed the rout in the singles matches and assured Boys' High of the day's laurels by outplaying Allison at 61, 6-2.

West and Wooten paired to subdue Allison and Bowles in the doubles by scores of 6-3 and 6-1, while Morrison and Tumlin gave up but one game to Rogers and Murff, winning at 6-1, 6-0, to give the Purples a clean sweep.

Memphis to Giants.

John Heving, Giant pitching recruit, started as an outfielder but exhibited such a great whip he was put to the pitching job. The Giants got him from Memphis for $12,500.

FINE PROSPECTS CHEER LOOKOUTS FOR BEGINNING

Chattanooga Expects To Grab First Division Berth in '30 Race.

By Bill Clift.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 12. With the best prospects of any Chattanooga team in history to make a berth for themselves in the northern division of the Martin pennant race, the Lookouts eagerly await the opening game Tuesday afternoon.

Only seven members of the 1929 Lookouts remain on the list. They are a pair of infielders and four pitchers. The other 11 men have been brought in from major or Class AA clubs.

The Lookout catching department is entirely new, removing one of the most glaring weaknesses of the 1929 team. Eddie Kenna, a former Vol, was brought down from Minneapolis and assisting him will be Cliff Bolton, a youngster who came to the Lookouts from Washington. Bolton also will serve as utility outfielder to make room for Tiny Goodbread as coach and trainer.

BOSS ON FIRST.

Harley Boss, chief understudy of Joe Judge of the Senators, will be on first. He went to the Nats from Little Rock. Boss is on 24-hour recall and is not expected to be left here all season. Wallie Dashell, capable second baseman of the 1929 team, will again be at the keystone.

Charlie Gooch, another former Pebble, came from Washington to play third base, while Bobby Lamotte, with Memphis several years ago, will play short. Ray Treadway, member of the 1929 team, will serve as utility infielder.

Every member of the infield has hit more than .360 in Class A baseball, which insures the fact that the Engelmen will have quite a punch the coming season. In addition, they are as good fielders as most of those to be found in the Southern league.

BIGELOW'S BAT.

Elliott Bigelow, former Southern leaguer, was bought from the Boston Red Sox to play left field, while Wid Matthews, from Indianapolis, will be in center. Wid fell below the .300 mark with the Class AA team last year for the first time in seven seasons. There isn't a better fly chaser in the league. Elliott Bigelow hit .395 for his last season's work in the Southern.

With Sammy Vick sold to Memphis and Cleve Barrett farmed to Jacksonville, only the two gardeners will be here at the start. Another outfielder will be brought in as soon as possible. Red Barnes or Pat Powell, both of the Senators, will be the newcomer.

Chick Howard and Art Decatur, right-handers, and Merle Settlemire, left-hander, remain from the 1929 pitching staff. Herb Pyle, drafted by Washington and returned, is not likely to make the team.

South Carolina Evens Tech Series; Bulldogs Defeat Tigers

JACKETS LOSE TO GAMECOCKS IN FINAL, 5-4

Two Teams Wage Nip and Tuck Battle in "Rubber" Game.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 12.—(Special.)—South Carolina's Gamecocks battled their way to a 5-to-4 victory over Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets here this afternoon to gain an even break in the series with the Georgia nine.

It was one of the hardest fought games seen here this season. Both teams fought with all they had and played heads-up baseball.

The Jackets won the first game Friday afternoon, 2-1.

FLORIDA BEATS TECH TANKMEN

GAINESVILLE, Fla., April 12.—The University of Florida dedicated its new $35,000 swimming pool today with an aquatic meet between the Florida varsity swimmers and Georgia Tech, Florida winning by a score of 45 to 39 and Aubrey Sawyer, of Florida, having a total of 10 points, was individual high point man.

Florida was decidedly victorious in the 100-yard free-style and in the diving, winning first and second places in these two events. Sawyer and Buell, Florida, took first and second in the 100-yard free style and Ray Carter and Ed Romfh won first and second places for the Gators in the diving. Cooper and Maier, of Georgia Tech, were third in the 100-yard free style and the diving.

Fain and Patten won first and second places in the 440-yard swim for Tech with Spencer, of Florida, third. House and Ingle took a first and a second in the 100-yard breast stroke to bring Tech through victor in this event. Anthony, of Florida, was third.

Buell and Carter won a first and a third for Florida in the 50-yard free style, Kennickell, Tech, winning second, while Sawyer and Spencer, of Florida, took first and third places to win the 220-yard swim.

Tech was victor in the 300-yard medley relay and Florida took first in the 200-yard relay race. In the 150-yard back stroke Kennickell, of Tech, won first, while Bob Edsall and McCaughan won second and third places for Florida.

The Yellow Jacket freshmen outswam the 'Gator yearlings in all but two events with Jones, Florida, having a total of 13 points to capture individual high point honors. The Tech rats won, 48-36.

Taking first place in the 200-yard relay, 100-yard breast stroke, 50-yard dash, 150-yard back stroke, 100 free style diving events and the medley relay race, Tech but for the easy swimming of Jones, swept everything before it.

Granite League Starts Saturday

The Granite league, composed of baseball teams from towns north and east of Atlanta, will start its 1930 schedules on April 19. These towns have been baseball rivals for many years, but they have never before organized into a regular league. Tucker, Clarkston and Lithonia have had an agreement to play each other a series of games in past years, but the association has never been close enough to be called a league. This year eight of these towns have united into the Granite league, and they should have all the inducement to play they have had before plus the added interest of watching the percentage column. There is a trophy to work for this year also.

At a meeting last week the Georgia Duck Company at Scottdale took the place of the Grayson team, which was in the original list, due to the failure of the Grayson manager to appear at the meeting. The Duck games will be played on the old Scottdale diamond. The Brookhaven team does not have a diamond of its own, and its games will be played at Chamblee. Stone Mountain is working on a diamond but it will not be ready for use until after the start of the season. Until it is ready, the games will be played at Clarkston.

The final meeting of this league before the season starts will be held at Trammell Scott's store on Wednesday night of this week. All player lists and franchise and other fees not paid must be paid in at this time. The franchise fee is returned at the end of the season and is deposited with the treasurer only as a guarantee of good faith.

In the opening series several old rivals will meet. Brookhaven, called Woodhaven in the schedule, will play Chamblee on the Chamblee diamond. These players have been opposing each other for years, and their crossing bats will be nothing new. Tucker will play Lithonia, bringing up another old rivalry, and Clarkston journeys to Norcross to make new associations.

The schedule:

GRANITE LEAGUE.

Woodhave vs. Chamblee at Chamblee, W. E. Kent, umpire.

Georgia Duck Co., vs. Stone Mountain at Clarkston, Luther Arnold, umpire.

Clarkston vs. Norcross at Norcross, Carl Wallace, umpire.

Lithonia vs. Tucker at Tucker. K. S. Culpepper, umpire.

Breaking the Tape for a Record

Above is shown the finish of the torrid 100-yard dash in the Tech relays yesterday when Charles Farmer, North Carolina speed merchant, reeled off a new record of 9.8. He had done this time also in the trials a few minutes before. Farmer is shown on the extreme right. The inset is a close-up of the record holder. To the left is Strong of Chattanooga, who finished a stride behind the fleet Tarheel. Smith of Alabama is on the extreme left another step behind Strong. MAJORS SET FOR OPENERS more powerful; Brooklyn is decidedly stronger, and Cincinnati and Boston have improved. This should tighten up the race. St. Louis, for example, isn't going to win any 19 games from Cincinnati.

Guessing at the finish in the National league, I should say it might be Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Boston. That guess might be very wrong. Three or four of those teams look closely bunched, and the breaks in the luck will make a lot of difference.

It is the same in the American league. Much may depend upon the ankles of Mr. Simmons, the arm of Mr. Boley, the ankles of Mr. Ruth and the shoulder of Mr. Pennock. Detroit has hitters. St. Louis has pitchers. Cleveland has a little of each and so has New York; while the Athletics have plenty of everything.

HARDER FOR MACKS.

Last season, the Mackmen finished out in front by eighteen games. This was partly due to the fact that they took eighteen games from Detroit, eighteen from Boston, and sixteen from Washington. They are not likely to fatten quite as much on Detroit and Washington this year. But eighteen games was a pretty big margin. It leaves them a lot of room; for the Athletics are fully as strong as they were and perhaps stronger. They have better reserve strength.

Cleveland was five and a half games back of the second place Yankees, which would mean that the Indians were twenty-three and a half games back of Philadelphia. It will take a tremendous improvement to make that up. St. Louis was two games back of Cleveland and Washington eight games back of St. Louis. Detroit was two games back of Washington, and Chicago ten games back of Detroit. Boston was only two games back of Chicago.

The teams which appear to have improved most are Detroit and Chicago. For the Yankees, Zachry probably will not go as well and Hoyt should go better, but the real question will be whether Cooke and Chapman can qualify as big leaguers. If they do, New York will make a feeble bid for the flag and may finish third or even fourth. But Shawkey appears to have confidence in the youngsters.

The logical manner for the American league teams to finish would seem to be Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland, St. Louis, Detroit, Washington, Chicago and Boston, although President Barnard of the American league is inclined to think Chicago may do considerably better. He may be right.

Anyhow, the fans are ready, the turnstiles are oiled, and the managers hope the teams are ready. We shall know a lot more about the clubs a month from now, but the main thing is that the race is about to get under way.

So fans, prepare to button up your overcoats and root for the home team.

Six Relay Records Fall In Meet Here

haps, but just as well run, which kept the stands yelling frequently. Other field events, with the tape not stretched quite so far perhaps, pleased just as much.

HURDLE RACE.

There was the 120-yard high hurdle race, in which Davidson's team of Whittle and George placed first and third, respectively, and in which Perry, of North Carolina, ran second. All finished closely bunched, and all topped the barriers in good form.

There was the two-mile run, where more tragedy was written; where Wells, of Tulane, ran away from the invincible Bob Young, of Georgia, in the last two laps; where Young led for the first six laps and led comfortably; where Wells trailed easily along until the start of the seventh lap, then picked up some 20 yards to run for a moment at Young's elbow and then added 30 more yards to win handily; where Fineran, of Florida, gave his all but lost third place to MacReynolds, of Mississippi A. and M. Fineral trailed for five laps. He started forward, ran ninth, eighth, seventh, sixth, fifth, fourth, then third. He ran third for half a lap. Then his powers seemed to ebb away and MacReynolds, one of his victims, pulled past him to take the show medal.

FLORIDA FROSH.

There was the performance of Florida's yearlings, who won the half-mile and mile freshman relays and took third in the two-mile relay.

There was the "iron man" work of Forrest Munger, of Florida, who ran in the 100-yard dash and in three relays and then tapered off with a first place in the pole vault.

There was the sprint medley relay, in which the Mississippi Aggies held to their crown and record, although they ran the race in two full seconds above the record.

There was the javelin throw, in which Tech's sophomore, Doug Graydon, strove in vain to get back to his form of last year. In which Buck Anderson, of Georgia, threw the stick 191 feet 4 inches to regain his title of two years ago, though he missed the record by some feet.

There were those events, and more, on the college card.

GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

There were the grammar school lads—and how!

The youngsters always manage to give the stands a thrill or two. One—the sight of their bare-footed, face-twisted determination—is a "natural."

The North Siders went to the post first. Luckie Street's leading lad stepped off in front. And his mates upheld the lead, hard-pushed by Highland Avenue, until the far turn and the last man. George Gillon took over the responsibility then. George had his heart set on a pretty gold medal. Silver wouldn't do. Not at all. So George started from there. He whizzed over the track—and got his gold medal by a final leap. The time for the race was 57.2 seconds. Luckie Street was second, while the third place bronze medals went to Moreland Avenue's speedsters.

And the South Siders ran the same course in 57 seconds. Crow, certainly they crowed. The Georgia Avenue lads, who came home in front, have no regard whatever for their rivals from the other side of town. And Crew, second, and Key, third, have little regard, if any, for those rivals.

Georgia Tech's eighth annual relay carnival closed in a burst of glory. Twelve records were broken in the two days of running. It is just as nice to go to high school as to college. You can break just as many records.

better work a month hence than they have shown in the practice affairs. An experienced pitcher is not going to break his arm trying to win an exhibition game.

Injuries also have played havoc with the club. Oddly enough it is the younger division, not the veterans, who have suffered most.

Fans naturally have gained a pretty low estimate of the club through seeing them lose to everybody and his brother in exhibition games.

BIG SHOTS FAIL.

Johnny Dobbs started the training season at Douglas with a team he was confident would win. Ivy Wingo, Ivey Griffin, Big Ed Brown proved disappointments. Their arms did not respond to training. A deal for the boss catcher Johnny wanted fell through through no fault of the management.

Deals now are on that may land players to strengthen the club.

Meanwhile it were best to be patient and give the boys a break before condemning harshly.

Many a time and oft a ball club has looked terrible in exhibition games and even in estimation of the manager, then stepped off in the regular season and won steadily.

The present Crackers might even go out and take three or four straight from Chattanooga. Stranger things happen every year in this game of baseball.

ATLANTANS KEEP COURSES PACKED

Ideal Day Brings Out Many Golfers; Clubs Hold Tourneys.

Atlanta's golfers took advantage of the first real opportunity of the year Saturday and more than 300 played on the 11 courses in various sections of the city.

Three one-day tournaments were held, one at Capital City, one at Druid Hills and another at Ansley park.

In the Capital City tournament, which was divided into three classes according to handicaps, 40 players participated. Ed Upton, Jr., and Lieutenant Madeira were tied for honors in class A, with nets of 67 each. Upton had a 76 gross and 9 handicap while Madeira had 79 with 12 handicap. R. H. White, Jr., won second place with 77 and an 8 handicap, giving him a net of 60.

In class B, R. B. Godley, Jr., and Dr. Harry Boon were tied for low honors with net of 68 each. Joe Camp was second with 71. Godley had an 86 and Boon had 85.

LEWIS LOW.

In class C, A. S. Lewis was low with a net of 64. His gross was 92, with 28 strokes for handicap. G. G. Scharff was second with 90 minus net 24, 66, and J. P. Garlington was next with 91, minus 22, with a net of 69.

Other low scorers at Capital City Saturday afternoon were Dave Black with a 77, Henry Grady, Jr., 79 and Fred Minnich and Hugh Nunnally 79 each. Dick Garlington scored two eagles in succession. He was playing in a foursome with Bill Crowley and two visiting friends. He shot a 3 on number three, a par five hole and a 2 on number four, a par four hole. Number three is 465 yards and four 285 yards.

E. H. Burton won the first prize of the year at Ansley park when he shot an 80 Saturday afternoon in a blind par tournament. His blind score was 80. W. D. Thompson and E. B. Taylor were second with 81 each and Dr. Nicholson and William Knowles were tied for third place with 79 each.

DRUID HILLS.

Druid Hills golfers had a busy afternoon with 70 players on the course. Julius Hughes, club champion, and W. C. Colquitt were low with 78 each. Other winners were Fred Pace and Frank Person, 86 each; H. H. Ellison, J. R. Patillo, A. C. Newell, George Argo and T. T. Talley, 91 each; Roy Mather 96 and J. F. Glenn and Robert Pringle 105 each and W. H. Hester 116.

Each fifth score in the tournament received prizes. That kind of a tournament will be run for the next four Saturdays.

the mound. It was a great hurling duel up until this inning.

Fans cheered all through the game, indicating that their enthusiasm is flowing and that a good crowd will be out next Thursday.

The lineup was patched. Jack Sheehan was in Nashville to meet his wife, who has been ill, and drive her to Atlanta. He returned last night.

SHEPHERD DOG WINS HONORS AT CLUB SHOW

Kansas City Entry First After Great Competition With Beagle.

By Roy White.

A large shepherd, Asta Von Sonnebild, owned by Mrs. R. L. Gray, of Kansas City, Mo., took first prize Saturday night at the close of the 18th annual dog show of the Atlanta Kennel Club at the auditorium annex. Immediately after Judge Otto Gross announced the winner, Johnny Dobbs, manager of the Atlanta baseball team and owner of several valuable hunting dogs, presented the president's cup to the owner.

A Beagle hound, Shady Shores Silkman, owned by W. N. Daniel, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., where the rabbits grow large and run fast, won second prize, a large silver trophy for being the second best dog in the entire show. It required several minutes and much parading of the dogs before Judge Gross announced his decision of the winner and second best.

The Saturday night crowd was the largest of the entire show and every available seat in the annex was taken by interested spectators.

The judging Saturday was the hardest of all. It required all day for the judges to eliminate the entries down to the winners. More than 150 of the best bred dogs in the various classes paraded before the judges and officials Saturday morning and afternoon.

All of the night session was devoted to group judging and selection of winners from the six groups. The winners and reserve winners in each class were paraded in the judges' ring for selection into the groups.

Shortly before the night judging began, an annual banquet was held at the Atlanta Athletic Club for exhibitors and officials of the show. Members of the Atlanta Kennel Club were hosts at the dinner.

Members of the bench committee who were in charge of the show were Frank Coffee, president; Paul Hamer, Benno Stein, L. F. Shelver, Reuben Dennard and A. G. Laughridge.

Otto H. Gross, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a veteran in the business, was the judge of all breeds, variety groups and the best dogs in the show.

Farewell Dinner Planned for Bob

Bob Jones, national open golf champion, will be an honor guest at a farewell dinner Monday night, April 21, at the East Lake Country Club, with members of the Atlanta Athletic Club and all other Atlanta clubs invited.

Jones together with his wife, O. B. Keeler and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine will leave Atlanta April 22 for New York, where they will sail for England on the Mauretania, April 30. They will sail with the American Walker cup team, of which Jones is captain. He will compete in the international match at Sandwich, England, May 15-16; the British amateur tournament at St. Andrews, May 26-31 and the British open at Hoylake, June 16-21.

The dinner will be $3.50 per plate and reservations can be made through Frank Bell, at the East Lake Club.

Toledo Planning Races at Night

TOLEDO, Ohio, April 12.—(AP) Night racing under the lights of Fort Miami here this season will be under the auspices of the grand circuit and not as an independent institution.

Officials of the Toledo Driving Club announced that decision today after being closeted several hours with a delegation of horsemen representing the leading owners and trainers of the country, at whose solicitation the local club rescinded its withdrawal and again became a unit of the largest racing organization in the world.

DOBBS NAMES CRACKER CLUB

Ivy Wingo Given Release. Yelle Wins His Berth.

given a setback in condition which has been reflected in their playing during exhibition games.

It has never been possible to put the starting team on the field during the exhibition games. Milton Stock, one of the best infielders in the minor leagues, has been out with a bad leg since the team left Savannah, Ga., where the Reading club furnished opposition in two games.

OTHER HURTS.

At various times Elton Langford and Frank Walker, outfielders, have been out with bad legs. On the pitching staff Red Bates reported late and Climax Blethen came in late after a spring's work. Don Brennan, who finds it impossible to keep to a normal weight in Maine during the winter, is not yet in shape. He needs more hot weather. In addition Brennan is troubled with a bad ankle.

Arch Yelle has won a catching job from Wingo by being always in shape and by outhitting the veteran from Cincinnati in the exhibition games. Cliff Knox, the "B" receiver, has been troubled with a sore throwing arm.

Johnny Dobbs has had his share of grief. Coupled with the injuries there is the indisputable fact that his club, composed of veterans, is a slow starter.

IMPROVE WITH WORK.

The Crackers are a club that will get better as the season goes along. The fans who have begun to express their disapproval of the club because of its showing in the exhibition games will find it a different club as soon as the season has gone along for a few weeks. It will not be overwhelmed in the first three weeks. The Crackers should play at least .500 baseball for that period and then improve steadily.

The plaint of the fan flock that the club is too old is not borne out by the facts in the case. Jimmy Johnston and Red Oldham are the real veterans on the club and they have shown better form this spring than any of the younger men. The remainder of the squad is made up of veterans, but they are not past the age of good ball playing.

The young players on the squad failed to develop as expected. Jim Brice, one of the most popular young men in baseball, developed a sore arm at Douglas and it never came around. It is well now but there isn't time to determine whether or not he will go. Brice will be sent out on option. Lefty Wierman failed to make the grade. If he isn't placed he will be given his release.

BEST EIGHTEEN.

The 18 men selected are undoubtedly the best of a squad that has been given every chance. Lee Meadows, former Pittsburgh star, looked like a sure winner in his work Saturday. Dobbs may have a winner.

Dobbs' pitching staff is superior to the one which started for Wilbur Good last season. He expects to add another right-hander to the list of throwers within the month.

The Crackers appear at least 40 per cent stronger than last season's team. Which is a modest estimate. The outfield offers the most obvious substantiation of that fact.

Last season the Crackers carried a number of outfielders, only one of whom played real baseball and he lasted but a month. Doc Silva, Max Rosenfeld, Wilbur Good, Hal Lee, Bob Parham, Maurice Archdeacon, Nick Cullop and Dick Wade were used in the outfield last summer. It was never set. Of the lot only Rosenfeld played good ball. Cullop set a season's record for striking out, fanning 92 times in 113 ball games. Archdeacon and Wade were complete flops. Good and Silva did their best, but it wasn't very much. Parham played well but he was just breaking in.

FAST OUTFIELD.

This season the Crackers start with an outfield composed of men who are experienced, fast, possessed of good arms and ability to hit. Two of them batted well over .300 in the Texas league last season. They are Si Rosenthal and Elton Langford. Frank Walker, manager of the Greenville team, clubbed for a .370 average.

The infield shapes up as a stronger combination. Last season the Crackers worried along with many shifts, all of which were inadequate. Bill Marriott and Frank Haley tried third base. Haley, Martineck and Jim Poole tried first. Only short and second, with Jones and Sheehan, remained stable.

The 1930 layout, with Stock, Johnston, Sheehan, Burrus and Grimes, appears, and no doubt is, considerably superior to the 1929 experiments.

The catching, minus a man of Al Lopez' temperament and ability, is the only department which does not appear stronger than the 1929 receiving set.

With Bader and Battle as utility men the club is well fortified there.

DEFENSIVE STRENGTH.

The line of defensive strength, of course, includes the catcher, the second base combination and the center fielder. The Crackers do not look so good in this respect. The second base combination has worked well so far but it has not yet got going as it probably will. The centerfielder has not yet been determined. Walker is the logical man at present although Rosenthal may be shifted there later

Tech Nine Plays Auburn and Illinois Teams Here This Week

SPORTS MENU OF JACKETS IS HEAVY ONE

Thirteen Games Are on Schedule for Various Tech Teams.

By Herb Clark.

Old unlucky "13" has jumped up to catch Georgia Tech's varsity athletic teams. That "13"—a favorite of the schedule makers—has grabbed a generous handful from the respective collars of those teams and is just before pulling them into a period of most strenuous activity.

For the six teams at the Flats who do their battling in the spring of the year are faced by 13 contests during the coming week.

Coacher Kid Clay will be forced to do his accustomed "Napoleon" act for his ball club four times. The tennis and lacrosse teams trail along, each having been inflicted with three competitive spots for the period. The golfers, the swimmers, and the trackmen will each gird themselves for battle once.

AUBURN IS FOE.

The Jackets of the diamond, having sandwiched conference and nonconference opposition with plenty of skill and feeling, do likewise this week. Wednesday and Thursday Auburn's far-ranging Tigers will sally from the lair at the "Loveliest Village" to make the annual pilgrimage to the Flats. Friday and Saturday the Jackets will do their bits toward the aiding of the spring training campaign of the Illinois diamond crew, making its yearly southern swing and stopping off here to gain a bit of experience.

NET PROBLEMS.

Net problems are also to be knotty problems this week. The Jackets set sail on Wednesday for a three-match tour. Thursday they use their services on the Wildcats of the University of Kentucky. Friday it is Tennessee's Vols who are to furnish the opposition. Sewanee will do the honors Saturday.

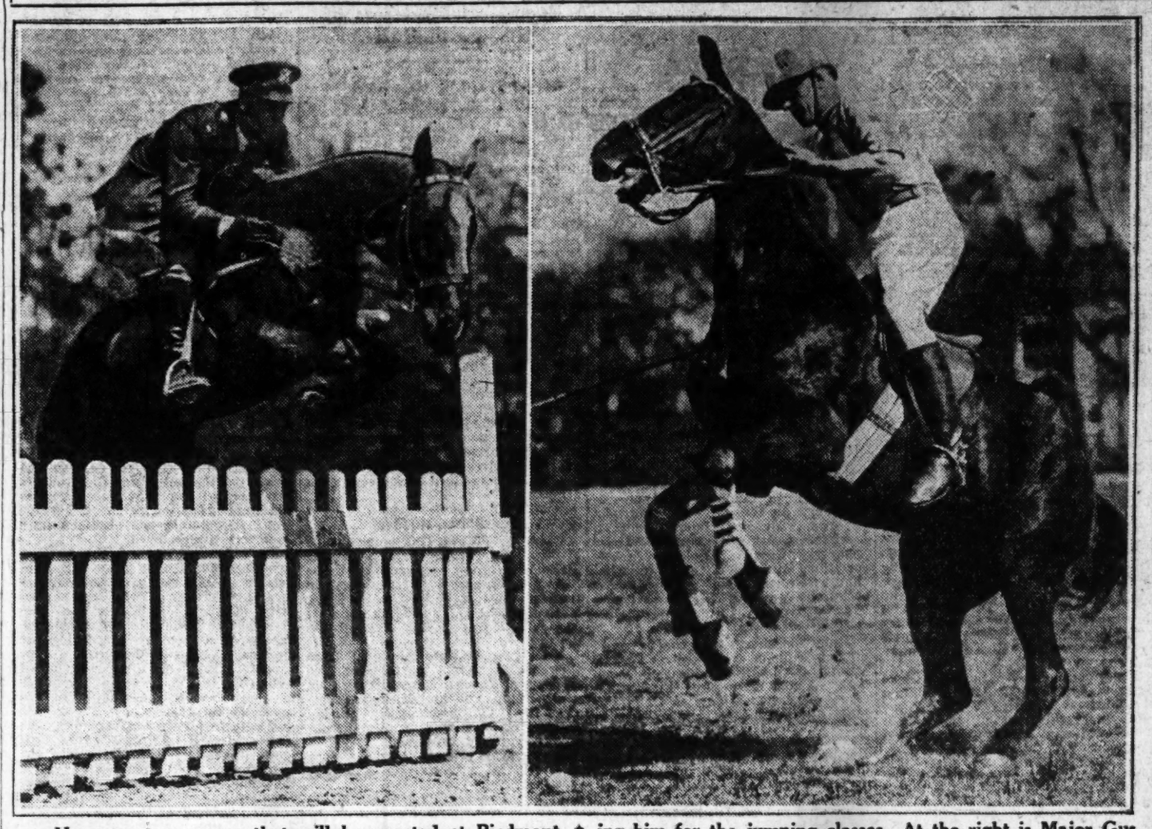

The Jacket clay court squad, with but one veteran lost and with several ambitious youngsters anxious to step into the vacancy, is coming along smoothly after being rudely jolted by the University of Florida a week ago.

The lacrosse team, which opened its season with Georgia's Bulldogs last week, also has an extended trip slated for the coming period. Wednesday and Thursday the Jackets swap licks with the Cavaliers of Virginia.

Saturday the Jackets hop to Annapolis for what has become an annual entanglement with the Naval Academy squad.

North Carolina State will keep the Jacket golf squad busy. The Jackets have thus far managed to get by safely on the abilities of Charlie Brumby and Scott Hudson, Jr., but Ed Herron and Dick Voorhis, other members of the squad, are showing a daily improvement in form and are expected to do much for the Tech cause this week.

Over the Fence and Out If You Touch---Quick Stop

Here are two scenes that will be enacted at Piedmont Park April 25-26 when the Atlanta Horse show is in progress. At the right is Major Gus Franke, star of the McPherson polo team, bringing his pony to a sudden stop from a dead run. Photos by J. T. Holloway, Constitution staff photographer.

Calvary Defeats Park Street, 9 to 3

Calvary and Park Street stole a march on the regular season in the Piedmont league of the Y. C. A. A. and played the game scheduled between these teams for April 26. Calvary had a good day and triumphed, 9 to 3. Donehoo was the hitting demon for the winners, getting four hits out of the same number of tries. He also figured in a double play that looked good. Sharpless hit three out of four for the losing team.

Arnold, Avery, King, Bienvenue and P. Coker all hit for three bases and Converse knocked a homer.

Polo Ponies, Jumpers Offer Many Thrills

Atlanta Horse Show, April 25-26, Offers Ten Classes Packed With Action.

By Ben Cothran.

When the ring master—or ring manager as they call them at some of the more pretentious affairs—megaphones for the hunting, jumping and polo classes some two weeks from this date at Piedmont Park when the Atlanta horse show is here, then is the time to get prepared for action as thrilling as a long touchdown gallop or a seventh-inning rally.

These classes are always the most outstanding and spectacular events in a horse show. Saddle classes offer pleasing sights, but they haven't the quiet action nor the excitement of the other.

There are five jumping classes and five polo classes on the program. They will all be well filled with entries from Dixie's leading stables.

Skill is required to take a big rangy hunter or jump over an obstacle. And the airy manner in which these mounts go over, head out, forelegs under the body, tail waving, is a delicious sight.

The obstacles are higher for the jumpers than for the hunters. A jumper does not have to meet all the exacting prerequisites of a hunter. His job is to get over his hurdle with form.

EXACTING.

But when the judge begins running his critical eye over a hunter he looks for many things. A hunter must be a well-mannered gentleman—or lady. He must be powerfully built, with much width through the chest to allow ample room for the vital organs. He must take his hurdles safely. Hindquarters are powerfully built and limbs are sound and strong. There must be evidence of ability to gallop long distances up and down hill, keeping up with the hounds.

Hunters and jumpers in the Atlanta show will be under critical eyes. Lieutenant-Colonel Adna R. Chaffee, United States cavalry, knows as much about them as any man in the country. He judges these classes at the national show in Madison Square Garden every year, and Colonel Fitzhugh Lee, executive manager of Atlanta's production, persuaded him to come here. The horse on which Colonel Chaffee hangs a blue will earn it.

With army teams coming here from Fort Benning, Fort Oglethorpe and Fort Bragg, and Fort McPherson and the Horse Guards here in Atlanta entering, the polo classes will be well filled with mounts and competition. Ride a well-trained pony some time and you'll be amazed at his bag of tricks. It takes considerable time and patience to train these fellows, but once they get it, they hang on to it.

VERSATILE.

They can come to a halt from a dead run, turn and go chasing in another direction quicker than you can change your mind. They can run and follow that ball in its bouncing, furious, ever-changing course at top speed with amazing consistency.

The sport of a polo class is the bending test. Poles are set up in a row, 20 feet apart, and here comes your pony, lugging it as fast as he can, going to the right of one, changing direction and going to the left of the next. There you have their ability to change direction without slowing and quickness of response to the will of the rider.

These jumping and polo classes are great things to watch. They will be among the features of the extensive program outlined for the Atlanta Show. Piedmont park on the afternoon of April 25-26 is going to be a swell place to be sitting and watching the cream of Dixie's horses fighting for ribbons and prizes.

Stanford Trackmen Lose to Trojans

PATERSON FIELD, LOS ANGELES, April 12.—(AP)—For the second time in 13 years the University of Southern California today defeated Stanford in a dual track meet marked by the recording of one new world mark and tying of another. The final count stood 84 1-2 to 46 1-2.

It was fitting that the final event on the program, the mile relay, should go to Coach Robert "Dink" Templeton's athletes in record-breaking time as consolation for their decisive defeat. The Cardinal quartet covered the distance in 3 minutes, 15 2-5 seconds, exactly a second faster than the former mark set in 1921 by Newark A. C.

The much equaled time of 9.6 seconds in the century also was credited to Stanford, when Hector Dyer showed his heels to Frank Wykoff, 1928 Olympic sprinter, in the major upset of the meet.

M'PHERSON POLO SLATED TODAY

Post and Area Headquarters Teams Clash at 3:30 O'Clock.

Polo, the galloping game, gets its 1930 start in Atlanta this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when teams representing Fort McPherson and Fourth Corps Area headquarters meet on the McPherson parade grounds—to last six chukkers. The game was scheduled last Sunday afternoon and was prevented by rain.

Both teams have added new players to their squads since last season and both have striven to improve their hitting by steady practice during the winter months. The end of last season found each of these teams with two won and two lost in their four games played, and as a result assures a very close affair today.

Since this is the first game of the season, substitutions will undoubtedly be freely made in trying to arrive at the best lineup.

Lieutenant Wesley Moran and P. D. Christian, of the Governor's Horse Guard, are to officiate.

FIRST OF MANY.

Today's game is but a forerunner to what promises to be Atlanta's greatest polo season. Each Sunday afternoon for some time to come, weather permitting, will afford polo enthusiasts an opportunity to witness some exciting games.

May 25 to June 8 will find at Fort McPherson the largest assembly of ponies and players ever witnessed over the eight southeastern states in the fourth corps area and southern circuit tournament. Negotiations have already reached a point where the presence of eight polo teams, with some 150 ponies and 40 players, is practically assured, the teams coming from Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Florida, Louisiana and possibly from South Carolina and Alabama as well.

General Raymond H. Fleming, adjutant general of Louisiana, has written that the combined team from the 108th cavalry and 141st field artillery, at New Orleans, will participate in the tournament. General Fleming is a player on this team.

BRAGG ACCEPTS.

The first team to definitely accept the invitation to participate in the fourth corps area and southern circuit elimination polo tournament was the regular army team at Fort Bragg, N. C. This team will include Captain Peter P. Rhodes, one of the army's only three players handicapped at seven goals. Fort Bragg, army's largest artillery post, near Fayetteville, N. C., played Fort McPherson two games at Augusta in March, each team winning one.

Such growing enthusiasm for the sport has been shown by the public in and about Atlanta during the past two years that General Frank R. McCoy, the corps area commander, and General George H. Estes, commanding Fort McPherson, are lending their unrestricted personal support to further promote the attraction of this thrilling game.

Bulldogs Beat Tech Golfers

By dint of whaling drives and good approaches on the parts of John Oliver and Frank Dudley, the Georgia Bulldogs of the golf course took a 9 1-2-to-8 1-2 decision from Georgia Tech over the East Lake course Saturday afternoon.

Oliver and Dudley shot wisely and well to take 7 of the 9 points from Brumby and Hudson, the Jacket pair. The Bulldogs needed those seven points, for Herron and Harrison, the Jacket second pair, took 6 1-2 of their 9 points from Lilliston and Legwen.

Oliver, whose 72 won the day's best ball laurels, won three points from Brumby in their individual match, and Dudley won two and lost one in his battle with Hudson. The Bulldogs teamed to take two of the three points for their commanding lead.

Harrison won two points and lost one in his match with Lilliston, while Herron and Legwen were splitting their three points. The Jackets won all three of the foursome points.

DISTANCE MEN TO RUN HERE

Southeastern A. A. U. Track Meet Draws Many Stars to Atlanta.

All entries to the Southeastern A. A. U. track championships to be held on Grant field the night of April 26 are due to be in the hands of Frank Kopf by April 20, but enough entries have already been received to assure the success of the meet.

Galen Elliott, star runner for the University of North Carolina, and now a teacher in Charlotte, has entered the distance events, and in the same mail came entries from Bill Tate, another teacher who used to be one of Coach's Stegeman's star performers at the University of Georgia. Both of these men are in Atlanta attending the Tech relays as spectators, and have stated that they are in excellent condition for some good competition on April 26. To see these two long distance men running against each other would be a guarantee that the time for the two-mile race would come well under ten minutes. It is seldom that this race is clocked under ten minutes in the south.

The demand for girls' races seems to be increasing also. The A. A. U. in other sections of the country holds regular championships in track and field for girls, but the Southeastern association has never promoted women's athletics. Olive Kruger, of Chattanooga, unofficially, the holder of the world's record in the 60-yard dash wants to make a new mark and two other girls from different parts of Tennessee want to compete. The committee will meet some time this week and decide whether or not the girls' event shall be added to the program.

This meet is open to any amateur, whether connected with a team or not, and entry blanks can be secured at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Jaycee Golfers To Form League

Organization of a Chamber of Commerce golf league is scheduled to be perfected this afternoon at the Black Rock Country Club with representatives from Atlanta, Macon, Columbus, Cornelia and other near-by cities expected to be present.

A 36-hole golf match is scheduled to be played in the afternoon, after which dinner will be served.

Members of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce are sponsoring the movement and will have as their official representatives L. R. Hunter, Lee Fowler, Forrest Fowler and Jesse Webb.

Tech Net Stars Lose Two Matches

Georgia Tech's tennis team, with a most voracious appetite but with some digestive discrepancies existing, went through a three-match schedule over the week-end, winning one match and losing a pair.

Darkness halted the match with Georgia's Bulldogs Friday afternoon as the Jackets led at 3 matches to 2. It was decided not to play the second doubles match.

Saturday morning the Techsters were subdued at 5-2 by Alabama's Tidesmen, and Saturday afternoon the Green Wave from Tulane took a 4-2 decision from the Engineers.

FOSTER, ALFORD TIED IN SHOOT

Trapshots Knotted in Weekly Event at Atlanta Gun Club.

H. J. Foster, former Georgia state champion among trapshooters, and Dr. H. N. Alford, president of the Atlanta Gun Club, were winners Saturday afternoon in the first of a series of weekly trapshoots at the Atlanta Gun Club traps. Foster and Alford tied for singles honors with 49 each while Foster took the 25 handicap targets and tied with Alford for high honors in the 12 pair of doubles.

Dr. J. Q. Brantley and Dr. Alford returned to the traps Saturday after an absence of several months. Dr. Brantley has recently returned from Florida, while Dr. Alford just recently returned from Hot Springs, where he was recovering from an illness.

It was announced that the Saturday shoots between now and April 26 will be practice affairs with the Memorial Day program the first regular race with trophies awarded on added bird basis of the year. Two hundred singles will be the feature event for April 26.

The train reached Atlanta without stopping as the engineer was unaware of having hit the man. The running time between Macon and Atlanta was two hours by which the crew figured that the train was running at the above rate.

The train was in charge of Clyde Beaty, conductor, who returned to Macon after making the run to Atlanta with the special. According to his information the body of the victim was hurled nearly 70 feet by the force of the impact. H. R. Lee, engineer, was the other member of the train crew.

Wilkins' Mystery Unsolved As Jury Completes Inquest

Testimony of Witness at Previous Inquest Refuted by Pullman Conductor.

LOCUST GROVE, Ga., April 12.—(AP)—A coroner's jury here found today that J. H. Wilkins, negro Pullman porter, whose body, with the skull fractured, was found a quarter of a mile from the Southern railway track near here last Saturday, "came to his death by cause or causes unknown to this jury."

Sheriff L. D. Hightower, of Henry county, and special officers of the Southern railroad from whose Kansas City Special he was missed early last Saturday when the train arrived in Atlanta, said investigation of his death would continue. Pullman company officers also will carry the investigation further, they said.

The outstanding development of today's third session of the inquest was of negative nature. Pullman Conductor Leonard Worthington, who took over the train at Birmingham, denied he had said "I have all the evidence I need" after inspecting linens in the car. He was quoted to that effect in an earlier session of the inquest by Pullman Porter Richard Smith, from the car ahead of that in which Wilkins worked.

Worthington said he only told Jim Franklin, porter who took Wilkins' place in Atlanta, "I have everything I need," after the negro had brought him the linens from a berth where a window screen had been found open.

No Stains on Towels.

The conductor said sheets and towels from the berth, which other witnesses said had been occupied by a woman, bore nothing that resembled blood stains. He said, however, that they were dirty. He testified he found no blood stains anywhere in the car and found nothing out of the ordinary.

Worthington said he first heard of the open window when he overheard Smith telling other Pullman officials about it. No testimony was adduced as to whether the car might have been cleaned between Atlanta and Birmingham.

Franklin corroborated the conductor's testimony.

James P. Crawford, Pullman conductor from Jacksonville to Atlanta, testified that the woman who occupied berth Lower 7 where the window was open boarded the car somewhere south of Jacksonville, and that her ticket read for Memphis.

The last he saw of Wilkins, Crawford testified, was in the smoking compartment about 3:15 a. m., a couple of hours before the train passed the point where Wilkins' body was found. He said he heard in Atlanta that Wilkins was missing, but said he thought nothing of it since porters occasionally lose the train at stops. He corroborated previous testimony that Wilkins' breath smelled of liquor the night before he was killed.

Train Stopped at Sandy.

Z. L. Chancellor, who was operator at the block station at Sandy, 17 miles south of Locust Grove, where the train made an unscheduled stop the night the porter died, corroborated previous testimony that the train stopped there because he was asleep on the job and that he had been discharged on that account. He said he saw only the engineer and train porter from the train crew, and no passengers. He said he heard no automobiles near the station that night and saw no strangers. He said, however, that he could see only part of the train and could not have seen a party getting off the rear coaches.

Sheriff Hightower introduced in evidence a new broom which he said had been found near the railroad track early this week north of the point where Wilkins' body was found. The broom bore evidence of having had rough use as though used for scrubbing. Pullman Company officials said the broom was not their standard equipment, but admitted that crews sometimes bought such equipment while on their runs to replace lost or broken ones. Coroner E. W. Barnett said he would leave it to the grand jury to decide whether the broom should be analyzed for blood stains.

Officers still were pursuing the theory that Wilkins was slain, pointing to the fact that his body, on its knees, was tied to a sapling by his white jacket, pinned around his neck, and that tracks leading from the railroad right of way to his body did not correspond to his shoes.

STUDENTS OF MERCER WILL ELECT OFFICERS

MACON, Ga., April 12.—The annual election of student officers will be held at Mercer University next Wednesday. This will mark the second time elections have been held under the "open politics" system.

Seventy-five men have been nominated for the 46 offices which are to be filled. For the first time in the history of the university the students have formed two separate parties and announced a straight ticket for each. Heretofore the elections have been very disorganized.

The liberals, one of the parties, have announced that they will publish an official organ on the day before the election showing the superiority of their candidates and denouncing the radicals for trying to "railroad" a measure concerning the election of master Mercerian. The radicals tried to take the selection of a man for this office out of the hands of the students and put it in the hands of the faculty.

Nominees for the major offices are: For master Mercerian, Clayton Calloway, Jackson; Jack Gregory, St. Petersburg, Fla.; James Wesbury, Columbia, S. C.; Butch Hammock, Coleman.

For president of the student body: J. B. Cousins, Greenville; Tom Warlick, Fairmont; Fred Shaw, Tifton; T. Julian Webb, Valdosta.

EIGHTEEN ARE JAILED BY U. S. DRY AGENTS

Huge Liquor Cache Found Near Savannah; 4 Trucks, 6 Autos Confiscated.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 12.—(AP)—A raid on a huge liquor cache near Coosawhatchie, S. C., today landed 18 persons in jail and resulted in confiscation of four motor trucks, six automobiles and about 385 cases of whisky.

Prohibition forces from three states, concentrating here for the raid, proceeded early today in automobiles to the farm of C. H. Bell, in a secluded spot just off the Savannah-Charleston highway, about 50 miles from here.

Guards at outposts of the alleged liquor terminal were taken by surprise by the dry forces. The raiders entrenched themselves on the farm just in time to witness the beginning of bustling activity.

Shortly after the raiders arrived, trucks carrying liquor began arriving on the farm. A number of persons were arrested in and near fast passeger automobiles which were being loaded with whisky. Not a shot was fired during the entire raid, which prohibition officials said was made without the use of firearms.

Three Women Among Group.

The prisoners, 15 men and 3 women, were arrested at outposts on the farm, at the wheels of trucks and passenger cars, or in the vicinity of liquor caches.

Those arrested gave their names as follows: Harry Freed, Atlantic City; C. H. Bell, Coosawhatchie; Wilson Jenkins, Coosawhatchie; B. R. Taylor, Savannah; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Price, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. John Burke, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; J. B. Simmons, Bluffton, S. C.; Silas Pinckney and A. D. Chaplin, Coosawhatchie; Reynolds Gilkes, Philadelphia; Mrs. J. W. Donnelly, Nashville, Tenn.; Frank Forbes, Detroit; Robert C. Harrison, Coosawhatchie, and Henry Parker, Joe Murray and James Hiott, addresses unannounced.

Officers took Freed and Harrison to Charleston, saying that these men were not directly concerned in the handling of the liquor. The others were brought to Savannah, where they will be given preliminary hearings on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Jenkins is now under sentence in federal court here on a liquor law violation charge. He was convicted two weeks ago.

Farm Gate Guard Arrested.

Led by R. W. Merrick, prohibition administrator for the eighth district, with headquarters at Richmond, Va.; Robert E. Tuttle, administrator for the Savannah district; T. P. Talbert, deputy administrator at Charleston, S. C., and James T. Crowder, deputy administrator here, the raiding party reached the Bell farm shortly before 2 a. m. Bell was found on guard at the farm gate and was arrested. Other guards were arrested as the party advanced on the farm property proper. The raiders turned out the lights of their automobiles to avoid undue notice.

At a garage on the farm officers arrested one man and found the building loaded down with assorted brands of whisky in burlap sacks. A sedan parked near-by was loaded with liquor. In it, officers said, were Mr. and Mrs. Price. Mr. and Mrs. Burke were taken into custody near another automobile, not far away.

Then trucks began rolling onto the farm. As they came up their drivers and other occupants were arrested and their cargoes confiscated. One group of officers remained near the farm buildings, continuing to find liquor and to make arrests, while another group of raiders were dispatched to a point about three miles from the farm buildings.

Bottled Whisky Found.

Here, out in the open, the raiders found stacked, sack on sack, a large pile of bottled whisky. Eight men and women were arrested in and around automobiles and trucks at this point. Raiders said that several of the cars and trucks on the farm contained ingenious compartments for carrying liquor.

The prohibition administrators, their assistants and agents, remained on the farm until long after daybreak, continuing their investigation, destroying liquor and making plans for their departure. The motor vehicles and liquor saved as evidence were taken to Charleston, since the raid took place in South Carolina.

Prohibition Administrator Merrick said that none of the 18 persons resisted arrest.

Corra Harris' Childhood Home Marked by Handsome Tablet

(Photographs illustrating this story of Corra Harris' childhood home will be found on Page 5 of the Gravure Picture section.)

BY EDNA ARNOLD COPELAND.

ELBERTON, Ga., April 12.—Farm Hill, the girlhood home of Corra Harris, is the most picturesque spot in Elbert county—unshorn woods, rugged hills and broad meadows. An incomparable combination for a home.

A long avenue, shaded by cedars, oaks, pines and sassafras, leads to the home site from the main road—now the Calhoun highway. On the east side of the avenue, extending from the highway for quite a distance, is a beautiful meadow with groves of oak, chestnut and cedars. The tree-grouping around the old home site is pleasing in its artistic effect.

On the west side of the flower-bordered walks is a large garden plot, hedged by venerable boxwood 10 feet in height.

Farm Hill yielded practically everything that was eaten at the family table—vegetables, milk, butter and meat. Fish were caught in nearby streams and game bagged in the woods.

From childhood Corra Harris manifested unhsdal talent. When a little miss attending school she was called upon to recite "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," and to the amazement of her audience, she improvised the popular verse as follows:

"Twinkle, twinkle little star,
I have found out what you are;
You are the hooks and eyes,
To pin the nightrobe to the skies."

Little Corra Perfect Pupil.

An old report card in the possession of a near relative shows a perfect record of Corra Harris' school work. She was very studious, but human enough to be a good sport.

Corra Harris' first regular literary work began as literary editor of the New York Independent. In response to an invitation from Dr. Ward, the editor of that great paper, she and her daughter, Faith, then eight years of age, became guests in his home. Sometimes there were warm discussions on sectional questions between the northern editor and his southern helper. On one occasion the discussion was especially animated, but was interrupted by an announcement that "Dinner was served." According to the custom of the home, each, beginning with the eldest, recited a verse of scripture. When little Faith's turn came, she tearfully said, "Thou prepareth a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

Corra Harris had been converted during the great revival in Elberton, Ga., and had become an earnest worker when she went to Royston as the circuit rider's bride. She at once entered into the work with her whole heart. It was during this period of her life, when she was not quite 18 years of age, that afterward featured in her most popular novel, "The Circuit Rider's Wife."

Tablet to Circuit Rider's Wife.

Redwine church is four miles from Royston, and it was here that most of the incidents in "The Circuit Rider's Wife" occurred.

Corra Harris was selected by the Saturday Evening Post to visit Europe during the World War and write up that great struggle. Her article created world-wide interest.

Members of the Georgia Sorosis, of Elberton, the oldest chartered social club in Georgia, have placed a handsome granite marker at the entrance gate leading to the Farm Hill estate, which bears the following inscription:

GIRLHOOD HOME OF CORRA HARRIS,
THE CIRCUIT RIDER'S WIFE

Corra Harris has the distinction of being the world's first professor of evil. Her chair will be in Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., President Hamilton Holt's experimental educational laboratory.

As Professor of Evil.

This course will be a study of good and evil, with the good predominating.

"Evil," Mrs. Harris says, "is one of the oldest classics of human nature. It is usually taught by people morally illiterate and mentally corrupt, when it should be an important part of the education."

The class will consider "the history and philosophy of evil as contrasted from virtue" and the effects of evil upon history and life will be discussed.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS IN ATHLETIC MEET

Georgia Institutions Invited To Take Part in Program at Gainesville.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 12.—(AP)—High school girls from 100 Georgia high schools have been invited to attend a prep school "play day" instituted at Brenau Academy here, on April 26. Miss Ellen Conner, instructor in physical education, announced today.

And in addition to the Georgia girls invitations have been sent to high schools in Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, Miss Conner said.

"The 'play day' idea is a comparatively new one," Miss Conner said, "in that it differs from the old-time 'field meet' in not featuring contests among various schools.

"Instead, groups are assembled with some girls from each school in each group, enabling the various schools to play with each other rather than against each other."

Athletic events for the day will include baseball, volley ball, tennis, swimming, basketball, folk dancing, archery, quoits, horseback riding and canoeing. Other features will be an address by Dr. John T. Miller, head of Brenau Academy, and a barbecue. The guests will spend the night at Camp Takeda, in the Brenau Academy park.

MEDAL OF HONOR HELD BY COL. TITUS

Bravery During Boxer Trouble in China Recalled in Story of Career.

FORT BENNING, Ga., April 12.—Although there was no flagpole climbing by Colonel C. P. Titus, now stationed here but who will be retired October 15 this year, he was the first soldier to scale the wall of Pekin in the Boxer trouble in 1900.

At the time of the incident which led to his being decorated for bravery, Colonel Titus was a bugler in Company E, Fourteenth infantry. Young Titus accompanied Colonel A. S. Daggett in the advance on Pekin and when the troops encountered a crossfire they took refuge behind a bastion near the northeast corner of the wall around the Chinese quarters.

Colonel Daggett suggested that if the wall could be climbed the situation could be relieved. Titus volunteered, and by the aid of loose mortar in the wall reached the top. Next up was Captain H. G. Learned, now brigadier general. While they were pulling up rifles and ammunition young Titus was struck in the neck by a fragment of a shell.

The youthful hero was then cited for the Medal of Honor, the citation reading as follows:

"For gallantry, daring conduct, battle of Pekin, China, August 14, 1900, presence of his colonel, other staff officers, enlisted men his regiment in being first to scale wall of Chinese city while serving as musician Co. E, 14th Inf."

The following year he was appointed from United States at large cadet U. S. M. A. by President McKinley. While at West Point he received the Medal of Honor from President Roosevelt personally at a special ceremony.

Colonel Titus claims Augusta, Ga., as his home city.

THE

AIR-COOLED ENGINE

HAILED AS TODAY'S GREATEST POWER PLANT DEVELOPMENT

One hundred thousand miles with Cannon Ball Baker behind the wheel of a Franklin car, piling up the most imposing list of road records in America, mean what?

To the owner who uses his car over these same American roads, who may delight in fast travel, or who may want principally the maximum in power, comfort and reliability, these outstanding performances of the Franklin constitute a super-demonstration — one which has never been duplicated by any other automobile.

But the real significance is to focus attention on the way the air-cooled motor transcends every other type of power plant — a fact that has been borne out on the road, in the air and by record increase in sales.

Today the principle of air-cooling is recognized for its ability to get maximum power from a motor.

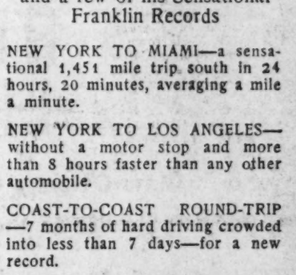

Only a few years ago, when man visioned the possibilities of air travel, aviation engineers "looked around for the best type of motor." With the whole field to pick from and with only the desire to find the type of engine which could best stand for gruelling punishment of flying an airplane—they chose the air-cooled engine.

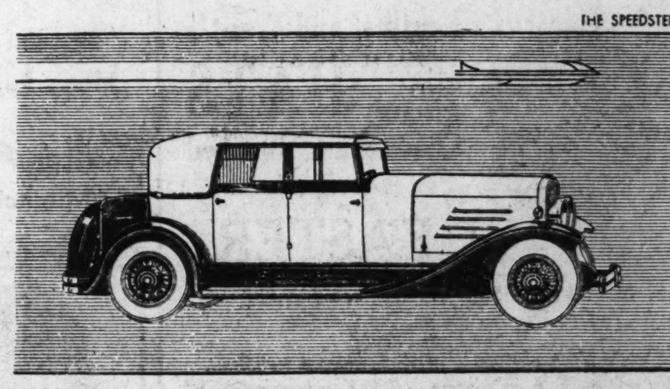

Since the introduction of the air-cooled, airplane-type engine in the new Franklin, all previous conceptions of fine motor car performance have been shattered. This remarkable engine—which has FLOWN AN AIRPLANE—has brought about that eager power that asks no favors and produces astonishing speed, smoothness hill-climbing ability and acceleration.

Cannon Ball Baker as test pilot has conquered the greatest proving ground in the world—American roads as they come. That the tests signify quality is accepted. The comfort which they so dramatically demonstrate has always been an unchallenged Franklin superiority. Ease and safety of driving could never be more effectually endorsed.

So Franklin has visualized the revolution it has worked in automobile building. There is no other car like it —no other car which does the things it does—no other car which enjoys its position of leadership through its engineering progressiveness and the satisfaction it renders to owners.

And all because Franklin has triumphed with its principle of air cooling, acclaimed as today's greatest power plant development.

OVER 21% NET INCOME

APARTMENT house in high-class north side section, annual income $12,000. In computing percentage of net income very liberal allowance has been made for possible vacancies, decorating, etc. We have managed this apartment since it was built, therefore we know the exact amount of expense. Shows net annual income of $4,634.25. This is not distress property and is paying present owner handsome income. Might consider a good unencumbered apartment house lot in Miami, Fla., as part payment, balance cash. We know of no other property in the city of Atlanta with better income and recommend this as a good high-class investment. Priced below five times its annual income. WAlnut 2550.

Factory Unemployment Decreases in New York State—Informed Wall Street Circles It Is No Secret That Railroad Buying Has Bolstered Steel Trade Past 6 Months.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Factory employment in New York state showed a decrease of one-tenth of 1 per cent for the month of March, according to information made public this week by the state industrial commissioner. This compares with decreases of 2.3 per cent for November, 3.9 per cent for December, 2.2 per cent for January, 0.5 per cent for February.

Under the direction of Miss Frances Perkins, New York state has built up a department dealing with employment, unemployment and allied industrial subjects, the value of which is widely recognized. Since the stock market panic last autumn Miss Perkins has given out information from time to time on the unemployment situation which disagreed with published statements of the department of labor at Washington. Each time, however, the statements from Washington had to be revised to conform to the figures given out by Miss Perkins.

In making public the figures for March the head of the New York state industrial commission pointed out that a monthly fluctuation of one-tenth of 1 per cent was not ordinarily significant but at this time of year it is significant because it came after a period of falling employment since last October because March is a month that should show a seasonal gain in employment in anticipation of spring activities.

Still another high spot in the week's news is found in the weekly reviews of the steel industry. In another couple of business days we will be in the middle of April. Spokesmen for the steel industry stated this week that tendencies are mixed; that open weather has brought a rise in seasonal demand but that there is no definite trend; that the demand for fabricated steel "is not impressive;" that heavy construction work is "subnormal;" that railroad purchases are smaller with some railroad contracts suspended which with the low level of freight car loadings "is tempering the hopes of the steel trade for large purchases of rolling stock." In informed Wall Street circles it is no secret that railroad buying has been the backbone of the steel trade for the past six months.

Steel Operations Decline.

Operations of the United States Steel Corporation the past week dropped to 79 per cent of capacity against 83 per cent a week ago, 80 per cent two weeks ago, 98 per cent a year ago. Early in the year there was a surprising recovery in the steel industry, followed by a secondary decline in operations, then a slight upward trend and now another decline. This is what the Iron Age meant in this week's statement that the steel trade lacked definite trend.

In brief, after considering such factors as the week's news in factory employment up to the end of March here in the keystone state of New York, and what spokesmen for the steel trade had to say, Wall Street has about reached the conclusion that while the worst of the slowing down in general trade following the stock market panic of last autumn has passed, improvement for the second quarter will come, but it will be slow.

If this conclusion is accepted, what is the explanation for what is going on in the stock market? For the past fortnight most of the large stock exchange houses serving the big outside public have been cautioning their customers to go slow on the belief that the new bull stock market was going too fast; that a temporary but substantial reaction was not far off. There has been heavy selling of both long and short stocks in spots this week, especially the first few days. But this selling was well absorbed with the ticker slowing down on declining prices and falling behind the stock exchange floor as soon as prices again started to advance. On consecutive days this week the average price of 50 representative stocks, half rails and half industrials, made a new high for the year, the rails standing still and the industrials climbing.

Trade Spurt Seen.

It would be difficult to find any one in Wall Street whose opinion counts for anything who does not believe that it is only a question of time until trade activity in this country will exceed the high record for 1929. This widespread confidence in the future undoubtedly throws light on what is going on in the stock market. As a matter of fact, however, as far ahead as can now be seen the outlook for general trade continues to be disappointing. Hence, some other explanation must be found for the resumed five million share days on the stock exchange on advancing prices. The answer is found in the money market. Call money on consecutive days this week again dropped to 3 1-2 per cent. Call money at 3 1-2 per cent is an invitation for pool managers and professional traders to get busy in the stock market.

Confident that it is only a question of time until more definite signs are seen in improving general trade, pool managers and professional traders in the stock market are going to continue active on the long side of the stock market, with occasional shifting to the short side when the market becomes temporarily overbought, until money gets very much higher than it now is and with the trend definitely upward. What the final outcome will be of the new bull stock market is now an open question. It is possible that recovery in general trade will jutsify those who are now buying stocks at what appears under existing trade conditions to be a very high price. It is also possible that resumed excessive speculation in the stock market on the long side will lay a foundation for both the stock market and general trade that will repeat a previous experience.

IRREGULARITY MARKS WEEK'S STEEL MARKET

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—Much business irregularity and uncertainty prevailed in the steel market during the week. Some quarters reported slightly reduced mill production and a disappointing demand from some of the main consumers. On the other hand United States Steel Corporation reported an increase in unfilled tonnages at the end of March. Price unsettlement was again noted. Pig iron was more active with the bulk of the business in northern qualities. Some consumers reported larger orders for castings. As a rule prices were unchanged.

Demand for copper tapered off somewhat. Weakness of the London market led to rumors of possible price recessions here and may have restricted buying, although producers continued to quote electrolytic at 18 cents delivered in the Connecticut valley. This price will have been in effect for a year on April 16. Domestic consumers restricted purchases to light tonnages for immediate delivery. Some improvement in automobile and building industrials is partially offset by slackened activity in wire trade.

Tin prices rallied from the small depression early in the week. A better tone abroad was largely responsible for this development.

Prices of lead reacted to new low levels for the year and the more attractive schedules for consumers failed to bring in any special volume of demand.

The market for zinc turned slightly easier toward the end of the week, but there was a fair buying interest noted. Smelter stocks at the end of March increased. Ore was reduced.

Antimony was slightly easier especially for the prompt shipment positions. Far east offerings for April-May shipment attracted little attention.

Talmadge Planning Insecticide Check

State Commissioner of Agriculture Eugene Talmadge has announced that it is the desire of his department to check more closely the quality of insecticides being offered for sale in Georgia, and that facilities for such checking have been provided.

"Our facilities for analyzing insecticides have been enlarged," the commissioner said, "and it is our desire to closely check the quality of goods being offered for sale in Georgia.

"The fertilizer inspectors are authorized by law to take samples. We have one inspector working out of this office to answer special calls.

"Insecticide users are requested to communicate with any of our inspectors, or with the office direct when an inspection is desired. These requests should be made immediately after shipments are received, as it requires considerable time for samples to be sent in, analyzed and reported."

11-Year-Old Boy Makes Glider Flight

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y., April 12.—(AP)—An 11-year-old boy who had never even seen a boat glider today took one of them off the waters of Long Island sound and, although he smashed things up a bit in descending made a successful flight.

The young pilot was Ward Davidson, son of W. F. Davidson, head of the research department of the Brooklyn Edison Company.

Towed behind a motorboat young Davidson cut loose when the boat had gained sufficient speed, but pulled his stick back too sharply and almost stalled the glider. It straightened out, however, and glided along smoothly until the boy made too tight a bank, when it pancaked down into the water. The prow was bent and one of the wings was damaged but the boy was unhurt.

Captain Frank Hawks had made several flights in the glider preceding young Davidson's effort.

SOUTHWEST HEAT WAVE CONTINUES UNABATED

KANSAS CITY, April 12.—(AP)—The heat wave remained unbroken in the southwest today, with little relief from drouth and excessive temperatures in prospect for at least several days.

While light showers fell in scattered sections and partly cloudy skies brought a hint of moisture, the weather bureau reported there was not a real storm center over the entire country.

Temperatures were a few degrees lower than for several days, but it was not noticeable to perspiring citizens.

At Independence, Kan., the mercury touched the 90-degree mark for the fourth successive day. The maximum in Kansas City, which has had only .69 of an inch of rain since February, was 85.5. Oklahoma City reported 84, San Antonio 83, Houston 78 and Dallas 76.

The weather bureau forecaster said that, while widely scattered local showers might be expected in western Oklahoma, Kansas, eastern Nebraska, Iowa, northern Missouri and east to northern Illinois, the precipitation would not amount to much, and little change in temperatures was indicated before Tuesday or Wednesday.

Further toll was taken of the southwestern wheat crop, already deteriorating as the result of one of the dryest springs in years.

Apple blossoms have been brought out two weeks early in Kansas.

The peach crop in Oklahoma is expected to be almost a total failure, not so much from drouth, according to state officials, as from hard freezes earlier in the year.

Pastures and lawns have been retarded by lack of moisture, bringing a bumper crop of dandelions and other weeds.

Services in Decatur Church Despite Fire

Although it sustained a loss of approximately $40,000 in Wednesday's fire, the First Methodist church of Decatur will hold services almost as usual today.

The main auditorium, which suffered more from smoke than flame, has been cleaned and services will be held both morning and evening in it, as well as a series of revival services starting at 8 o'clock each evening during the week.

The children of the cradle roll, beginners, primary, junior and intermediate departments will meet today in the Glenwood school but all adult classes will meet in the church auditorium. The fire practically wiped out the Sunday school building of the church.

Conspiracy Is Laid To Former Mayor

SCRANTON, Pa., April 12.—(AP)—Edmund B. Jermyn, millionaire and former mayor of Scranton, and his cousin, J. Harry Friend, civil service commissioner in Jermyn's administration, were today convicted of a charge of conspiracy to protect gambling machines against police interference.

The two men were the first to be tried of more than 100 persons indicted in Scranton and Lackawanna county in connection with the crusade against the operation of the gambling devices.

Sentence of Jermyn and Friend was deferred, pending a motion for a new trial. The maximum penalty for the offense of which they were convicted is two years' imprisonment or $1,000 fine or both.

James Arigoni, director of public safety in the Jermyn administration, and James W. Henshaw, superintendent of police under Jermyn, were also to have been tried with Jermyn and Friend, but they pleaded nolo contendere and were witnesses for the commonwealth.

End of Brazil's Coffee Valorization Seen—Regulation of All Holding Companies Buying Railroad Securities — Newspapers Received 260 Millions for Advertising in 1929.

Are we seeing the end of the coffee valorization of Brazil? It looks that way now.

The state of San Paulo, the coffee center, in urgent need of money, is seriously considering dropping the coffee price-fixing, as a condition to securing a loan.

The loan is being arranged by Speyer & Co., Bancamerica-Blair Corporation and Dillon, Read & Company in the United States, and Baring Brothers, Ltd.; N. M. Rothschild & Sons, and J. Henry Schroder & Co. in London. About 16,500,000 bags of coffee, valued in excess of $200,000,000, have been stored as security.

The important thing, however, is that the state of San Paulo is expected to agree that within a maximum period of 10 years it will liquidate its accumulated stock of coffee and will place future crops upon the market currently, ceasing to hold them in order to maintain prices.

On July 1, next, all the unsold accumulated coffee remaining will be placed against the loan.

A definite loan announcement announcing the death-knell to the coffee valorization plan is expected soon.

Regulate all holding companies buying railroad securities—or be prepared for an uncontrolled and unsatisfactory railroad situation!

This is the warning of Joseph B. Eastman, interstate commerce commissioner, who has been fighting to bring the holding companies under the domination of the interstate commerce commission, just as the railroads are.

The commissioner's attack was directed particularly against the two big holding companies organized so far by railroads; the Pennroad Company, owned by the officers of the Pennsylvania railroad, and the Allegheny Corporation, controlled by the Van Sweringen brothers, of Cleveland.

Mr. Eastman says that the Van Sweringens, working through their holding companies, have not only secured control of nearly all the lines that were allotted to them by the interstate commerce commission in the east, but in addition they have purchased large stock holdings in roads that were not assigned to them, the Missouri Pacific, for instance.

The commissioner's position is that if railroads are under the control of the interstate commerce commission, the agencies of those railroads (railroad holding companies) should be too. Otherwise confusion worse confounded will result.

Congress is studying the subject now.

Newspapers received more than $260,000,000 last year from their advertising columns, according to an estimate of the bureau of advertising of the A. N. P. A.

While the publication of the individual accounts is not allowed, it is known that 23 companies manufacturing automobiles and trucks put $64,245,000 into newspaper advertising. Nineteen tobacco companies put another $21,935,000; 89 food companies, $20,660,000, while 24 radio and phonograph companies exceeded $16,320,000.

Forty-seven companies merchandising drugs spent $13,875,000 for white newspaper space, while 41 firms dealing in toilet articles added another $12,565,000.

The growth of national advertising through newspaper space is one of the remarkable phenomena of the last 15 years.

The port of New York has always been and remains since revolutionary times the most important port of entry in the United States.

Last year the United States government collected $610,900,000 in customs receipts, of which $348,213,000, or 57 per cent—was taken in at New York.

But the passenger baggage duties, which constitutes but 3-5ths of 1 per cent of the total receipts, cause all the congestion and delay. Last year 397,823 passenger declarations were made out at New York. So Secretary Mellon has asked some businessmen of that city for suggestions as to how to relieve the congestion.

Why not have customs men board all important ships coming to the United States from Europe, and inspect all passenger baggage before landing? This would eliminate unnecessary delay and congestion.

Certainly heroic measures will have to be taken to relieve the port landing's difficulties—the present situation is inexcusable.

The United States exported her first cotton 438 years ago. Cotton and tobacco—the most important of early American exports—continue near the top.

The National Geographic Society of Washington has issued an interesting bulletin on the subject. Tobacco was the most important American export for 150 years—cotton for the next 150 years. It was only for a short time after the Revolutionary War and the Civil War that flour and wheat took first place.

The exports of the colonial period and of today in the order of their importance are:

Colonial period	1929
Tobacco	Cotton
Fish	Machinery
Hardtack & wheat	Petroleum
Rice	Automobiles
Naval stores	Pkg house product
Indigo	Iron and steel
Whale oil, bone	Wheat and flour
Deerskins & furs	Copper
Pig & bar iron	Tobacco
Pot & pearl ashes	Fruits and nuts
Pickled beef, pork	Mftd cotton
Horses	Sawmill products

And now cotton is fighting to hold first place in United States exports—machinery exports in 1930 may crowd king cotton into second place.

But look at the record of American business expansion:

Year	U. S. Exports
1730	$ 7,000,000
1830	71,671,000
1930	(Estimated) 1,175,000,000

Foreign trade has become an essential and integral part of American industrial life.

4,000 Acre Blaze Subdued in Canada

CALGARY, Alberta, April 12.—(AP)—After a 10-hour struggle an army of 1,000 men today conquered a fire which swept over a 10-mile front in the Spring Bank district west of Calgary, destroying two groups of farm buildings, 200 tons of stacked hay and more than 4,000 acres of hay land. The smoke in the afternoon was visible for 50 miles and the blazing hay reddened the sky for miles at night.

BRUNSWICK HARBOR WILL BE DEEPENED

House Bill Carries $394,000 For Work on Georgia Port.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Warfare broke out on Capitol Hill today over proposals for federal acquisition of the Erie canal in New York state and the Illinois waterways, but after President Hoover had intervened house leaders stood by their decisions for these projects despite senate threats.

Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, went to the White House and told the president "there will be no rivers and harbors legislation if the Erie canal project" is kept in the rivers and harbors bill. He said it would "throttle" the St. Lawrence river waterway scheme.

Mr. Hoover called in Chairman Dempsey, of the house rivers and harbors committee, who sponsored the Erie canal acquisition, and Representative Hull, republican, Illinois, the advocate of the Illinois waterways project, both of whom were accused by the Michigan senator of "bludgeoning" war department engineers into favorable reports on these proposals.

Returning to the capitol, Chairman Dempsey called his committee together to work out the final terms of the $110,000,000 rivers and harbors legislation and announced the provision for acquisition of the Erie and Oswego canals in New York state would be kept in the bill when it is reported to the house. Mr. Hull said the same of the Illinois waterways.

The largest single item in the bill was a $29,000,000 authorization for the Great Lakes connecting channels. The bill authorized a three-year program of expenditures totaling $15,000,000 on the Missouri river between Kansas City and Sioux City.

An important item was the $4,066,000 authorized for construction of levees at Lake Okeechobee, Fla., to prevent a recurrence of the tragedy of 1928 in which 2,000 or more lives were lost.

Nearly $6,000,000 was allotted to the intracoastal waterway from the Cape Fear river in North Carolina down the coast line to Charleston, S. C., and other amounts were set aside for other waterways along the Atlantic.

An authorization of $394,000 for channel improvements at Brunswick, Ga., providing an entry 30 feet deep and 500 feet wide across the bar and a 27-foot deep, 400-foot wide channel at Brunswick Point, was adopted, together with $103,000 for additional channel dredging in Tampa harbor.

'Ham' Lewis Launches Campaign for Senate

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—James Hamilton Lewis, nominated by Illinois democrats last Tuesday to oppose Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican, for United States senator in the November election, today made the opening address of his campaign, outlining the principles of Thomas Jefferson as the creed for his party.

Only once did the former United States senator allude to the 18th amendment—to which he is opposed.

"Democracy in this hour scorns the limitations of a party name," he said. "The principles of Jefferson, under the banner of human liberty, beckon the spirit of a dead past—the fathers of the great continental government who left its children the democracy of liberty. This was a just liberty and true happiness and a return to these ideals would rescue our state and nation from an unhappy plight, would rout public pollution and rid the nation of public servants who, under the guise of the 18th amendment, defile our homes, dishonor our state and corrupt our government."

Not once, however, did Lewis mention politics.

-:- THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW -:-

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

BIG FOUR LAUNCH NATION-WIDE TAX REVISION SURVEY

Realty Organizations To Investigate State and Local Tax Methods Affecting Property.

Investigation of present methods of state and local taxation and the ways in which they affect real estate has just been initiated by a joint tax committee representing four nation-wide organizations in the real estate field—the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, and the United States Building and Loan League, according to a statement first issued by the committee.

Tax System Unfavorable.

Organization of the joint tax committee, as a group which would represent the nation's real estate and allied interests, took place in Chicago recently at a meeting of representatives of real estate, mortgage banking, building and loan and building owning and managing associations. At its initial meeting the committee decided upon four definite topics for research and investigation as a basis for a comprehensive review of the whole present state and municipal tax system. The further statement in full as issued by the group, pursuant to the Chicago session, follows:

Members of these organizations feel that present tax methods and public policies are in many respects unfavorable to real estate. A comprehensive investigation will be conducted under the direction of Professor Simeon E. Leland, of the University of Chicago. The joint committee, consisting of two representatives of each of the national business associations, will aid Professor Leland in his work.

Among the subjects to be investigated are the following:

State income taxes both personal and corporate. The study will seek to determine the relative position of real estate in states having such income taxes as against those which do not have and the experience of these states with offsets for real estate taxes, distribution and allocation.

New Revenue Methods.

Sales taxes. Various communities have within the past few years levied taxes on the sale of certain commodities, notably gasolene and an attempt will be made to determine whether such taxes constitute a possible source of relief for the burden on real estate.

Constitutional and statutory limitations on taxes and public indebtedness. Whether limitations on the tax rate in state constitutions or by statute have operated successfully will constitute an important part of the study.

Miscellaneous city revenues. The possibility of developing increased income from fees and miscellaneous sources for cost of city government for possible relief of present taxpayers will be studied.

Trained investigators are now being secured by Professor Leland and will shortly begin their researches. The joint committee representing the four national associations, consisting of men who have for years been associated with activities allied with real estate, will meet from time to time to advise with Professor Leland and his research associates.

It is the purpose of this committee and of Professor Leland to investigate the facts impartially and to learn from the facts whether there are now available methods already approved by experience by which more equitable distribution of the costs of municipal and state governmental services and activities can be secured.

8-Year-Old Boy Extols Religion To School Mates

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 12.—(UN)—From the lips of a lad so young he is baffled by the spelling of the simplest words, come daily in surprisingly comprehensive terms the precepts of the "old-time religion."

A chance passerby, should he glance at the steps of the Columbus grade school here, would stop short at the scene which unfolds there at recess daily.

Standing with one hand outstretched above his head, the other clutching a battered and grimy Testament, Harold Adams, eight-year-old first year grader, daily lifts his piping voice and calls his fellow pupils from their recess games. His voice deepens and is loaded with feeling.

"You know and I know there's a lotta people in this world who claim they have salvation. But listen here. If they don't put God first, they're gonna lose it.

"Salvation is something you can't buy. You've got to pray and believe what the Bible says."

"Some of those bad boys laugh sometimes," a loyal little girl admitted, "but Harold just talks louder. Most times we all just stand still and listen. We like to hear him preach."

The youthful evangelist is a firm believer in the iron-bound teaching that "those who do evil shall die." He illustrates it like this: "I know a boy who wouldn't obey his mother. He's dead now. She asked him to go to the store for some groceries. Instead he ran away to play with some boys, got run over and was killed. Now he's gone."

Auto Demonstrator Found Shot to Death

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Edward Wolf, an automobile salesman, was shot to death on a South Side street last night, less than an hour after he had taken a "Mr. Weber" out for a demonstration.

His body, a bullet through the heart, was found on the pavement nearby, the maroon demonstration roadster was wedged between two trees, wrecked.

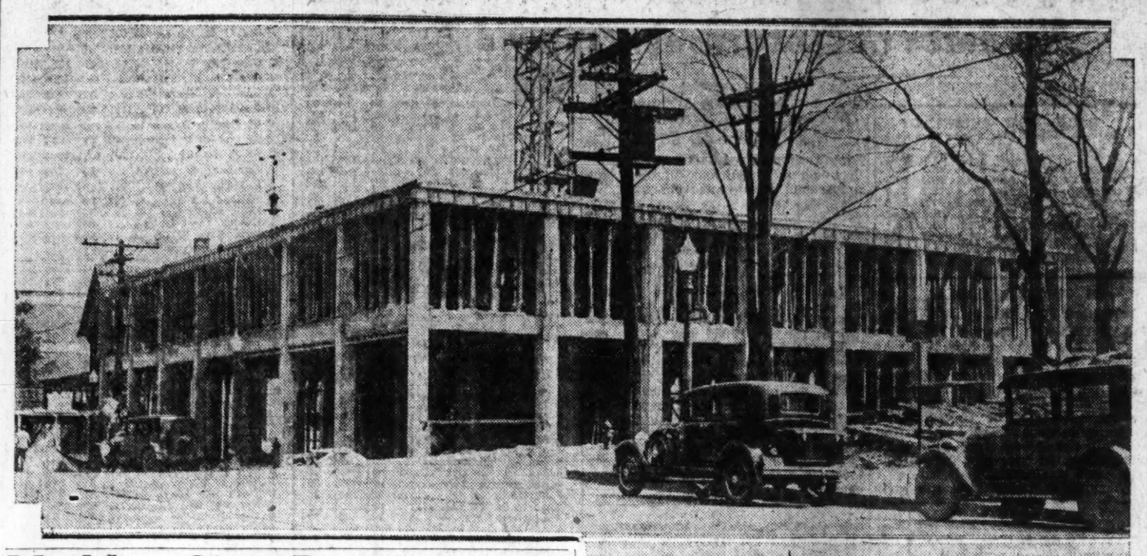

After dinner Wolf bid his wife and four children goodbye and went to the automobile agency. There he told his employer he had a buyer for the roadster; at 7:30 the customer came.

"Hello, Mr. Weber!" Wolf said. "I'll take you out and show you the car now."

Forty-five minutes later Wolf's body was found.

No one in the automobile agency knew "Weber;" neither did Wolf's wife.

Maddox Cites Requirements For Real Estate Salesman

BY PAUL C. MADDOX.
Treasurer, Atlanta Real Estate Board.

(Extracts from an address recently made by Mr. Maddox on Qualifications of a Real Estate Salesman.)

Unfortunately very little thought or consideration of the future has been given in the past by individuals entering the real estate business as to whether or not they will qualify to sell real estate. The real estate business has long been more or less a kind of resting place or welcomed haven for the fallen angels of big business, the ne'er-do-wells of the professions and the general failures of all classes. This kind of men are, as a general rule, miserable failures as real estate salesmen.

The qualification of a real estate salesman—I mean, of course the successful salesman—are many and varied and very real. The successful real estate salesman should have at least a high school education or its equivalent. Far more important, however, than a formal education is a keen desire to enter the real estate business and a deeply felt interest in his chosen line of work. He must be fair with his employer and straight-forward in his personal conduct, free from the very thought of deception and fraud. The successful real estate salesman must be honest with himself and with his clients. He must not suffer the lure of the almighty dollar to cause him to jeopardize the interest of his client. He must be a character who commands and holds the respect of the people with whom he deals.

Tact Needed.

To be successful the real estate salesman must have tact and plenty of it. I do not mean by that that he should sacrifice or even temporarily submerge his individuality and fawn, Spaniel-like, at every word, suggestion or idea of his client. He must study intimately human nature and learn the characteristics of men and women; he must acquire the ability to deal with all kinds and classes of people without giving offense to any of them. He must learn the nice discernment of the best course of action under any and all given conditions.

The real estate salesman must cultivate to perfection the art of close observation. He must see quickly and hear distinctly anything and everything that might possibly lead to a sale. He must know his city and its environments thoroughly—its many places of interest—its civic bodies—its institutions of learning and their locations, and in order that he may be of assistance to those who are purchasing their first home he should be familiar with the tax rates and fire insurance rates.

The real estate salesman should always look on the bright side of life—a smile breeds a smile. Optimism is one of the prime qualifications of a real estate salesman. Without a disposition to take the most hopeful view of men and things no man can possibly succeed as a real estate salesman.

Personal pride is a great asset to the salesman. He must ever remember that he is judged, rightly or wrongly, by his personal appearance—the condition of his car—in fact everything about him must be spick and span and bear the unmistakable air of refinement. "The apparel oft proclaims the man" is an adage containing more truth than poetry.

Details Important.

The close observance and application of small details play a great part in the success of a real estate salesman. Success is the object of all worth while men and no one can afford to overlook any of the details leading to one's object. It was the great emperor, Napoleon, who said, "Nothing succeds like success," and Napoleon was known to be a master of details. Besides being mindful of the details of his calling the real estate salesman must take an active part in the various civic affairs and familiarize himself with all the news of world-wide interest so that he may converse with his client or prospect on any subject from a prize fight to the senatorial debate on the tariff question. He should be able to talk well and intelligently, also he should be willing to listen with patience and attention. He should be deeply interested in the civic, social, educational, economic and church affairs of the community in which he lives and be ever on the alert to render a service or perform a duty that will aid the growth or advancement of his immediate section—giving freely and unselfishly of his time, influence and money—in short, he must be a worthy citizen and an excellent neighbor.

The real estate salesman must work, he must study, he must plan, he must dream "dreams no mortal ever dared dream before." He must work to make his dreams come true; he must study intensively the act of selling. He must cultivate the habit of viewing and analyzing the many intricate problems of selling from the standpoint of his clients' wants and the processes of their satisfaction. He must familiarize himself with the scientific methods of solving the problems of selling.

By far too many indolent seekers of easy money enter the real estate field. Their many bad qualities being of such a nature as to defeat the recognition of their few good ones. This sort of men seem to consider the real estate business as a sort of playground where they may while away the time in an easy-going, carefree manner and amass a fortune while so doing. They are, fortunately for the industrious ones, soon aroused from their stupor and made to realize that they must do one of two things—they must by working hard, long hours, qualify themselves to sell real estate or they must "fold their tents like the Arabs and silently steal away."

Commercial and religious construction projects, which feature latest building activity in the vicinity of North avenue and the Peachtrees. Pictured above is the Industrial Life and Health Insurance Company building, being erected at the northeast corner of West Peachtree and Linden streets. It will be a five-story office building and the home office of the insurance concern, which will occupy two floors. Below is shown the large Sunday school plant, which will be the first unit completed in the new church project undertaken by the North Avenue Presbyterian church. The religious building is located at the corner of North avenue and Courtland street.

Insurance Firm Erecting 5-Story Office Building

Structure at West Peachtree and Linden Under Way by Industrial Life and Health.

Details of the office building project now under way on West Peachtree street at the corner of Linden, were reported Saturday. The structure, which will be five-stories high and represent an investment of approximately $300,000, is being erected by the Industrial Life & Health Insurance Company.

The structure will be of the general modern office building type, erected with reinforced concrete and fire-proof materials. It was designed by Frazier & Boden, architects, and Charles Black is contractor for superstructure.

When completed the building will be one of the most prominent in the fast-growing North avenue section. The work is already well under way and announcements of a lease of two floors in the building, recently negotiated by Draper-Owens Company, is carried elsewhere on this page.

As indicated by the name which has been given the new office building, the edifice will constitute the home office of the Industrial Life & Health Insurance Company, now located at 135 Walton street. The large insurance concern has its headquarters in Atlanta, with John N. McEachern as president.

According to information given out Saturday, the life insurance company will occupy two floors of the building. The ground floor will be divided into stores. The two remaining stories have been leased to a large oil company.

Erection of the structure marks another important addition to the commercial development of West Peachtree street, which real estate men regard as an important future business thoroughfare.

Another significant feature of the enterprise is seen the movement of large local insurance concerns to construct office buildings for their own needs. Not long ago one was completed at 771 Spring street by the Crum & Forster agency.

Beer-Making Sheriff Sentenced to Prison

MARQUETTE, Mich., April 12.—(AP)—Sheriff John S. Johnson, of Gebic county, Mich., who was convicted yesterday of manufacturing and possessing beer, today was sentenced by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond to 15 months' imprisonment in Leavenworth prison and a fine of $2,000.

The sheriff's attorneys plan an appeal. The conviction was on an indictment based on seizure of a quantity of beer in a bottling plant at Bessemer, Mich., owned by Johnson.

His defense was that he had no active part in the operation of the plant and that his manager, John Seeke, was instructed to use a formula which would make only near beer. Seeke was a government witness.

VICTORIA OF SWEDEN IS LAID TO FINAL REST

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, April 12. (AP)—Within the Swedish royal pantheon in Riddarholms church, where a large company of Swedish kings and queens already lie, the body of Queen Victoria, of Sweden, was buried this afternoon. The queen died at her villa in Rome last week after many years of illness.

The queen's body was brought ashore amid impressive scenes from the cruiser Drottning Victoria which was escorted by the cruiser Gustave V and destroyers from Swinemuende, Germany.

On a hearse drawn by six horses through the crowded streets of the mourning capital, it was carried past the royal palace to her majesty's last resting place.

King Gustave with the king and crown prince of Norway, the king of Denmark, the president of Finland and many other distinguished personages followed afoot.

The bells of every church in the city tolled as the cortege began to move and continued their mournful ringing until the church was reached.

In accordance with a wish once expressed by the queen, the Royal Opera orchestra after the ceremony played the prelude to Wagner's Parsifal.

The coffin was then borne to the mortuary chapel of the Bernadotte dynasty while the choir of the royal chapel sang a hymn composed by King Oscar II, father-in-law of the late queen.

Prohi Agent Killed By Arrested Negro

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Lamar W. York, a federal prohibition agent, was shot and killed here early today by a man identified only as a negro whom he had arrested.

He had taken two negroes into custody on a liquor charge. They jerked away and ran, one of them turning and firing once. The prohibition agent was hit in the head.

Two negroes were subsequently arrested by Washington police in connection with the shooting and are being held for investigation.

York, who was 36 years of age, was a native of Nashville, Tenn.

THREE SUSPECTS HELD FOR GANGSTER KILLING

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—(AP)—Three men were held incommunicado today as suspects in the gangster killing of George F. Miller, 31, alias Williams and Martin, of Brooklyn.

Pierced with five bullets, the body of Miller, his hands tied behind his back, was found in his own car last night in Newark.

The prisoners said they were Silvio Poccia, 28; Joseph Pape, 29, and Mike Spaluti, 26, all of Utica, N. Y.

The detective bureau is seeking to link Miller with the Hotsy Totsy club killings in New York for which Charles Entratta Green was acquitted and Jack "Legs" Diamond was indicted. Green was sent to Sing Sing prison for violation of parole.

A receipt for a $100 money order, payable to Green at Ossining, N. Y., where Sing Sing is located, was found in Miller's pocket. It was signed "Jacob Gross."

Capone Convicted On Vagrancy Charge

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 12.—(AP)—Albert Capone, brother of the scar-faced Chicago gangster, was found guilty of vagrancy in municipal court this morning. Passing of sentence was deferred four days pending arguments for new trial. Maximum penalty for conviction on vagrancy is 90 days and $500 fine.

Albert Capone was described as a brother of the Chicago racketeer when he was arrested here March 20 on a vagrancy charge following a raid on the palatial Palm Island home of Alphonse Capone on Palm Island here.

His arrest yesterday was made on a municipal golf course, where he was playing with a companion and a woman. Chief of Police R. H. Wood said then, and in court today, that he had received complaints from other patrons of the golf course regarding Capone's use of the course.

Capone made cash bond immediately on his arrest yesterday.

He is to go on trial in Dade county criminal court Tuesday on the other vagrancy charge.

SHARP PICK-UP SEEN IN SOUTH'S BUILDING

Commercial Construction Enterprises Rapidly Gaining Momentum.

Major building and industrial enterprises definitely planned and a large portion actually let to contract in 16 southern states for the week ended April 5 had a total valuation exceeding $170,000,000, compared with a total valuation covering similar projects for the preceding week amounting to $97,000,000, according to a compilation made by the Daily Construction Bulletin.

No effort is made to estimate the valuation represented by the more than 1,000 separate building announcements reported during the week in the territory from Maryland to Texas. Indications are that building and industrial activity in the territory is rapidly gaining momentum.

The first big item on this list is the projected gas line from Texas to Chicago at an estimated cost of $100,000,000. That would have startled the country a year or two ago, but during the last 12 months so many gigantic gas pipe lines have been put under construction and many of them completed that a $100,000,000 enterprise is no longer regarded other than as one of the natural lines of southern development.

A $10,000,000 supreme court building is to be erected at Washington, the razing of the old buildings to be commenced promptly.

The state of Missouri sold $10,000,000 bonds for highway improvement. Dallas voted $4,000,000 on bonds for sewer improvements.

Other great enterprises running all the way from $700,000 to $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 included roads, bridges, tunnels, office buildings, hydroelectric plant and a wide variety of construction enterprises of one kind and another. So great is the movement now under way for the construction of these many and widely diversified enterprises that it takes no prophetic vision to be able to see that the south is entering upon the most far-reaching construction activities in its history.

Not only is southern capital going freely into these varied interests, but capital from the north and from the west is being poured into these great enterprises in the south in what might almost be called an endless stream, a stream which will fertilize every other industry, create employment for many thousands of people and draw to the south an ever-increasing amount of capital. The field for expansion is limitless. The resources that justify such a development are greater and not to be found in any other equal area of the world. A wide sweep of the whole horizon of the south reveals that all that has been projected in the past is small as compared with the certainties now ahead of us.

Atlanta Builders Exchange Being Remodeled Now

Remodeling of the Atlanta Builders' Exchange offices in the Bona Allen building is now in progress. When completed and fitted with new furnishings, the quarters are expected to provide the finest and most convenient facilities ever made available for the exchange, it was pointed out.

Another significant feature reported in this connection was the extension of the exchange's favorable lease contract for five more years. As the old lease does not expire until one year from now, the organization is assured of six more years on its rental agreement.

F. M. Noland, secretary of the exchange in charge of operations, stated Saturday that all services of the exchange will continue without interruption during the remodeling work.

Sales Committee To Hold Meets Twice a Month

Due to the increased popularity of the monthly meetings sponsored by the sales committee of the Atlanta real estate board, the committee has decided to conduct semi-monthly conferences, George J. Morris, chairman, stated following the meeting last Monday night. The next meeting will be held Monday night, April 21.

"Since the inauguration of the special sales meetings, interest has increased rapidly," Mr. Morris said. "At last Monday night's meeting approximately 50 persons attended, including both members and non-members of the realty board. The gatherings are opened to all persons interested in real estate.

Speakers at the last meeting and their subjects were: Harry Paschal, vice president of the Atlanta Title & Trust Company, on "The Follow-Up System From Prospective Clients, Both Residential and Business Property"; John J. Thompson, president of John J. Thompson & Company, on "All Classes of Advertising," and W. J. Hogan, Jr., manager of the rent department of the Rankin-Whitten Realty Company, on "The Importance of a Neat Personal Appearance and a Neatly Kept Automobile."

NEW OFFICE BUILDING LEASES TOP ACTIVITY

Draper-Owens Lists $831,200 in Recent Rentals.

Commercial leases aggregating $831,200, recently consummated through the Darper-Owens agency, were announced Saturday by Jesse Draper, head of the firm. Featuring the transactions are large space leases in two office buildings now under construction.

These are the Thornton office building being erected by the North Pryor Street Corporation on Pryor street, between Edgewood and Decatur, and the Industrial Life & Health Insurance Company building under construction at the corner of West Peachtree street and Lindon street.

The following tenants have taken space in the Thornton building:

Continental Insurance Company, a group of fire insurance companies known as the America Fore, has taken the entire fourth floor for its southern departmental offices.

Commercial Union Assurance Company has taken one-half of the fifth floor for its southern departmental offices.

Travelers Insurance Company has taken two-thirds of the sixth floor for its various departmental offices.

Jacobs Pharmacy Company has leased the corner of Edgewood and Pryor.

L. C. Smith-Corona Typewriters, Inc., has leased one of the stores on the Edgewood avenue front.

In addition to these, Mr. Draper announces that his company has several other prospective tenants for this building, with whom he expects to consummate additional leases in the immediate future.

Two entire floors of the Industrial Life & Health Insurance Company building has been leased to Sinclair Refining Company, to be used for its southeastern division offices.

"The lease situation in Atlanta since the first of the year has been unusually good and the prospects for the future are exceedingly encouraging and bright," Mr. Draper stated.

Activity in Home Building Cited By Geo. J. Morris

With the advent of ideal spring weather building activity in the residential sections should forge ahead, taking its place in Atlanta's large commercial and industrial construction program, according to George J. Morris, well known home builder, who stated Saturday that his own company would start work on two new homes next week. Plans also are being drawn for the early construction of a number of other homes, Mr. Morris said.

In addition to the proposed houses, the Morris Company at the present time has four houses under construction, while two others have just recently been completed. Among the homes under construction are residences in the new Parkwood section, in Druid Hills, which has just recently been thrown open. Mr. Morris' concern was the first to build in this section.

"Generally speaking, I believe the balance of this year will see a marked increase in real estate trading in the residential areas," Mr. Morris said. "Reports from salesmen in our brokerage department, as well as my personal observation, lead me to believe this is the beginning of a good season in the real estate market."

MARCH CONTRACT TOTALS CONTINUE BUILDING GAINS

Construction's Steady Comeback Noted in Dodge Report; 1929 Figures Exceeded in South.

March contracts for building and engineering projects in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains reached a total of $459,119,000, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was the largest monthly total since August of last year; it registered the full seasonal increase of 45 per cent over February of this year, and it was only 5 per cent under March, 1929.

Contracts in December, 1929, were 27 per cent under December, 1928; each succeeding month of this year has lessened the spread between current contract volume and that of a year ago. This year's first quarter contract total has amounted to $1,100,147,200, being approximately 12 per cent behind the corresponding period of 1929.

22 Per Cent Residential.

As in the case of the two preceding months, March awards for the construction of public works and utilities, totaling $105,349,800, led all other types at 23 per cent of the total. Contracts let for residential buildings amounted to $101,491,600, or 22 per cent of the aggregate; awards for commercial structures totaled $80,001,500, or 17 per cent; and lettings for industrial construction amounted to $74,332,600, or 16 per cent.

Contemplated new work of all kinds reported in March amounted to $732,735,900, compared with $780,209,400 reported in February, and $886,075,100 in March of last year.

Southeastern Territory.

Building and engineering contracts awarded in the southeastern district (the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, eastern Tennessee) during the past month totaled $27,288,700. This compared with $20,650,100 for February which was an increase of 32 per cent, and compared with $26,444,000 for the amount let in the corresponding month of last year, an increase of 3 per cent. Construction awards for the first quarter have reached a total of $69,462,000, as against $73,963,500 for the first quarter in 1929.

Residential buildings aggregating $8,314,500, or 30 per cent of all awards, were the most prominent during March. Industrial buildings featured second with $5,703,900, or 21 per cent; public works and utilities totaled $3,983,700, or 15 per cent; and educational buildings amounted to $2,725,000, or 10 per cent.

The amount of contemplated work reported in this district during the past month totaled $54,027,800, which was 27 per cent greater than the amount reported in February and 9 per cent ahead of the March, 1929, record.

SAYS BUILDING DROP DUE TO ONE FACTOR

NEW YORK, April 12.—(Special.) The entire recession in construction activity, with its consequent depressing effect upon business and employment generally, has been due to a billion dollar slump in new residential building, Thomas S. Holden, vice president of F. W. Dodge Corporation, of New York, pointed out to the members of the National Building Survey conference.

In his telegram to Fenton B. Turck, chairman of the conference, Mr. Holden suggested that a solution might be found if architects were given a more active part in planning and supervising community layout. As a member of the conference, he urged that the American Institute of Architects and the National Association of Real Estate Boards co-operate with the United States Chamber of Commerce in holding series of meetings to study residential construction.

Mr. Holden is in charge of all statistical work for the Dodge organization. Commenting further on the decrease in home building, he said: "During the 12 months ending March 31, 1930, residential building contracts in the 37 eastern states have amounted to $1,700,000,000 compared with an annual average of $2,700,000,000 in the years 1925 through 1928. The slump has been mainly in apartments and housing development projects. It is my belief that this extensive residential slump has gone very far toward deflating whatever oversupply of residential building existed a year ago."

Railroad Defaulter Short Over $100,000

ST. LOUIS, April 12.—(AP)—A check-up today indicated that the defalcation of Oliver D. Chalmers, manager of mail and express traffic of the Frisco railroad who confessed yesterday to embezzlement of funds, will exceed $100,000. Chalmers is held in jail in default of $20,000 bond.

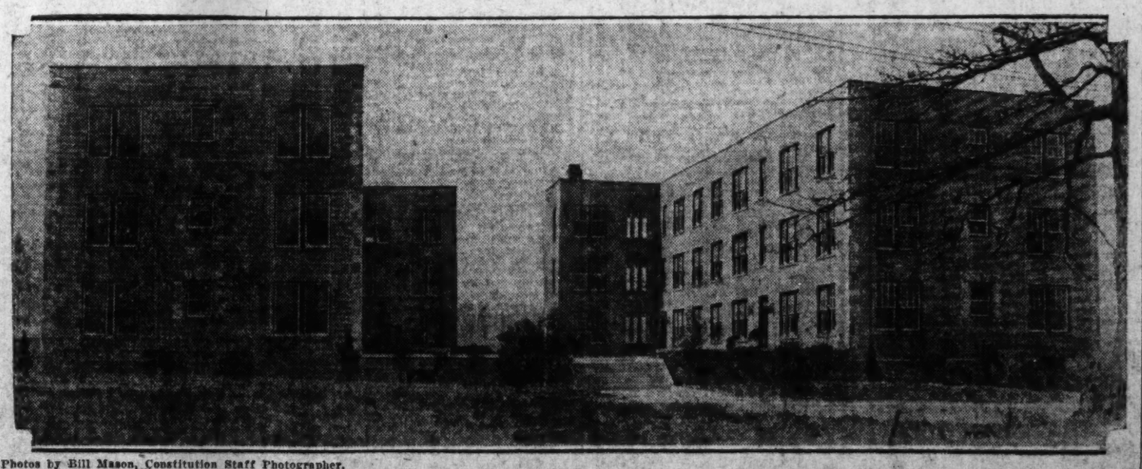

The railroad officer confessed he deposited to his personal account checks which came to his desk from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Kansas City Star in payment of charges of newspapers carried in Frisco baggage cars to out-of-town customers over a period of more than four years and gambled the money away.

The exact amount taken will not be determined until the Frisco completes its audit, but the Post-Dispatch reported Chalmers deposited its checks to his accounts totaling $42,407.59; the Kansas City Star $31,708.72, and the Globe-Democrat said it had paid $50,000 through Chalmers, indicating the proportionate loss through that source would approximate $30,000.

LIQUOR DEFENDANTS SENTENCED TO PRISON

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 12.—(AP)—After overruling motions for new trials submitted by six of the eight defendants convicted in the Pottawatomie county liquor conspiracy trial in February, United States Judge Edgar S. Vaught passed sentence this afternoon on all eight. Frank Fox, former sheriff of the county, was sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary and fined $1,000, the maximum.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN,
Associated Press Market Editor.

CHICAGO, April 12.—(AP)—Unable to stand up under increased selling, the wheat market today broke sharply. An official forecast of widespread rain or snow next week proved the undoing of immediate hopes of higher prices and led to the execution of many stop-loss orders. Toward the last bear speculators pressed their advantage and the market failed to show much strength.

Wheat closed spinless at virtually the bottommost level reached, 17-8-2 3-4 cents a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 5-8-1 3-8 cents down, oats 3-8-5-8 cent off, and provisions showed 5-10 cents drop.

Despite numerous large buying orders from eastern sources during the price setbacks purchasing power was inadequate to absorb the rush of offerings that overwhelmed the pit. Even before the weekly forecast was issued pointing to likelihood of general moisture relief, the market was groggy because of scattered showers and possibilities of moge prior to Monday. Unusual prominence given to news of "bread days," observed in Italy as a measure to reduce wheat imports, tended to have an unsettling influence.

Another disturbing factor was word from a leading Chicago crop authority at Salina, Kan., that good rains soon would not only check crop punishment but would repair some of the drought damage already done to wheat throughout the southwest. Some friends of higher prices displayed unabated confidence, however, one trader declaring that moisture conditions in North America were the most unfavorable on record, and that recent high temperatures have brought Kansas wheat to a crisis. Also the United States wheat visible supply since January 1 has been decreasing at a rate seldom equaled, and even a larger decrease was expected Monday than was the case a week ago.

Corn values receded owing to fine weather for field work and liberal receipts. Oats sympathized with downturns in other cereals. The season's first purchase of new oats was recorded.

Provisions reflected the weakness of grain.

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—Listed bonds showed routine Saturday business today. A few of the leading rails managed to rally half a point or so, but the market was unable to develop much of a trend in the limited trading. No sales of United States governments were recorded in the first hour; in the second there were small transactions in first and fourth Liberties and the treasury 4s.

Convertibles slumped on the early dealings, but recovered fairly well. The late rally sent International Telephone 4 1-2s up 2 1-4 points to the new 1930 high of 128, while American Telephone 4 1-2s turned a point decline into an advance of 3-4. The amusement group was very quiet.

Buying of the rails involved chiefly odd lots in Rock Island general 4s, Santa Fe general 4s, Missouri Pacific "G" 5s, Pennsylvania 4 3-4s and Southern Railway general 4s, up 1-4 to 3-4. New York Central general 3 1-2s and Illinois Central 6 1-2s lost a point. In the semi-speculative group, St. Paul adjustment 5s sagged 7-8 to the new 1930 low of 71 1-8.

International Match 5s, which have been under steady accumulation in recent sessions, made a 1 1-2 point sprint to 103, the best price of the year. United Drug of Delaware 5s, Lorillard 7s, Detroit Edison 6s, Pacific Telephone 5s and some of the foreign sugars were heavy.

Foreign bonds drifted irregularly lower, but there were no outstanding changes.

VEGETABLE MARKETS STRONG, WITH SHIPMENTS INCREASING

POTATO PRICES STILL CLIMBING

United States Department of Agriculture.

(Bureau of Agricultural Economics.)

Fruit and vegetable markets were in a far better position last week than they have been for quite a while. Very material price advances were recorded for strawberries, onions, cabbage and old potatoes. Values of citrus fruit also are much higher than they had been. The Florida shipping season for citrus will close on April 15. Apple prices held well, and celery markets strengthened. Among the few products to decline were asparagus, lettuce, Florida tomatoes, new potatoes and Texas onions.

First cantaloupes of the season in carlots arrived from the west coast of Mexico, and it will not be long until the Imperial Valley of California is shipping cantaloupes. Watermelon acreage in the important southeastern area is being generally decreased this season. Texas plantings also will be reduced. Three early states shipping string beans had a combined total of nearly 30,000 acres this spring, or one-fifth more than last year, and the intended planting in six second-early states are about 25,000 acres, or practically the same as last season. North Carolina and Mississippi report decreases, while South Carolina and Louisiana have material increases over their 1929 bean acreage. Shipments from the Rio Grande Valley of Texas increased to 90 cars last week; Florida originated 60 and f.o.b. prices of beans were lower in both states.

Cauliflower movement dropped to 300 cars for the seven-day period, mostly California stock. Forwardings of Texas spinach increased slightly to 370 cars, and Virginia went up to 115 cars. Bushel baskets still brought 45c to 50c at Texas points. The Texas carrot movement became quite active again. Green-pea shipments from California totaled 105 cars. Sweet potato forwardings increased to 310 cars, half of which came from Tennessee. Output of 24 leading products together increased to 16,925 cars, or 1,500 more than during the same week last season.

Citrus Prices Advancing.

During the past month or six weeks city auction prices of Florida citrus fruit have advanced fully $1 per box. Recently the average value in eight large markets for Florida grapefruit was about $5 a box, and for oranges about $6 a box. Considerable fruit is being placed in storage for future requirements. As many as 1,000 carloads were supposed to be stored in a commercial way at the opening of April, approximately two-thirds being grapefruit and and the other third being oranges and mixed citrus.

Orange shipments last week still required 1,635 cars. Forwardings from California decreased to 1,165, while Florida started 465 cars to market. Shipments of Florida grapefruit increased to 770 cars, but other states originated only 60, and imports amounted to 115 cars.

Another sign of spring is seen in the arrival of the first four cars of cantaloupes from Mexico last week. These early arrivals usually bring high prices, if weather conditions are favorable in consuming centers. Acreage of cantaloupes and similar melons was very sharply increased in the Imperial valley of California this year, and far exceeds any previous season's plantings. In a dozen intermediate or mid-season cantaloupe states, plantings of this crop may be 8 per cent greater than last year's acreage. Arizona and Texas are sharply increasing their acreage; Arizona may have the high total of 14,000 acres. Arkansas may show a 25 per cent increase over its 1929 plantings of cantaloupes, but North Carolina expects a 50 per cent reduction.

Potatoes Advance Further.

Potato prices continued their upward swing in markets for old stock, though new southern potatoes were declining under the much heavier supply. Advances averaging about 50 cents per 100 pounds in the east and north and 35 cents in the west were recorded in f. o. b. markets. A top of $3 per 100 pounds was rapidly being approached in important shipping districts. The Chicago carlot market went up 40 cents to a top of $2.90 on northern round whites and up 50 cents to a top of $3.90 on Idaho Russets. Eastern jobbing centers were also higher. Florida Spaulding Rose potatoes declined just $1 to a level of $7 per barrel in the Hastings district, and Bliss Triumphs still returned $4 per 100 pounds sacked in the Rio Grande valley of Texas. City prices were lower on new stock, as the movement from Florida increased to 430 cars and that from Texas to 245 cars for the week.

Old stock required 5,010 cars, as Maine increased to 2,000. Forwardings from the north central region increased slightly to 1,400 cars. Movement from the west was gradually decreasing; Colorado shipped only 340 and Idaho 565 cars last week, while Washington started 235 cars.

Shipping sections of southern Idaho reported an f. o. b. market of about $3 per 100 pounds of Russet Burbanks, and the Yakima Valley advanced about $10 last week to a range of $60-62.50 per ton. In southern Colorado, shippers were getting $2.65-2.75 per 100 pounds, as against $2.40-2.50 in the Greely district. Prices in the north central area went up 50c to a range of $2.50-2.95, and sacked Round Whites in western New York were returning $2.75-2.85. A level of $2.65 on sacked Green Mountains in northern Maine represented an advance of 55c. The eastern jobbing range on Maine Green Mountains was $2.85-3.75. As western stock cleans up, some shippers are expecting Maine potatoes to go into the Chicago territory. Round Whites from Maryland or Pennsylvania sold in terminal markets at $2.50-3.50 per 100 pounds.

The 100-pound sacks of Bliss Triumphs from southern Texas ranged $3-5.50 in a number of cities, compared with 50-pound boxes from Cuba at $2.50-3.00 in New York and bushel crates from Florida at $2.50-3.75 in several consuming centers. Barrels of Florida Spaulding Rose potatoes were jobbing at $7-0.50.

Cabbage Prices High.

Cabbage was still in a strong position, with Texas stock higher at $100 per ton, or $4.25-5.50 per crate, f. o. b. Rio Grande valley points. City values reached $130-145 per ton or $4.25-6.00 per lettuce crate. New Orleans dealers got $6.50 per 100 pounds of flat-type cabbage from Louisiana. Imported stock strengthened to a jobbing range of $4-4.50 per 100-pound basket. Arrivals from foreign countries were quite heavy, totaling 145 from Holland, 35 from Denmark and 15 from Germany. Domestic movement was fast increasing from South Carolina and totaled 75 cars, with shipments from Texas and Florida, about steady at 290 and 155 cars, respectively. Prices of southeastern cabbage were very firm, because of relatively light supplies. The 1 1-2-bushel hampers from Florida and South Carolina sold within a general range of $2.75-4.00.

Louisiana Berries Advance.

Further delay in the active movement of Louisiana strawberries was helping to push up prices to a high level. Only 90 cars rolled from that state, compared with 510 during the same week last season. Florida was credited with only 40 and Texas with 10 cars. First movement of 21 carloads was reported from Alabama. First arrivals of 24-quart crates of best Alabama berries brought $5-7.00 in Cincinnati. The 24-pint crates from Louisiana were jobbing at $4.75-6.50, as the f. o. b. auction price went up to an average of $5.60. The market was strong and demand was exceeding the supply in Louisiana. Fort Worth dealers got $4.4-75 on 24-pint crates of Texas Strawberries. Last report from Florida showed growers getting a wider range of 18-32c a quart or 12-16c per pint. City wholesale prices on receipts from Florida were 36-60c per quart or 25-30c a pint.

Northern Onions Stronger.

Storage onions went up about 60c in western New York to a level of $2.75 per 100-pound sack. The wind-up of the old onion deal is proving most satisfactory. City prices advanced fully $1 per sack during the past week. Holdings are rather limited, though shipments totaled 410 cars, with New York and Colorado leading. During the same week last season, only 100 cars moved. Texas shipped 53 cars, compared with 400 during this same period last spring. Sales in southern Texas were made at a lower range of $2.50@2.60 per crates of mixed No. 1 and 2 yellow Bermudas. Both Texas and Chile yellow Bermudas sold at $3 per crates in terminal markets. The f.o.b. price of Crystal Wax onions in Texas was $2.75@2.85. Coachella valley season is expected to open by April 20.

The 100-pound sacks of New York and midwestern yellow onions were jobbing from $2@3.50, with 50-pound sacks at $1.35@2. These smaller sized bags of midwestern Whites ruled $2.50@3.50, and the 100-pound containers of western Valencia-type onions jobbed at $2@3, while the 50-pound bags brought $1.35@1.75.

Apple Markets Firm.

Apples strengthened somewhat in eastern cities, but shipping point prices held at recent levels. Shipments were still around 175 cars daily, of which the western states furnished about 100 cars. Movement recently has been heavier than a year ago, partly because of heavy holdings in the west. Washington last week forwarded 610 cars. New York increased temporarily to 300, and Virginia started 135 cars to market. Boxed Winesaps, extra fancy grade, medium to large sizes, were ranging $1.90@2 in the state of Washington. Best Baldwins, in bushel baskets, returned $2@2.10 to western New York shippers, with barrels at $5.50 each.

Arizona Lettuce Prominent.

Arizona lettuce declined 50c per crate in the Salt river valley, and city quotations also were at a lower range for all western stock. Quality and condition of California lettuce was quite variable and a wide range of jobbing prices prevailed. Eastern lettuce brought high prices. The cash-track price in Arizona was $1.35@1.50 per crates of 4 to 5-dozen heads. Arrivals from that state sold mostly at $2.25@4 in consuming centers, but California lettuce brought only $1@3.50. The 1 1-2-bushel hampers of Big Boston from Florida ranged $3.50@3.75 in New York city, and similar packages from South Carolina sold at $4.50@5.50.

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, unchanged at 16.15.

Receipts, 171; shipments, 1,236; stock, 84,609.

NEW YORK, April 12.—(AP)—An opening decline in cotton here today was attributed to the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and a favorable view of recent weather conditions in the south. It was followed by rallies on week-end covering, but they were not fully maintained and after selling up from 16.33 to 16.41, July closed at 16.39. The general market closed steady net unchanged to 6 points lower.

The opening was steady at a decline of 7 points to an advance of one point with the more active months showing net losses of about 5 to 9 points during the first few minutes under some overnight selling and local selling promoted by the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and a belief that recent wheather conditions had permitted favorable progress with farm work in the south.

There also seemed to be some further nervousness over the situation in Japan owing to the labor troubles reported in one of the leading cotton mills, although the stock exchange to Tokio reopened this morning. This may have contributed to the decline which carried May off to 16.28 and the new October contract to 16.23. Offerings were light, however, and the market steadied up during the middle of the morning on covering. May advanced to 16.38 and the new October to 16.29, but there was further realizing or liquidation and the improvement was not fully maintained. New crop months were relatively easy with May closing 113 points over the price of October.

There were reports of additions or pending additions to the certificated stock and it was said that some cotton was being shipped here from California for delivery next month. The present certificated stock as reported today amounts to 226,977 bales at the various designated delivery points, having increased about 33,000 bales since March 17, but there was nothing in the action of the market that was regarded as suggesting any weakening of the near month situation. Liverpool cables said that continental liquidation had been absorbed by Bombay buying and covering in that market, but reported depression in Manchester with the Indian boycott checking business in yarns.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 117,216 bales against 108,616 last year.

SPOTS IRREGULAR AT NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, April 12.—(AP)—The cotton market was a decidedly tame affair even for a short Saturday session, the trading being influenced mainly by evening up on both sides of account for over the week-end. There was some little demand for the near months near the end and October was somewhat neglected despite the reports of continued drouthy weather in western Texas and western Oklahoma.

With Liverpool lower than due the market opened quiet and steady with only a single sale on the call in July at a point decline. The market rallied four points on July after the opening on overnight buying orders. Prices later eased off 4 to 6 points on week-end realizing, but rallied near the end, particularly on near months recovering 6 to7 points. July, the most active month, after easing to 16.04, down 4 points from previous close, rallied 7 points to 16.11 and closed at 16.09 or just 1 point net higher for the day. The general market closed very steady, net 2 points up to 4 down.

Liverpool came in as due to 3 points worse than due and the only sale at the opening here in July showed 1 point decline. The market rallied a couple of points after the start and soon eased off and evened up, May dropping to 15.96, July 16.04 and October 15.25 or 4 to 6 points under the previous close.

The market after ruling quiet most of the session rallied on week-end covering at the end, making new highs on May at 16.02 and July at 16.11 or 6 to 7 points above the lows. October made a new high at 15.32, up 7 points. May closed at 16.02 or 2 points net up, July at 16.09 or 1 point net up, while October closed at 15.27 or 4 points net lower.

Utilities and Specialties Gain Support Near Finish

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, April 12.—(AP)—Price movements were indecisive and speculative enthusiasm less pronounced in today's week-end session of the stock market. Week-end profit-taking depressed the list generally for a time, but strong support appeared for some of the utilities and specialties before the close and net gains balanced the day's net losses. Total sales of 2,119,160 were the smallest for a two-hour session in nearly a month.

Week-end business news was fairly reassuring, although the March copper statistics appeared, and were rather unfavorable, as expected, showing further piling up of stocks, although average daily production was the lowest for the period in several weeks. The copper shares, however, already thoroughly deflated, held fairly steady. Reports from the steel trade indicated that operations would be well maintained next week, with the Youngstown area experiencing some increase in operations, with better demand from the automobile industry. Reports from the automobile manufacturing centers were increasingly cheerful, indicating that dealers are enteroing their most active season with less than a month's supply of cars.

Uneasiness Leaves.

Wall Street appeared entirely recovered from the momentary uneasiness caused yesterday by the report of a panic on the Tokio Stock Exchange.

It was found that the situtionwas caused principally by a local situation in the silk mills, and served merely to accentuate the already unfavorable economic situation in Japan. The nearby exchanges of Osaka and Yokohama were not seriously affected. Several important traders were out of town for the week-end today, evidently satisfied with conditions. Continuance of easy money is expected next week, but the three-day closing at the end of the week may cause considerable lightening of accounts.

Allied Chemical was again a buoyant feature, rushing up 12 points to a new high at 342, then losing a few points of its gain. The floating supply in this issue is said to be small. Eastman Kodak rallied 5 points and International Telephone was sent up more than 2 points to within a point of its 1930 high in heavy buying. A few utilities were well supported, American Water Works reaching new high ground.

Merger No Influence.

Apparent success in the move to merger Bethlehem Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube was without visible influence on the stocks. Republic, which will probably receive keener competition, rose 2 points, and Bethlehem 1, while Youngstown slipped off 3. Fourth National Investors, National Investors, National Air Transport, Phoenix Hosiery, Procter & Gamble and Warner Quinlan were among a few specialties to reach new high ground for the year. U. S. Steel lost about a point, and Air Reduction, Canada Dry, J. I. Case, Lackawanna, Hershey Chocolate, Houston Oil, Ingersoll Rand, Loose-Wiles, Macy, Public Service of New Jersey, Raybestos and Shattuck were among shares closing 2 to 3 points lower.

In the commodities grains eased on bearish weather reports. Wheat futures lost about 2 cents and corn half as much. Cotton futures showed little change.

Foreign exchanges were dull, easing slightly. Sterling cables ruled at $4.86 7-16, off 1-16. The Japanese yen held steady at 49.35 cents.

HIGHWAY TRANSPORTATION SEEN AS GREATEST BUSINESS IN U. S.

America Holds Opportunity To Supply World With Cars

Other Nations Eagerly Seek Heritage Which People Here Have Gained.

BY E. Y. WATSON.
(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and The North American Newspaper Alliance.)

DETROIT, Mich., April 12.—Highway transportation in gasoline-driven vehicles is the greatest business in the United States. Its world future, likewise, has greater potential possibilities than those of any other branch of trade, which America has been privileged to extend to other nations.

This conclusion, voiced by numerous major executives of the industry since January 1, has gained added certainty in forecasts that have been made on the business prospects of this year and those to follow it.

Not only the predictions, but the statistics bear out the assumption, to which is largely due the steadiness with which the large producers have faced unfavorable conditions affecting certain divisions of the industry.

Compilations made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and broadcast as official reveal the real relationship of transport to other business. The wholesale value of cars and trucks produced last year rose to $3,483,900,000. For parts and accessories, used for replacement and also service equipment, the value was $920,000,000. The value of tires for replacement was $600,000,000.

To other countries, America sold 1,015,000 motor vehicles. With parts and tires, these were estimated to be worth $757,400,000, an increase of 23 per cent over the preceding year.

In the production of last year, the automobile industry consumed 85 per cent of all the rubber manufactured in the United States; 67 per cent of all the plate glass; 19 per cent of the iron and steel; 15 per cent of the copper; 18 per cent of the lumber and hardwood; 27 per cent of the lead and 80 per cent of the gasoline.

It took 207,000,000 barrels of gasoline to run the cars last year. Crude rubber used for tires totaled 913,929,000 pounds. Cotton fabric used for the same purpose weighed 287,000,000 pounds.

The number of motor vehicles registered in this country at the beginning of 1930 was 26,400,000, recording a gain of 8 per cent in 12 months.

The motor vehicle and allied lines now give employment to 4,300,000 persons within our borders.

On the above data, Alvan MacAuley, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and head of the Packard Motor Car Company, has attested the automobile industry to be the country's largest manufacturing operation and one of the most important necessities of American life.

"This heritage of transportation," he has stated, "which has lifted America to the heights of personal freedom, is being sought eagerly by other countries. Motor car miles for the rest of the world are growing, though now far exceeded by those annually rolled up in this country."

The extent to which this is true was revealed in June, last, when the General Motors Corporation brought export managers from many countries of the world to Detroit for a conference. It was shown then that the scope of the export field comprised 104 nations; that the market abroad covers seven and one-half times as much territory as the market in the United States. Besides, it is estimated to contain 12 1-2 times as many inhabitants, but at present absorbs less than 1,200,000 motor vehicles a year.

This may be compared with approximately 4,000,000 now considered normal for our country alone.

Of the future prospect in this direction, James D. Mooney, vice president in charge of export operations for General Motors, believes that a commercial awakening is coming to the rest of the world. Returning from a recent trip through the orient, he said he found two factors encouraging to American businessmen looking toward the export field for signs that will quicken the recovery from the retardation of late 1929.

One, he pointed out, is the essential basic likeness of the peoples of all lands. The other is the rapid trend toward the motorization of commercial transportation.

"Other parts of the world," he said, "are as impatient of sub-normal business conditions as America and therefore, having reached a higher economic level during the past decade, they are not going to recede if human effort and ingenuity can prevent it.

"We are all alike under the skin," he adds. "The rapid trend toward motorizing business hardly needs elaboration. We have seen what it has done for the United States and Europe. I am not so much impressed with the obvious fact that America with her efficient, cheap commercial cars will sell more to the world as I am with the enormously beneficial effect upon the whole commercial life of these countries that motorization is certain to have."

Scientist Predicts New Thought Organs in Man

The world awaits the superman. And now science has predicted him. Dr. Constantin Von Economo, of Vienna, has recently prophesied that man's mind will not only improve, but will develop new organs of thought. Addressing a congress of world famous psychiatrists, or mental physicians, in New York city, he said that there are constant improvements in man's mental capacity, and that the limit of development has not been reached. Popular Science Monthly reports. Dr. Von Economo bases his prediction on studies of the cell structure of the brain carried on since 1917. He asserts that there are 107 regions in the brain, to some of which he has been able to ascribe special functions. Up to 1913 scientists had described only twenty of such areas. If this theory is sound, the age is approaching when men will comprehend Einstein as readily as they now understand simple arithmetic.

Chryslers Built Under Finest Working Conditions

When the signal was given that started the first new Chrysler Six down the final assembly line, production experts of Chrysler motors had realized their ambition to build a motor car under ideal plant facilities for manufacturing, assembly and final test.

Every recent development in production work had been focused on the new Chrysler Six to maintain quality and control cost so the car could be marketed in the lowest price field that the Chrysler Sales Corporation ever offered a six-cylinder car.

The final assembly line is located in the largest single room in the world under one roof, having an actual floor area of 22.7 acres, and especially designed to afford maximum natural light and ventilation. The assembly line in this room is 1,300 feet long and carries cars along at an approximate speed of 16 feet a minute, thus taking a chassis 81 minutes to become a finished car. Twelve miles of overhead conveyors carry material, "bringing the work to the men" so that valuable time can be saved and slower operations avoided. Exacting specifications insure every part slipping quickly in place.

Along this line is every device that can be used to make the assembly of cars accurate and careful. Cars pass the workmen waist high so handwork, stooping and lifting are unknown. Chrysler officials have found that the quality of work is closely affected by conditions under which the men operate. Electrically driven socket wrenches swinging from overhead trolleys are provided, permitting tools to be carried along the line with the cars.

Overhead conveyors carry parts and sub-assemblies in endless procession. Extra parts not needed at the time they reach the line make the circuit and return again. Lighted and ventilated pits are provided for body bolting and assembly work under the chassis so all operations can be comfortably and quickly done.

At the motor plant, the engines for the new Chrysler Six are assembled in the same efficient manner. Machining operations on the block are combined at the minimum of time and cost. As the engine proceeds down the line, inspected parts are quickly put in place until the finished power plant is ready for delivery. No work is hurried, yet the rate of assembly contributes materially to the new price of the car.

Conforming to Chrysler policy, all engines undergo a block test where they are operated under their own power, watched by trained experts who carefully check their performance. The dynamometer test follows in which the engines are required to register their rated horsepower on electrical instruments before they are dropped into the chassis frame.

After the cars are assembled, the final roll test is given to insure the satisfactory road operation of the completed car. Here, the car is driven under its own power with rear wheels resting on rollers. Leaving the test stand, the cars go to the final inspection line where each is checked for all equipment including door locks and hinges, window mechanisms, exterior finish, interior trim, lights, horn, starter and all other details. When the tags are attached denoting this final O. K., the cars are ready for delivery or shipment to Chrysler dealers.

Auburn Shows Big Sales Increase For March

AUBURN, Ind., April 12.—March shipment of Auburn and Cord cars show a sharp increase over February of this year, R. H. Faulkner, vice president, announced today. Total number of cars shipped in March was 2,502, as compared with 1,869 in February of this year and 2,308 in March, 1929.

Shipment of 840 cars for the week ending March 1, was exceeded by only three weeks in the history of the company, namely the weeks ending May 18, May 25 and June 1, 1929, when 857, 840 and 866 cars were shipped respectively. The first three months of 1930, shipments totaled 6,003 cars, as compared with 5,848 cars during the first three months of last year.

The week ending March 15, 1930, showed a production of 591 cars, the largest week of production since the one ending June 29, 1929, and was 36 per cent greater than the same week last year when 435 cars were produced.

Production for the first two weeks of March of this year was 1,061, which compares with 1,060, for the same period last year.

Unfilled orders on hand for Cord and Auburn cars now total approximately 560. April 1 there were 20 per cent more orders on hand than listed on March 1.

Junior College Day Planned at Emory

Emory University's three junior colleges will participate in Junior College Day here Friday and Saturday, May 2 and 3. The program will include athletic contests, intercollegiate debates, music contests and other entertainment, Professor J. B. Peebles, chairman of the committee, has announced.

A cup will be awarded the college scoring the greatest number of points. Bill Rivers, Willis Nolan, Clyde Bowie, Ed Vinson and Emmett Cartledge form the committee to make arrangements for housing the guests from out of town.

New Appointments Announced By Buick Motor Co.

Important promotions in the purchasing department of the Buick Motor Company were announced this week by E. T. Strong, president and general manager, simultaneously with the retirement of George G. Allen, present general purchasing agent, after some 14 years of service with the company.

R. L. Kurtz, present assistant to Mr. Allen, has been appointed general purchasing agent, and William J. Brewer, formerly assistant purchasing agent, becomes assistant general purchasing agent. Mr. Allen's retirement and the promotion of his assistants are effective immediately, Mr. Strong said in making the announcement. The Buick president added that the promotion of Mr. Kurtz and Mr. Brewer are in line with the company's policy of recognizing faithful service and ability.

Mr. Allen has been general purchasing agent for the last 10 years, during which time the department has grown to huge proportions, in keeping with the general growth of the company. Prior to becoming purchasing agent Mr. Allen served four years as assistant purchasing agent.

Marmon First To Make Eight Available in $1,000 Class

First announced nationally less than a month ago, the new Marmon-Roosevelt straight-eight has met immediate public approval and acceptance, according to many reports received at the Marmon factory from Marmon distributors and dealers from coast to coast.

The Marmon-Roosevelt is a new model of the first straight-eight ever produced to sell in the $1,000 field, having been improved and refined after a close analysis of the performance of the car and the experience of thousands of owners over a period of 12 months.

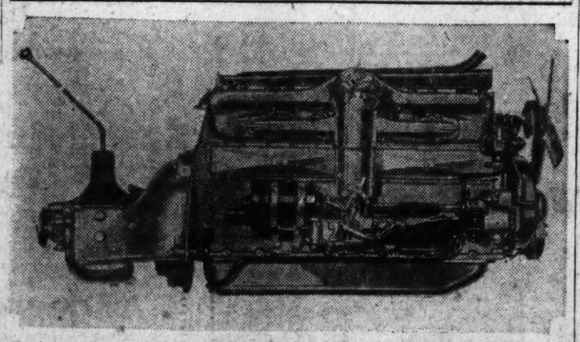

Little more than a year ago, Marmon had the distinction of presenting the first straight-eight in the low price classification. Unusually successful not only from the standpoint of sales volume but from the standpoint of service and performance, this car proved the feasibility of offering straight-eight advantages to a vast number of motorists who previously found price an obstacle to the purchase of an eight.

Though the entire automotive industry now recognizes the popularity and practicability of the straight-eight and many new eights have appeared this year, the new Marmon-Roosevelt remains the only time-tested eight in the $1,000 field. This fact, Marmon sales officials believe, is one of the important reasons for the unusual success attained in the introduction period of the new product.

Mechanically, the new Marmon-Roosevelt has been refined to increase the horse-power from 70 to 77, and to lower the entire car to the ground, enhancing riding qualities and roadability. In appearance, the new car is now characteristically Marmon. The radiator is of the familiar contour so long used on Marmon products and the hood, front end ensemble, body and interior bear close resemblance to the other three straight-eight models in the Marmon line for 1930.

"We feel that the public acceptance of the new Marmon-Roosevelt is another indication of the trend toward the straight-eight this year," said Thomas E. Jarrard, Marmon general sales director. "Those companies which have established themselves as straight-eight builders are enjoying unusual popularity, and in this connection we believe that Marmon, by virtue of having built straight-eights only for four years, will be in the front rank of successful companies this year."

Hudson's Great 8 Has Dual Flow Lubrication

A new type of oscillating plunger pump feeds oil to both the front and rear ends of the crank chamber. This equal distribution of the oil, combined with the relatively short path of the oil stream travel, gives uniform engine lubrication with cool oil, and subsequently cooler operating temperatures of the crank and main bearings, resulting in smooth operation and long life.

Goodyear Plans School For Its Employes

Establishment of a correspondence school for the benefit of its employes who work in the field or at subsidiary plants, is planned by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, of Akron, Ohio.

The company maintains one of the biggest industrial universities in the world, and now has an enrollment of 1,563 students. The industrial university maintains a staff of 13 full-time and 19 part-time instructors.

Two courses will be offered with the inauguration of the correspondence school unit of the university, in business correspondence and foreman training, respectively.

The Goodyear company has plants and subsidiaries in New England, Alabama, Georgia, Arizona, California and several foreign countries. Employes in any of the subsidiary plants will be eligible to take the correspondence courses offered.

Texas & Pacific Ry. Adds to Force Here

Realizing the growing importance of the southeast, the Texas & Pacific railway, which has long maintained offices in Atlanta, has increased its representation in Atlanta by adding an assistant general agent to its present organization.

Mark L. Craig, who comes to Atlanta from Oklahoma City, where he has been connected with the Texas & Pacific railway for the past several years, has been appointed to this newly created position.

Mr. Craig reached the city a few days ago and has already taken up his new duties. The Texas & Pacific railway offices are located at 217 Healey building.

Cadillac V-16 Feature Of Spring Showing

"On April 12 Cadillac-LaSalle dealers all over the country will formally open the spring showing of Cadillac's full line of motor cars, with the new 16-cylinder Cadillac as a special feature," says Lawrence P. Fisher, president of Cadillac Motor Car Company.

"Because the LaSalle, the Cadillac V-8, and the Cadillac V-16 offer a selection of more than 100 body types, it is very probable that this spring showing will be the public's only opportunity for some time to see a really representative display of the three cars. Many of our customers have generously permitted us to exhibit V-16s actually assigned to them in order that we might show as full a line of body styles as possible.

"In most cities, V-16 trial cars will be available. Everyone is cordially invited, without obligation, to take the wheel of the V-16 as the guest of our dealer.

"Although the V-16 will be the feature of this showing, honors will be shared by the LaSalle V-8 and the Cadillac V-8, which will be presented in the most advanced body styles by Fisher and Fleetwood.

"In this spring showing, appropriate to this pre-Easter season, the Cadillac Motor Car Company reveals a national exhibit which, in interest and scope, no single manufacturer has ever equaled. Never before has one builder presented a line of fine automobiles embracing more than 100 body types, and including three distinct motor cars.

"Fisher and Fleetwood, in bodies they have provided for LaSalle and Cadillac V-8s, have been most lavish in the choice and use of exquisite fabrics and tasteful appointments. In either car a body style can be found which will exactly suit the needs of the purchaser. In the Cadillac V-8 the selection is necessarily larger than in the LaSalle. Yet it is no more complete, for LaSalle body types cover all of the seven styles that are accepted as basic in the automobile industry.

"Fleetwood, in the highly individualized special custom bodies it has created for the Cadillac V-16 has made it possible for each to be personalized to the fullest extent. It is almost literally true that, in these luxurious and smart custom cars the buyer can design his own coach work.

"Cadillac and General Motors engineers, in the V-type engines with which these three cars are powered, have combined the engineering ability and experience of the world's largest motor car builder. All of the resources, all of the research facilities of both organizations have united to produce chassis which are quite different and which have been continuously built by Cadillac through many successful years."

Services at Trinity Tribute to Mansfield

"Dead Stones versus Living Tones" will form the interesting subject of the sermon to be preached this morning at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church during memorial services in memory of the late William C. Mansfield, for more than 20 years superintendent of the church's Sunday school Dr. Ben J. Potter, of London, will direct an appropriate program of music.

Mr. Mansfield took a devoted interest in Trinity's choir during his life and in order properly to perpetuate his memory the Mansfield Music Memorial Fund has been founded, it was announced, affording his friends an opportunity to contribute to his memory.

As fine as money can build or buy

EIGHTS and SIXES

It is natural to want the best. Public preference invariably follows the arrival of a superior product.

And there is a best. Always, there is some manufacturer unwilling to be satisfied with an average result.

In motor cars, one manufacturer who insists upon a superior product is Nash.

No manufacturer has finer facilities to produce fine cars than Nash. None lays down any more rigid standards for materials and craftsmanship. None has learned how to build with more skill and precision, or with less waste.

This must be very evident to anyone who knows fine motor cars and who studies the Nash "400."

The Twin-Ignition Eight, the Twin-Ignition Six, and the Single Six represent three cars in three popular price fields as fine as money can build or buy, designed by an engineering staff recognized by the motor car industry as one of the most capable in the profession.

Nash Features You Should Know

Centralized chassis lubrication, built-in, automatic radiator shutters, and the world's easiest steering in every model. Adjustable front seats. T. K. GLENN TO DIRECT RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Atlanta Banker Will Be in Charge of Drive, Opening April 21.

The membership roll call of the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross, which will be held during the week of April 21, will be headed by T. K. Glenn, well-known Atlanta banker, with Baxter Maddox and Bob Stevens acting as associate chairmen. Miss Gail McDonald and Dr. C. W. Harwell will serve as co-chairmen for the house-to-house invitation to membership.

For several years Red Cross activities in Atlanta have been identified with the Community Chest, contributors to that organization being considered as automatically becoming members of the Red Cross. This roll call, however, will mark the resumption of the individual membership in both the Atlanta chapter and the national organization.

"We hope that thousands of Atlanta citizens will welcome the opportunity to re-establish their individual membership in the Red Cross," said Mr. Glenn Saturday. "Membership in this great humanitarian organization is something in which most of us take a keen pride. We like to feel when we read of the wonderful work of the national organization that it is peculiarly our organization and that we have a part in it. The same thing is true of the activities of the Atlanta chapter. There is no need to enlarge upon the work which is done by the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross. Nearly everyone is familiar with it and very happily a great many Atlantans have to their own benefit taken part in it.

"We feel confident that the resumption of the membership basis of the operations of the Atlanta chapter will meet with the approval of everyone, since the Red Cross is essentially an organization of its individual members."

Plans for a roll call include a request for co-operation on the part of all civic clubs and industries in Atlanta, which has always in the past been freely given, according to chapter officials. A meeting of the general board of the Atlanta chapter will be held on April 17 at 4 p. m. at the chapter headquarters, 289 Peachtree street, when the final details of the roll call will be discussed.

RETAIL MERCHANTS TO MEET THURSDAY

What promises to be one of the outstanding and most constructive membership meetings ever staged by the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association, is set for Thursday night at 6:30 o'clock with dinner in the tea room of Rich's department store.

The program will be preceded by dinner, accompanied by a number of musical features and several surprise stunts, for the entertainment of those who attend.

Notices have been mailed to the more than 400 members of the association, inviting all of the executives, department heads and sales people to attend and hear the subject of "What Retail Merchants Can Do to Help Stabilize Business Conditions," discussed by three of the big leaders in the association. This subject has been of national, widespread interest since the early part of the year.

Clarence Haverty, vice president and general manager of the Haverty stores, will treat the subject from the standpoint of "Modern Methods of Merchandising as a Stimulant to Sales and Profits."

Frank Neely, general manager of Rich's, will analyze the question from the standpoint of "Store Service as a Help to Improve and Stabilize Business."

Jake Harris, member of the Kelly-Smith Advertising Agency, will handle the subject from the angle of "Advertising as a Stimulant and Stabilizer to Business."

The association's membership is made up of the leading, representative retail stores of the city, and at the present time it is stronger than it has ever been in the 16 years since it was organized.

Vick Chemical Co. Wins Suit on Name

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—(Special.)—Judge Thompson, presiding in United States district court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, has handed down a decision in favor of Vick Chemical Company in its case against Frederick E. Strohmeier, in which emphasis is placed by the court upon protection of the buying public against fraudulent use of a trade name, Vick's VapoRub.

"The defendant will be enjoined," Judge Thompson's decision reads, "against use of the plaintiff's trade name, as he has been using it, to deceive and perpetrate a fraud upon the public and, by pirating its trademark, to injure and damage the reputation the plaintiff has built up. A decree may be entered for an injunction accordingly and for damages sustained by the plaintiff and profits derived by the defendant from his acts of infringement and unfair competition."

This case grew out of the action of Strohmeier in the marketing of a cough drop which he claimed, on the package, was "medicated with Vick's VapoRub."

Future Atlanta Seen As Fine Arts Center

Atlanta as a center of the fine arts, with a local academy providing for the training of young local sculptors, is the vision of Dr. Josef Klein, sculptor and natural scientist. Dr. Klein recently opened a studio in the Studio Arts building here, where he is engaged in carving a natural size figure of a dancing girl which he says he will exhibit when it is completed.

Dr. Klein, who was born near the famous art center, Munich, Germany, has studied extensively abroad and expresses the hope that his studio will become the nucleus of a local academy of fine arts for Atlanta students.

Inman Park Methodist To Continue Revivals

Special revival services are being conducted every night at 7:30 o'clock at the Inman Park Methodist church, 1013 Edgewood avenue, under the direction of the pastor, Rev. Fred L. Glisson. These revival meetings, it was announced Saturday, will be continued through Easter Sunday, and an invitation is extended to the public to attend.

Wins National Prize

L. E. Stansbury, display manager of Keely Company, has been awarded first prize in the nation-wide contest conducted by the manufacturer of "As You Like It" hosiery for his window display during National As You Like It Week. Between 1,100 and 1,200 stores throughout the United States participated in the contest and Mr. Stansbury gained wide recognition in winning the first prize.

1930 'Cleanup' Week Campaign Opens Monday

Sixty thousand school children of Atlanta will take part in the "Clean-up, paint-up, plant-up week," beginning Monday and continuing throughout the rest of the week, which is being sponsored by the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce in its efforts to build up interest in beautification of the city, it was announced by leaders in the movement Saturday.

Under the leadership of Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools, the local juvenile population is expected to play a prominent part in the annual spring cleaning here, it was said by leaders in the movement. The superintendent is active in his efforts to induce the school children to take part in the move for giving Atlanta a cleaner and brighter surface.

According to members of the woman's division the universal idea of a clean-up week originated in public schools, dating back to 1911, they say, when several Chicago high schools undertook annual house-cleaning among the city's schools, later expanding their activities until the nation-wide movement resulted.

Since the beginning of the clean-up and paint-up campaign the added feature of "planting up" has resulted in widespread interest among the workers, it was said, and this phase of the campaign is regarded as one of the most practical developments of the annual endeavor.

This year's campaign has been given impetus, it was pointed out, by the work of the Lions' Club of Atlanta which is presenting every civic organization of the city with a brand-new broom made by the skillful fingers of workers in the local school for the blind. This broom is emblematic of the annual drive and is being widely distributed in the efforts of the women's division to make the present campaign a success.

'Queer' Families Brought to Light By Census Work

The great Anglo-Saxon race with which the bulk of Atlantans claim identity stands small chance of racial suicide in this vicinity, according to reports coming into the federal census bureau. And this despite the fact that a majority of families now have but from one to three children.

Three Fulton county families have been reported in the past two days of 12 children each. In one of the families, it was said, a rural family on the edge of the county, not only were the 12 children living and in good health, but every one of them is still living under the parental roof.

The decennial census, Dr. Elizabeth Broach, who is in charge of the work in Atlanta, states, always brings to light numerous cases of "queer" families—queer either in the sense that they are people of peculiar habits or in the sense that they are unusual in other ways.

There are several families in Atlanta, for instance, where all of the children are girls. And several others where all are boys. The stork, it seems, shows partiality frequently.

Another family in Atlanta, brought to light by inquiring enumerators, makes it a practice never to answer a doorbell. Three calls at the home brought no results. Neighbors told of the "queer" strain, and the telephone was resorted to successfully to effect an engagement.

Many people dodge the census enumerators. The dodgers, Dr. Broach says, are restricted to no one class, but are found in both sexes and in every walk of life.

A number of Atlanta men are dodging the enumerators under the belief that the information gained will be used as the basis of conscription in the event of another war, she said. And, strangely enough, the event of the census seems to have encouraged a belief that the United States is about to engage in another war.

Although most people give the enumerators co-operation in their work, occasionally people are found who do not. The local class who seem to be given the greatest trouble in this respect, it was said, are clerks in hotels and in boarding houses. "But at the same time some of them have given us splendid co-operation," Dr. Broach said.

Approximately one-third of the Fulton county population had been listed in the census at the close of Tuesday's business. The enumeration will continue in the city through the fifteenth, and in the rural districts through a 30-day period. After that special men will be assigned to "hand pick" those who have not been listed.

The refusal to answer census questions is made a misdemeanor by federal law, punishable by a fine up to $100 or imprisonment up to 60 days, or both; and the giving of a false answer is punishable by a fine not exceeding $500 and imprisonment not exceeding a year.

CHEVROLET

..it's wise to choose a SIX!

There is one sure way to get greater value in a low-priced car today—choose a Six!

This greater value is instantly obvious when you drive a Chevrolet Six. You notice first of all its greater smoothness. Because of its modern six-cylinder design, the Chevrolet motor delivers its power smoothly and quietly. In every gear and at every speed, there is a refreshing freedom from all the annoyances that are caused by vibration. There is no tremor in the steering wheel—no rattle in the floor boards—no rumble or drumming in the body.

In addition to the finer performance of its six-cylinder motor, the new Chevrolet gives you truly remarkable economy.

Its six-cylinder smoothness saves the entire car—engine, chassis and body—from the strain and wear of vibration. This, of course, lowers the cost of maintenance and assures a longer-lasting, longer-satisfying automobile.

From the standpoint of operating expense, Chevrolet is equally economical. In a recent economy test of more than 40 cars, a six-cylinder Chevrolet Coach won first place—averaging better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline in a 200-mile run from sea level to an elevation of 6000 feet. No automobile surpasses Chevrolet in oil economy. No car shows a lower expense for tires. And Chevrolet service, which is available from more than 10,000 authorized Chevrolet service stations, is remarkably economical. In fact, Chevrolet's flat rate charges—including both parts and labor—are the lowest in the automotive industry on many service and repair operations.

Because of its modern engineering, Chevrolet also assures a high resale value—for its entire design is just as advanced as its six-cylinder valve-in-head engine.

Chevrolet gives you fully-enclosed, weather-proof, 4-wheel brakes. It gives you a modern fuel system—with the gasoline tank mounted in the rear outside the body. It gives you four long semi-elliptic springs, mounted lengthwise in the direction of car travel. It gives you beautiful Fisher bodies built of combination hardwood-and-steel. It gives you a heavy, rigidly-braced channel-steel frame, which supports the body throughout its entire length. It gives you a full ball bearing steering mechanism, an adjustable driver's seat, a Fisher VV non-glare windshield, and tilting beam headlights, operated by a foot-controlled button.

Before you decide on any car in the low-price field, see and drive the Chevrolet Six. Learn for yourself the finer performance of its six-cylinder valve-in-head motor. Note how much more flexible it is in traffic, how much more easily it accelerates, how smooth and quiet it is. Check Chevrolet's low prices—model for model—against any other car in the low-price field.

The more thoroughly you investigate, the more certain you are to conclude that it's wise to choose a Six—for value, for performance . . . and for economical transportation!

Cannon Ball Baker Sets New Record to Macon

One Hour, Eight Minutes and Eight Seconds Required to Travel 85.6 Miles.

A new fast record now exists between Atlanta and Macon. An open road record run was established early this morning by Cannon Ball Baker, speed king, and peer of all open road drivers. To make his fast time Baker drove his Franklin sedan powered with the regular air-cooled airplane type motor introduced by the manufacturer at the New York Auto Show and on display at the Franklin Motor Car Company at 481 West Peachtree street, N. E.

As in a plane Baker zoomed from Atlanta to Macon at the phenomenal average speed of 75.38 miles per hour. For the distance his speedometer registered 85.6 miles which he covered in 1 hour 8 minutes and 8 seconds. To make this run the Cannon Ball chose the main heavily traveled highway that connects the two cities via Griffin. Driving this route it was necessary for him to pass through a number of smaller towns as well. Other than these his course zipped around 183 turns, which were taken at extreme high speeds in order to maintain his splendid average. Another difficulty met with was traffic, it being necessary for him to meet and pass 36 moving automobiles during the run.

Since the first of the year Baker has been doing some very successful work in the southeast breaking and making records that have surpassed anything ever done in this section of the country by any other so-called road record driver. In January he glided down to Miami from New York, a distance of 1,451 miles, in 24 hours 20 minutes, at the remarkable speed of 59.6 miles per hour. During the early part of March he shot a run from Fort Myers to Miami over the highway that runs through the Everglades at the breath-taking speed of 75.6 miles per hour for a mileage of 133 1-2 in 1 hour and 46 minutes. Driving to the west coast of Florida he then established an almost uncanny record across Gandy bridge. Starting in St. Petersburg he roared through the toll gate on the Tampa side at the unprecedented speed of 83.4 miles per hour. The distance covered on this run was 5.2 miles in 3 minutes 43.9 seconds. His next achievement is now Atlanta history as it was a fast record to Asheville over the difficult mountain route via Gainesville and Franklin. This run totaled a mileage of 207 which was driven in 3 hours and 38 minutes for the high average of 56.9 miles per hour, a remarkable speed for the route driven.

In commenting on his latest achievement Baker explained, "Since arriving in Atlanta I have had this Macon run in mind, partly because I knew it would establish an unbeatable fast record, but more for my very good friend of almost 20 years standing, Harry J. Glenn, the genial and jovial southern representative for Indian motorcycles. Macon being his home town, I knew he would get a thrill from the event. The average attained is close to that of the Fort Myers run, but is really better as the Macon trip meant more towns to be driven through and greater traffic to contend with during the drive. The average attained can be expected by any driver of the Franklin motor, for to drive one is to experience the feeling of flying."

On the run Baker carried his mechanic, George H. Schleicher, and his old friend, Harry J. Glenn. At the finish Baker was met by the representatives of the Yates Motor Car Company, Macon, the official timer, and a group of interested friends. The run was timed at the start officially by C. A. Perry and at the finish by L. J. Davis, both employes of the Western Union Telegraph Company, as all of the work by Baker is officially timed and the records filed.

Exchange Clubs Of Georgia Meet Here Next Week

Members from every Exchange Club in every city in Georgia will gather at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel here next Sunday, April 20, for a three-day meeting constituting the fourth annual state convention of the Georgia Affiliated Exchange Clubs, with a program replete with business and social affairs before it.

Addresses by John Kennedy, of Savannah, president of the affiliation; Thomas C. Imeson, of Jacksonville, first vice president of the National Exchange Club; election of new officers and several social and entertainment features are on the program for the three-day meeting which will begin with an informal reception of representatives.

The two following days will be given over to affairs of business, after the visitors have registered, with the first session beginning at 10:30 next Monday when John Royer, president of the Atlanta Exchange Club, delivers the address of welcome on behalf of the local body, followed by a similar address on behalf of the city, to be delivered by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale.

Mr. Imeson's speech will be on the subject, "Exchange as a National Organization," following which reports from various clubs will be read and committees appointed. On next Monday afternoon a golfers' luncheon, followed by a tournament, will be given at the East Lake Country Club, and at 3 o'clock that afternoon there will be a bridge party at the Biltmore. A dinner-dance is set for the evening, with the Rev. N. R. H. Moor, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, as principal speaker and John Royer as toastmaster.

Tuesday's meeting will be featured by an address by H. B. Stuckey, of Griffin, director of the Georgia experiment station, with reports of committees, short talks by various representatives, election of officers and the address of the present-elect as the principal items of the program. This will be followed by a luncheon at the Biltmore during which the attendance cup will be presented, and later in the afternoon a sight-seeing trip, including a tour of Candler field and airplane rides, will complete the afternoon's session.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday night the visitors will be given a theater party at the Fox theater, followed by other entertainment.

Henderson To Conduct Revival at Calvary

Singing will be directed by J. G. Rosser, with Mrs. Z. T. Dake as pianist and Mrs. N. G. Baggett as soloist.

At 10:30 o'clock Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings union services will be held at the Presbyterian church, on Gordon street, with the pastors of the co-operating churches preaching in rotation.

Durant Official On Tour Of Southern States

Harry J. Shorter, assistant general sales manager for the Durant Motor Company, was a visitor in Atlanta the past week of F. E. Maffett, local Durant dealer.

Mr. Shorter is on the last leg of a swing around the country that has carried him through every state has car-Union. He says that the entire country is recovering rapidly from its slump, and predicts an early return of normalcy. He said further that Durant sales in the south have far exceeded their expectations and with this unusual sales activity they expect a great year for Durant cars.

HARRY J. SHORTER.

Durant Sales Showing Increase Throughout Country

In 25 out of 38 states for which official new car registration figures are now available Durant retail sales for February showed a decided improvement over January this year. In ten of these states February, 1930, new car sales equaled or exceeded those of February, 1929, and in nine states sales for January and February this year are above sales for the two corresponding months last year. These statements indicating improvement in retail automobile sales, are released by R. T. Hodgkins, general sales manager of Durant Motors.

"Durant's progress this year," Mr. Hodgkins says, "seems all the more significant when consideration is given to the fact that early last year Durant was building a four-cylinder car in the lowest price field as well as four distinct lines of sixes and now Durant production is concentrated on two lines of new sixes. In the first two months this year Durant has sold 81.6 per cent more six-cylinder cars than during the corresponding months last year."

Taking an optimistic view of future demand for automobiles, Mr. Hodgkins makes the following prediction: "Those automobile dealers whose stocks on hand and whose commitments will enable them to make immediate delivery of new cars of the types their prospects need, if they do not over-allow on used cars that can not be turned quickly—should find business good and should make better profit during 1930 than during 1929. The fact that dealers throughout the United States carried over into 1930 the largest stocks of new cars they had ever had on any January 1 and that on March 1 these stocks had been reduced to the lowest figure for that date in five years foretells insufficient stocks in many parts of the country to satisfy the spring demand. Many dealers will be unable to secure additional cars they need from the factories on last-minute orders. The profitable business, as I see it, will go to the dealers who are ready."

Oakland Dealers Report Improved Used Car Demand

Marked improvement in the sale of used cars throughout the United States is indicated by dealer reports received by the Oakland Motor Car Company.

The figures cover the period of March 1 to March 31, inclusive, during which there normally is recorded a progressive increase in the sale of used cars. During 1929, the period of March 10 to March 31 showed an increase of 209 per cent in used car sales over the period of March 1 to March 10. During the corresponding periods of the present year the increase in used car sales jumped to 414 per cent.

"The Oakland retail organization has just completed a one-month used car selling campaign designed to clear the decks for the new car business now developing with the arrival of spring weather," said W. E. Fellows, assistant general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car Company. "Some credit for the improvement in used car sales over 1929 naturally must go to this special campaign in which completely-reconditioned used cars were offered at attractive prices.

"Nevertheless, Oakland's recent gratifying volume of used car sales signifies a steady improvement in the purchasing power of the public which already is being reflected in a better demand for new automobiles."

Two Weeks' Revival Slated at Ingleside

A series of revival meetings to begin tonight and continue for the next two weeks are planned by the Ingleside Methodist church, with the pastor, Rev. R. B. Hawkins, conducting the services. The music will be under the supervision of L. L. Dixon, choir leader, it was announced Saturday.

For the last several weeks the church has been conducting cottage prayer meetings and church leaders declare a great spiritual awakening has been evinced among the members which is expected to be largely stimulated by the forthcoming revival.

Easy Term Plan Featured By Brooks-Shatterly

"The purchase of merchandise 'on time' is one of the most economically sound, as well as one of the most convenient forms of buying," declared H. H. Brooks, of Brooks-Shatterly Company, located at 1643 Jonesboro road, Lakewood.

"While I have for some time been convinced that this plan of distributing merchandise is sound, there have been many jokes poked at it and numerous predictions that the time-payment plan would put many merchants as well as consumers, in the poorhouse.

"Opposed to this latter belief is the statement of Professor E. R. A. Seligman, of Columbia University, who has just completed an exhaustive study of the installment plan, that the system is actually conducive to prosperity in this country."

Quoting Dr. Seligman, Mr. Brooks said that he found the system very old, tracing the development of credit from the early days of the money lenders, through the banking system; the development of credit science and its application to producers' credit, and finally to consumers' credit, of which he points out, installment selling is merely a part.

"'Installment selling,' Dr. Seligman continued, 'has increased production stabilized output, reduced production cost and increasing purchasing power. The installment plan induces the consumer to look ahead with greater care and to plan his economic program with a higher degree of intelligence. It not only tends to strengthen the motives which induce an individual to pay, but also influences his capacity to do so.

"'Installment credit is beginning to do for the consumer what the gradual development of the commercial banking system has done for the producer. If the credit is restricted to the proper commodities, under proper management, it will gradually throw off its abuses and will stand forth as one of the most signal contributions to the twentieth century to the potential creation of national wealth and national welfare."

Manufacturers Go to Extremes To Give Public Variety in Types

Commenting upon the more recent years' progress of the industry, Mr. Lawrence P. Fisher, president of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, draws attention to the extremes to which manufacturers have gone in giving the public variety in body types, choice of color, and practically everything in the way of appointments and equipment.

So marked has been the effort on the part of the manufacturer to wholly please the motoring public that much which has been done has come to be a matter of course and taken pretty much for granted.

As an illustration Mr. Fisher draws attention to the range of body types and styles available on the three chassis which are being built by the Cadillac Motor Car Company.

On the Cadillac V-8 chassis there is a line of 21 bodies—Fisher and Fleetwood; on the LaSalle, 14, and on the Cadillac V-16 there are 32, supplemented by special designs up to $15,000.

The Cadillac V-8 chassis is the most widely sold of the three Cadillac lines and has a very great ownership. Considering its price field it is only natural that, of the two eight-cylinder chassis, the choice of bodies should be the greater on the Cadillac line.

This fact, however, has had its bearing on the LaSalle line which includes not only Fisher bodies but a line of custom Fleetwoods as well. The V-16, being an exclusive line, carries custom Fleetwood bodies only.

The Cadillac V-8 line may be regarded as basic in the Cadillac manufacturing program as it has always covered a wide range in price and usage. More than 400,000 Cadillac V-8 cars have been sold throughout the world. As a result of the continued patronage of this ownership the LaSalle and the V-16 were made possible.

Were it not for the V-8 the values which are apparent in the LaSalle and the highly personalized V-16 would be obtainable only at much higher prices.

While no other manufacturer attempts the building of bodies in such variety as does Cadillac it will be found in all good motor car lines that, more and more, the engineering and production branches of the business are being influenced by the wishes and preferences of the buyer and particularly the youngsters and the women.

Only a few years ago the selection of an automobile was left almost entirely to the one person in the house who was supposed to know something about such a complicated contrivance and who, if nothing more, could write the check for its payment.

Those days have passed and henceforth the builder of motor cars must reckon with much more exacting buyers.

To satisfy these new taskmasters who are at times relentless in their demands for the precise thing which strikes the popular fancy, the builder of quality motor cars must be alive to fashion trends. He must be alert and willing to go to any length in meeting the needs and the demands of the times.

Cadillac leaves no stone unturned in this respect but gives a choice and a range of chassis and body types and styles which only a few years back would have been impossible.

The Cadillac V-8 line continues on a wheel base of 140 inches, the LaSalle 134 inches and the V-16 148 inches. These chassis lengths afford ample room for the comfortable and richly furnished bodies which come to you from the Fisher and Fleetwood plants, in all more than 100 types and styles and in an array of embellishment and decoration which, in subdued elegance and charm, bespeaks the zeal and skill of a craftsmanship which truly approaches a fine art.

Oakland City Church Is Scene of Revival

Large crowds continue to attend every service of the Oakland City Baptist church, corner Avon avenue and Lee street, which is staging a series of revival meetings under the leadership of the Rev. Hillyer H. Straton, formerly associate pastor of Calvary Baptist church, New York city.

Many confessions of faith have resulted from the services, it is reported by the pastor, Rev. Adiel Jarrett Moncrief, Jr., and the singing, which is under the leadership of the church choir and its director, Mrs. Dora Brittain Hamilton, is attracting many hymn lovers.

Hupp Explains Double Downdraft Carburetor for Cars

DETROIT, Mich., April 9.—A great many people have searched for years to find a stream of water that runs uphill. Yet few motorists realize that in the average automobile that is exactly what hapens to the gasoline before it reaches the carburetor and engine, according to Hupmobile engineers.

Since the announcement three months ago of the big, 133 horsepower Hupmobile straight eight, many inquiries have reached this manufacturer asking how its great power and speed of 90 miles an hour is obtained. Here is Hupmobile's answer as relates to the mixing and distribution of fuel.

"The Hupmobile Model 'H' engine uses a double downdraft carburetor because in engines of such great horsepower this type of carburetor is more efficient. Its use immeasurably increases the volumetric efficiency of the engine. In other words, this type of carburetor makes possible the filling of the combustion chambers with a greater amount of fuel than with the conventional updraft carburetor. The brake horsepower of this engine is increase from twelve to fifteen per cent because of the greater amount of fuel drawn into the engine on the intake stroke of the piston, and because of the increased intensity of the explosion and the greater amount of power developed per explosion.

"In the downdraft type of carburetor the gasoline flows downward with the air of gravity instead of having to be pulled upward against gravity by the manifold suction of the conventional updraft carburetor. Everyone has had the experience of the windshield wiper slowing up on hills or during sudden acceleration. Yet this force that operates the windshield wiper is the same that pulls the gasoline upward to the carburetor and engine. In such cases, therefore, the efficiency of the engine is far from being fully utilized, unless special provisions are made for such cases, and the suction is greatly reduced with a 'starving' of the cylinders resulting because of the thin mixture. Thus conventional practice has often demanded a restriction of the conventional carburetor's throat below the normal 'breathing capacity' of the engine in order to obtain a higher pressure within the manifold.

"It is at this point that the double downdraft carburetor proves most efficient. Instead of having to pull the fuel upward against gravity with a low vacuum pressure, the fuel is pulled downward into the carburetor and manifold aided by gravity, actually requiring a marked reduction in the intake vacuum necessary to fully fill the engine.

"Among the other features of the downdraft carburetion system on the Hupmobile Models 'H' and 'U' is the double type carburetor, one section of which provides fuel for the four inner cylinders and the other for the two outer pairs. This insures an equal distribution of fuel to each of the eight cylinders. This carburetor also has an exclusive accelerating pump which provides an extra spurt of fuel direct to the carburetor when sudden acceleration is demanded. Also, the air taken into this type of carburetor is from 15 to 20 degrees cooler than that in the updraft type because the downdraft carburetor is on top of the engine where only cool, clean air is used. A fumer is included on this carburetor for easy starting in cold weather. Electric current is supplied to the heating elements of the fumer when the starter pedal is depressed. The heated elements vaporize the gasoline, making it more combustible—an important aid in quick and easy starting. As soon as the engine starts, this electric contact is broken and the fumer ceases to operate."

Comfort Combined With Smartness In New Hudson

Providing the ultimate in riding comfort and including numerous smart appointments which add to the pleasure of motoring, the interior of the new Hudson Great Eight represents an effective combination of decorative art and advanced body design.

Exceptional ease of entry and egress is contributed by the doors of extra width, and maximum vision is provided by the use of the slenderized pillars and steel roof quarters which characterize the body construction.

Both front and rear seats are wider and more deeply cushioned than in previous models. In one operation the front seat may be adjusted for height and leg room to suit the requirements of driver or passengers. Rest panels in the rear lend a final touch of arm-chair comfort while the disappearing curtain roller, cleverly concealed from view above the rear window frame, illustrates the careful attention that has been given to every detail.

Viewed as a whole the interior presents a pleasing harmony of line and color. Its curving contours are in true accord with the new trend in decoration. Upholstery and trim are of mohair velvet in rich tones that blend with the various body colors, the effect being heightened by the modernistic fitments in gleaming chromium.

The modern motif is carried out in all body hardware. The instrument panel with its angular dials is modernistic to the last degree; the ingenious toggle handle for raising the windshield also possesses beauty in addition to extreme utility—and even the chromium plated threshold trimming bears the same pleasing design.

Summer Charm With Winter Comfort

In the new Nash twin-ignition eight cabriolet these fair drivers have found the ideal car for their all-year-around driving. The permanent top, with its snug, non-shatterable glass in windshield and all windows affording perfect protection, folds down neatly when the handsome closed car is converted into an attractive open model. The new cabriolet, one of the most popular models of the famous Nash "400" series of 1930, has an unusual appeal for the youthful driver and the discriminating motorist generally. This and other Nash cars are displayed in Atlanta by the Knowles Nash Company, 419 Peachtree St., N. E.

Vibrationless Crankshaft Gives Greater Smoothness

The snappy performance, smoothness and low upkeep cost enjoyed by owners of the famous De Soto Six are the result entirely of careful engineering. As a member of the Chrysler Motors family, De Soto enjoys the benefits of the research work of the staff of skilled engineers, headed by Fred Zeder, Carl Breer and O. M. Skelton. In designing and building this car, they pioneered many quality features not usually found in low-priced sixes.

Because of the close attention given to getting rid of vibration tendencies, the De Soto Six stands today as one of the smoothest sixes ever built. This smoothness centers in the crankshaft, which is so perfectly balanced and counterweighted that it practically floats in a film of oil. It is so closely balanced that two-tenths of an ounce inch represents the limit of weight within which it must be held to pass inspection. This is one reason for trouble-free operation of the car.

"In order to obtain the maximum power and smoothness from an engine," says R. K. Lee, expert of the Chrysler engineering staff, "all internal engine and bearing friction must be reduced as much as possible. There are certain side pressures upon the main bearings when an engine is running, due to centrifugal force set up by the connecting rods and crank pins.

"In the De Soto Six these centrifugal forces have been cancelled by counterweights on the crankshaft. Then, after the weights have been put in place, the entire shaft is statically and dynamically balanced."

To prevent interference with the smooth operation of this carefully built shaft, other parts of the drive line go through similar processes of static and dynamic balance, Mr. Lee explains. These parts include the flywheel, clutch plates and clutch discs. Then the crankcase is reinforced by webbing and by girder-like flanges running lengthwise from end to end, providing a solid foundation for the crankshaft. Main bearings, with large diameter, are provided.

"This question of vibration has been as carefully dealt with on the De Soto Six as on the highest-priced cars," Mr. Lee says. "It is a remarkably smooth riding car, especially at high speeds, and offers durability and economical upkeep in addition to comfort."

Another Record Made by The Studebaker President

Studebaker's famous President Eight supplied additional evidence of its championship performance recently by establishing a new record for the run between Riga, Latvia and Koenigsberg, Germany, according to J. E. Yarbrough, Studebaker-Erskine dealer here.

"Driving a stock President Eight roadster, Peter Auseklis, Studebaker-Erskine dealer for Latvia, made the journey between Riga and Koenigsberg over rough roads in 4 hours and 50 minutes, 25 minutes faster than the previous record. Both time of departure and arrival were carefully checked at Riga and Koenigsberg.

"In recognition of this feat, the International Association at Paris, European high court on automotive records, officially certified this new record of the President, while local automobile clubs also accorded their recognition.

"The previous record, held by an American car, was 5 hours and 15 minutes. Attempting an assault on this mark some time ago, Caracciola, ace of European racing drivers, fell far short of his goal when he completed the distance in 6 hours, 45 minutes, almost two hours behind the time made by the President.

"Many difficulties were encountered en route, including nine detours which were made necessary by road repairs. The crossing of four frontiers likewise occasioned loss of valuable time. Auseklis was accompanied on his record-breaking trip by Dr. Intelmann, a lawyer of Riga.

"Since its introduction three years ago, the President has distinguished itself by a long series of brilliant performance achievements. Greatest among these was its world record feat of traveling 30,000 miles in 26,326 consecutive minutes at the Atlantic City speedway nearly two years ago, in which it averaged better than 68 miles an hour for the entire distance.

Over Three Million R.R.Cars Used by Auto Industry

During 1929 the railroads carried 3,600,000 carloads of automoive freight. A large share of this traffic was made up of new automobiles in shipment from factories to dealers all over the country. The Buick Motor Company has developed the loading of automobiles into an exact science so that their shipments will withstand the jolts and impacts of a long railroad trip without damage.

How thoroughly Buick workmen know their job was demonstrated recently when a mid-western train hit an open switch, derailing a carload of Buicks. A locomotive crane set the car back on the tracks and it was hauled on to its destination, where a careful inspection failed to reveal even a scratch on the bodies of the automobiles.

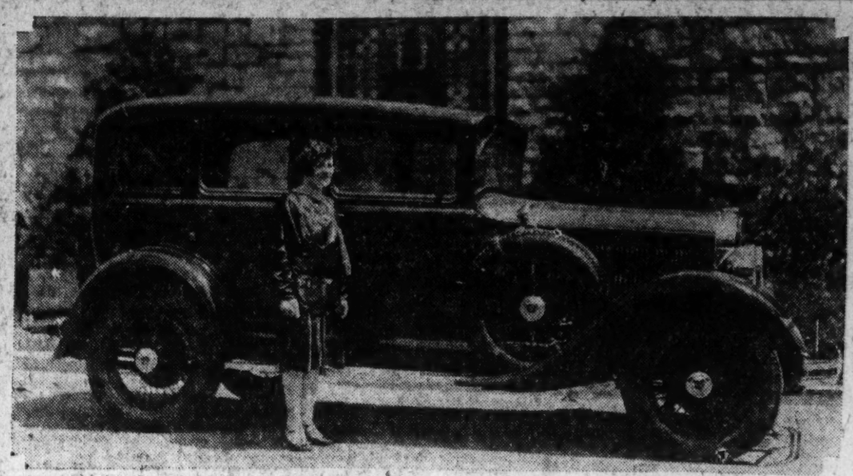

Buicks are loaded three to a car, and the factory shipping requirements are more stringent than the loading rules laid down by the American Railway Association. Each of the four automobile wheels is set in two grooved blocks attached to the floor of the freight car; these blocks are braced by a heel block nailed to the floor. Then padded strips of heavy gauge metal are passed around each wheel and securely fastened to the floor, additional anchors are used from the two front and rear springs and, when this job is completed, the automobile has become an almost integral part of the freight car and is ready to withstand anything short of fire and collision.

There is no lost motion in the Buick traffic department. Long lines of automobiles disappear into the waiting freight cars with a dispatch that seems magical; a crew of packers fitting the chocks and anchors follow closely on the heels of the loaders. An average of 175 men are employed at this work of loading and nailing, and it is nothing unusual at the Buick docks to see a long train of 20 cars pull out loaded, sealed and ready for the road within 30 minutes of the time they were spotted on the siding.

The shipping schedule is never more than 24 hours behind the production line; speed and efficiency are necessary to prevent congestion in the factory warehouses and expense incident to storage. This saving of warehouse expense, like many another economy resulting from efficient management, is passed on to the Buick owner.

Loading is the last factory operation in the production of a Buick car, and the thoroughness with which it is done is typical of each of the 7,000 more operations that are expended on its production. Experienced inspectors check every detail of the loading as it progresses, and then, when the job is completed and the car ready for the road, a final inspection is made by a representative of the sales department.

Mrs. A. D. Andrews and Her Studebaker Dictator

Mrs. A. D. Andrews was the first Atlantan to buy a car from Austin Abbott, newly appointed Studebaker metropolitan dealer. She is shown above with her new car—and naturally expressed her enthusiasm for this great car.

Spring Check-Up Urged By Ford Motor Company

A careful checking and tuning up of your automobile is advisable at this season of the year if you are to obtain the maximum results from it, says a statement issued by the Ford Motor Company.

"The life of a car and its smooth operation will be materially extended if the car is checked periodically to insure that all nuts are tight, that there is ample lubrication throughout, and that moving parts are properly adjusted," the statement says.

"Conditions under which a car is operated vary with the seasons. For instance, in warm weather the generator should be adjusted to reduce the battery charge. It is well also to check the breaker points and spark plugs.

"The radiator should be drained and flushed, and the hose connections should be inspected to make certain they are tight. Houdaille double-acting shock absorbers, used on Ford cars, should be adjusted for summer driving. Front wheels should be checked for alignment and spring shackles should be tightened if necessary. Furthermore, this is a convenient time to have the car thoroughly lubricated.

"Many cars now on the road could be greatly improved in appearance by painting. A large percentage of them, however, would require only washing and polishing to restore their original luster.

"Authorized service stations are equipped to do this work expertly and at a minimum cost. The short time that is required to have an automobile tuned up for the long period of spring and summer driving is well worth while when the improved performance and comfort are taken into consideration."

Revival To Continue At Haygood Memorial

During the remainder of next week revival services which have been under way at Haygood Memorial Methodist church for the past week will be continued, with services each night through next Sunday, it was announced Saturday. The Rev. Felton Williams, pastor of St. Paul Methodist church, who is assisting in these services will preach this morning at 11 o'clock on "Home Religion."

The Rev. J. W. O. McKibben, pastor of the church, will conduct tonight's services in the absence of Mr. Williams. Revival services will culminate Easter with the baptism of babies and the reception of children as members at the morning services Easter and of adults at the evening services.

PLYMOUTH—THE LOWEST-PRICED FULL-SIZE QUALITY CAR IN THE WORLD

PRODUCTION INCREASE FOR LOCAL CHEVROLET PLANT ORDERED

Demand Necessitates 15 Per Cent Increase for Month of April With Additional 20 Per Cent for May

New and Used Car Stocks of Dealers Lowest in Last Two Years — Demand Increasing.

Officials of the Chevrolet Motor Company report a sharp revival in business throughout the southeastern territory and announce a 15 per cent increase in production at the Atlanta plant for April and a 20 per cent increase scheduled for May.

L. S. Costley, regional sales manager, has just returned from a 15-day trip through the territory with J. C. Chick, assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company at Detroit, and report conditions better than at any time during the past nine months.

Born new and used car stocks are found at the lowest point they had reached in the past two years, and the dealers appeared highly encouraged over the increase in sales activities and prospects for spring and summer business.

The plant in Atlanta is now approaching its maximum production and is working a full force of employes. Fifteen hundred men are employed at the plant and with the exception of nine officials were all recruited from Atlanta and surrounding territory.

Similar conditions are reported by all Chevrolet branch plants throughout the country, leading officials of the company to believe that the automobile industry is well on the way to recovery from the reverses it has experienced during the past year.

The company began operation last week at the rebuilt and enlarged assembly and export plant at Tarrytown, N. Y. The Tarrytown plant has the capacity of 900 cars daily and is one of the nine assembly plants and one of two export plants maintained by Chevrolet in the United States.

Completion of this plant places Chevrolet in a more advantageous position to meet rapidly expanding sales requirements for its product along the Atlantic seaboard. In addition, the move was made to thoroughly modernize the plant and bring it up to the high standard of equipment and efficiency that characterizes Chevrolet plants in other sections of the country.

The new plant is a one-story, brick and steel structure, 1,200 by 400 feet, with monitor type roof, providing for the maximum light and ventilation. Adjoining is a new two-story office building, 200 by 60 feet, of concrete and brick construction.

The plant has two domestic assembly lines and an export boxing line. The export division of the Tarrytown plant serve many countries at present inaccessible to overseas Chevrolet plants. In several instances, Chevrolet finds it more expedient to ship direct from Tarrytown to a foreign country than from a Chevrolet plant overseas. In the case of the Tarrytown plant this applies only to countries that receive cars fully assembled. The other Chevrolet export plant at Bloomfield, N. J., ships only knocked down part for assembly at General Motors plants overseas.

The finished Chevrolet cars, assembled and boxed at Tarrytown, are put on barges and floated down to New York city, where they are put aboard ships for various parts of the world.

Recitals Planned For Music Week Observance Here

Special concerts, lectures, musical recitals and various other melodic celebrations form part of the tentative program announced for the local observance by the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce for national music week, beginning Monday, May 5, and continuing through Sunday, May 11. This program, it was emphasized, at present is merely in the making and other and more complete details will be made public at a later date.

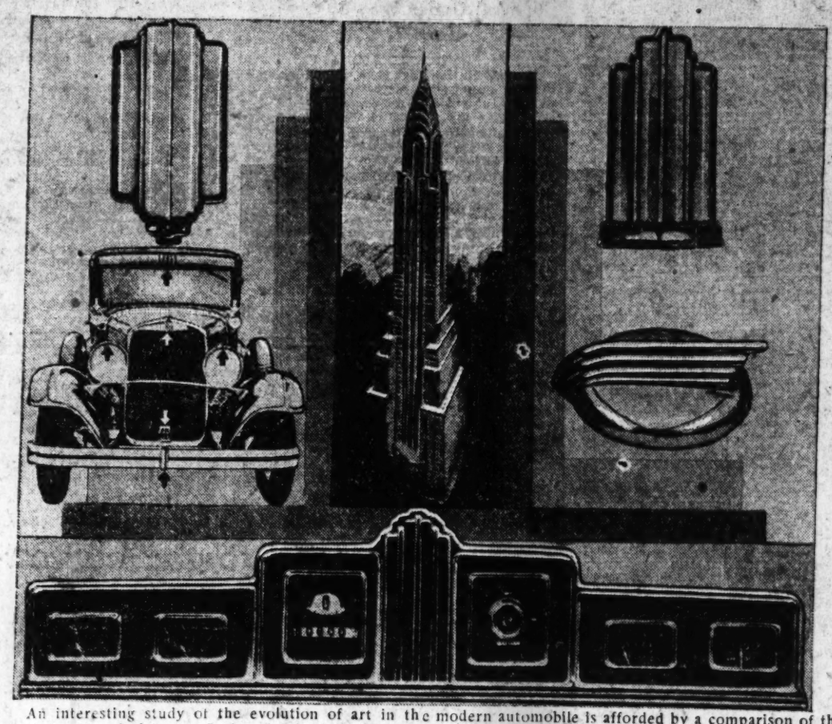

A special committee of which Mrs. Lillian A. Dove is chairman, is in charge of arrangements of the woman's division for the local participation, and among other details already agreed on are two concerts which will be given Sunday, May 4, as preliminary features of the regular week set aside for the general observance. These concerts are planned for presentation at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Washington street, and also at the Home for Old Women, on West End avenue, both to be open to the public. In addition special musical services are announced for Sunday, May 4, by Grace Methodist church, Church of the Incarnation, Capitol View Baptist, Wesley Memorial and Westminster Presbyterian churches.

The tentative musical week program will include a special musical meeting of the Pi Mu sorority, directed by Miss Dorothy Waldman, on Monday, May 5, and over WSB another concert directed by Miss Esther Platkin. On Tuesday the College Park Woman's Club will give a concert in the club auditorium under the direction of Miss Alice Cox Reins. On this date a lecture also will be delivered by Miss Dorothy Waldman at her studio, 739 Park drive.

A joint recital by Alma Garrett Ware, piano, and W. W. Leffingwell, violin, in Rich's music room, and an illustrated lecture by Miss Waldman at her studio are tentative programs for Wednesday, May 7, while on the following day the Commercial High Glee Club will present an operetta in the school auditorium. A concert at the Y. W. C. A. at 8 p. m. is another feature of Thursday's program.

Repetition of the Commercial High operetta will be presented on Friday, May 9, at the school, and on Saturday the Atlanta Junior Music Club, under direction of Mrs. Bonita Crowe, will give a concert in Rich's music room. The week's tentative program will end with a special concert at 3 p. m., Sunday, May 11, at Wesley Memorial church.

Art in the Modern Automobile

An interesting study of the evolution of art in the modern automobile is afforded by a comparison of the appointments of the new Dodge Brothers Eight with the upward soaring line and shadow effect produced by the use of perpendicular buttresses in the modern skyscraper such as the new Chrysler building in New York, upon which the art motif in the car was based. Note how faithfully the key design has been carried out in all details—the corner light in the upper left, the dome light in the upper right, in modified form in the radiator cap ornament in the lower right. The instrument panel below is an especially good example. In the head-on view of Dodge Brothers Eight-in-Line at lower left, arrows indicate where decorative design based on the motif is used on tops of lamps, on radiator, bumper, sun visor, etc.

Sayward To Talk On Architecture At High Museum

William J. Sayward, distinguished Atlanta architect, will lecture on Sunday afternoon at 3:15 at the High Museum of Art, it was announced Saturday.

Mr. Sayward will outline the story of American architecture and will discuss and analyze the influences from the old world which have been most strongly felt in architectural development in the new. He will illustrate how the Dutch type of building had its effect in Pennsylvania, how England was the chief factor in inspiring the colonial homes of the old south and the Spanish influence in California, etc.

The museum, which is free to the general public at all times, including the Sunday afternoon lectures, is now showing several exceptionally interesting exhibits, in addition to the permanent collection.

The child portraits by Miss Cornelia Whitehurst, one of the greatest living portraitists of children, are still being shown. A collection of photographs of old southern architecture, intended to preserve these famous traditions of building beauty, is to be seen as well as a group of examples of pewter handicraft.

The museum is open daily from 9 to 4, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings from 7 to 9, and on Sunday afternoons from 2 to 5.

Genuine Art Theme Displaces Old Radiator Cap Ornaments

Modern automotive art has relegated to the scrap heap the time-worn figures of Mercury, the various goddesses of the race and chase, the eagles, swallows, geese and other birds in flight which formerly were considered an adornment for the radiator cap. Replacing the miscellaneous and often discordant single figures is a dignified, studied art treatment based on a central design or motif and followed out in appointments throughout the car. All details harmonize one with the other. There are no jarring notes.

A striking example of this new tendency of art in present-day motor cars is offered in the new Dodge Brothers eight-in-line.

The motif in this car was borrowed from the field of architecture. It is based on the long straight lines and shadows which give the sinewy, slender appearance of beauty and strength to the modern skyscraper.

Appearing first on the front bumper tie-piece, this master design of line and shadow decorates the tops of the headlamps, the center of the radiator shell, the cowl lamps, the radiator cap, the sun visor and is even carried out in the laminated belt-moulding around the body of the car. Inside, the same design is used in the instrument panel, door handles, remote controls, switch plate and assist cord escutcheons, dome and corner lights. The pattern, of course, is varied to suit the size and shape of different appointments, but basically it's the same—a long line and shaded effect predominating. Not a haphazard, ill-advised attempt at meaningless ornamentation, it is a complete, co-ordinated art theme adhering to the key design with orderly continuity in every detail.

Art moderne as applied in the motif for the new Dodge Eight is as new as today's newspaper and as old as a vase of the Ming dynasty. It is a rediscovery of the value of eliminating the nonessential.

C. B. Wilmer, Jr., Deserts Press For Big Business

C. B. Wilmer, Jr., for the last 18 months an up-and-coming reporter on The Constitution, concluded that the pen is mightier than the typewriter, at least, and has accepted a position as salesman for the Truscon Steel Company, of Youngstown, Ohio, to work out of the Atlanta office of the company.

Cary, the son of Dr. C. B. Wilmer, for 25 years rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church and now holder of the chair in theology at the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., has been on the federal "beat" with The Constitution, his run including besides the federal building, the Chamber of Commerce, a number of downtown offices and the hotels. During his year and a half tenure Cary has made a host of friends both for himself and The Constitution who have regretted his departure but wish him well in his new venture.

Being a knight of the grip, as he announces his new position, is something new for Cary, but so was the newspaper game 18 months ago, and he went through the entire period without being "scooped," so it's likely rival salesmen will have to be more than usually alert to beat Cary selling steel.

Change Your Oil Filter Cartridge Every 10,000 Miles

After this mileage the filtering unit ceases to function as it has become filled with dirt, sludge and abrasive material taken from the oil.

Replacing the cartridge every 10,000 miles means saving in wear, less frequent repair bills and real oil economy as the motor oil can be used for 2000 miles or more.

Thousands More to Hear Story Of Franklin Airplane Engine

During the next 30-day period, 150,000 persons will hear the story of the new airplane-type engine which powers the 1930 air-cooled Franklin motor cars. The campaign to acquaint this large number of automobile enthusiasts, who buy annually a car in the quality class, is the result of the great nation-wide interest displayed in the 1930 Franklin, recently introduced by the Franklin Automobile Company, of Syracuse, N. Y.

In this campaign, the entire Franklin distributor and dealer organization will take part, which, with its army of representatives, will bring the advantages of air-cooling and the new high-standard of performance of the Franklin airplane-type engine directly to the attention of thousands.

From the very inception of the Franklin company nearly 30 years ago, it has stood in a conspicuous position and has developed the principles of air-cooling to the present degree of perfection. With this development finding dramatic climax in the presentation of the 1930 Franklin car powered by a truly airplane-type engine that has flown an airplane, came an even higher standard of aristocratic body designs, car beauty, quality, and comfort, combined with a power and speed development more than adequate to meet any of the present day driving demands.

Never in the history of Franklin has there been such a wide acceptance of its products as at the present time. This was noticeable from the introduction of the Series 14 car at the New York automobile show early in January. It is a highly interesting fact just disclosed by the factory that, despite the lessened sales of the automobile industry as a whole, the retail volume of Franklin business for the first quarter shows an increase over the same period of last year. As a matter of fact, each succeeding month since January has revealed an increase over the previous corresponding months, and the total has reached the highest figure in history for the period.

Franklin merchants throughout the country have planned during the next 30-day period to provide cars for demonstrations and to permit those interested to select their own proving grounds as a definite proof of Franklin's comfort, quality, power, speed and ease of handling.

Instant, Complete Vaporization In Gulf Gasoline

Volatility in gasoline is one of the prime factors in the efficient operation of the modern automobile motor, says a local official of the Gulf Refining Company, large producers and refiners of gasolines and motor oils. Volatility resulting in instant and complete vaporization is secured by the use of motor instant and complete vaporization is secured by the use of motor fuels possessing an end point of 400 degrees Fahrenheit or lower.

The Gulf Refining Company is marketing just the kinds of gasoline from which the best results are to be obtained—that Good Gulf Gasoline with 400 degrees Fahrenheit. End point and Gulf No-Nox motor fuel 374 degrees Fahrenheit end point. These gasolines vaporize instantly and completely to the last drop—giving quick starting, quick pick-up, more power and greater mileage. Both of these fuels also possess high anti-knock quality which is of vital importance for successful operation of the modern high compressor motor.

While carbon is not desirable, it is always found to a greater or less degree in all motors after a few thousands miles of running—carbon deposits increase the ratio of compression which is very satisfactorily overcome by these anti-knock fuels—fuel knocks which are apt to occur on hills and during quick acceleration in traffic are not only annoying but detrimental to the motor. Retarding the spark will reduce the knock but likewise reduces power. The safe and sane to get rid of them is to use fuels of known anti-knock quality.

And further—the end point of gasoline has nothing to do with the anti-knock quality—many ordinary motor gasolines are doped with chemicals which may render them anti-knock but the quick, responsible vaporization is lacking—a good, straight-run petroleum product with 400 degrees Fahrenheit end point or better and high anti-knock quality is the best for your motor.

Popularity of Sleeve Valve Motor Started Nearly 15 Years Ago

Nearly 15 years ago John N. Willys, at that time president of the Willys-Overland Company, returned from Europe with a license for his company to manufacture motor cars employing the Knight sleeve valve engine. Little was known of the sleeve valve engine in America then, although it was the inventive genius of Charles Y. Knight, of Chicago, which developed the power plant.

Shortly thereafter the Willys-Overland Company, after making exhaustive tests and experiments, launched into the production of motor cars using the new sleeve valve engine. From the start the Willys-Knight valve engine won a position in American motordom.

Even before the advent of the sleeve valve engine in this country it had been adopted in England and other European counties and proved highly successful, being employed in such cars as the Daimler, Mercedes, Panhard-Levassor, Peugot and others whose names are internationally famous. It is notable that this type of engine has for years maintained its outstanding position among the quality cars of Europe, where it is regarded as the ideal type of automobile engine.

Year after year, since the production of the first Willys-Knight in this country, the sleeve valve engine has been improved. Because of the high type of craftsmanship required in the building of this motor and the quality of materials that went into its structure, the cost at first was greater than for most cars in its class. However, the Willys-Overland Company, through manufacturing economies, has gradually reduced the production cost and passed this saving on to the retail buyer in the form of Knight powered cars at lower prices. It seems paradoxical that while manufacturing costs were being reduced the quality of the cars was materially improved, the climax being reached in the 1930 presentation of the new Willys-Knight Great Six and the Willys-Knight "70-B" lines.

Not alone are these two lines of Knight-engined sixes characterized by the highest development ever reached in the sleeve valve engines that give them power, but the new low prices at which they are presented materially widen the field of buyers and place Willys-Knight cars within the reach of hundreds of thousands of new prospects.

Perhaps the most notable advance in the Knight engined field is the development of the new Great Six motor, whih cproduces 87 horsepower and is designated by Willys-Overland as the most powerful engine ever built by the ompany in its more than 22 years experience.

The great power achievement of the new Great Six engine, however, is no more striking than the design of the various models which are outstanding in the fine car field. They establish a new conception of motr car beauty which fully meets all the luxury demands of the critical buyer who seeks to have a motor car that reflects his own personality.

With the Willys-Knight "70-B" presented in a new low price range, yet maintaining the same high standard of car beauty and performance, executives of Willys-Overland are confident that it will prove the most popular low-priced Willys-Knight model ever offered.

WAGE-FIXING REQUEST IS DENIED BY RUSSELL

Chamber Head Says That Body Asked No New Concerns To Lower Salaries.

A report that the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has requested new business concerns coming to the city to pay lower wages here than they have been paying elsewhere was vigorously denied Saturday by Horace Russell, president of the chamber, in a public statement.

"The chamber has made no requests whatsoever to employers concerning the amount of wages they should pay," Mr. Russell declared.

The chamber executive pointed out that in the last 15 years the organization has been instrumental in bringing more than 700 employing businesses to Atlanta, which have provided employment for more than 20,000 persons, a majority of whom have been native Georgians, chiefly Atlanta-born and educated.

Russell's Statement.

Mr. Russell's statement follows:

"Since I became president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce I have frequently been asked by different people why the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has requested certain new business concerns coming to Atlanta to pay low wages and, today, I have an anonymous letter asking this same question.

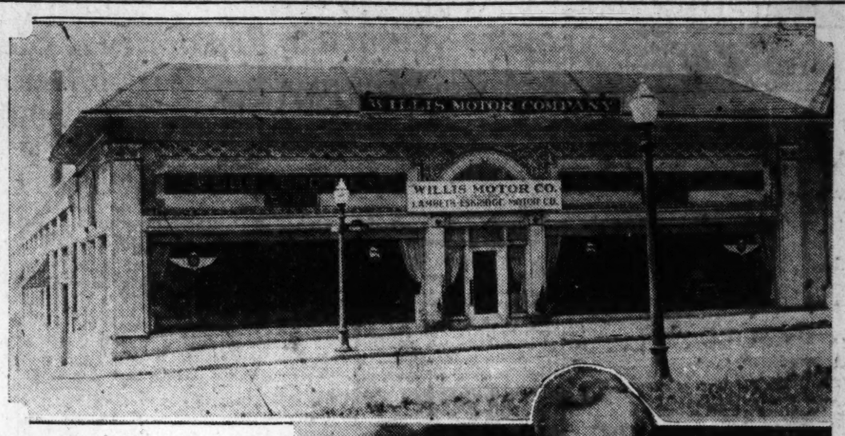

"The fact is, the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has never requested any employer of labor in Atlanta, or about to locate in Atlanta, to reduce his employes' pay or to pay less in Atlanta than the employer pays elsewhere, nor has the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce requested such persons not to pay more than other employers pay their employes. The trouble has been taken by this office to trace all of these rumors as they have arisen and a written statement is on file here, I believe, from every such employer that the Chamber of Commerce has made no request in any respect whatsoever or in any manner as to what they should pay their employes.

"No Foundation in Fact."

"I am surprised that anybody would repeat this rumor as a fact when it has no foundation in fact and I am especially surprised that some otherwise responsible citizens repeat it without taking the trouble to investigate whether or not it is true. We believe that all of our people wish to think well of their Chamber of Commerce, a public civic institution, and I trust that all who may read this statement will refuse to repeat the above-mentioned rumor as a fact hereafter. It is not a fact and anyone desiring to speak the truth can discover here what the facts are before repeating such a rumor.

"The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has invited, and obtained, more than 700 new factories, warehouses or branch offices into this community in the past five years and these institutions have employed more than 20,000 people, and most of these people have been Georgians and not outsiders. Furthermore, we have not invited the unemployed to Atlanta as has also been rumored in the community, but, on the other hand, our Forward Atlanta Commission has persistently stated and advertised that Atlanta has an adequate supply of efficient labor."

Willis Motor Company Appointed Dodge Dealer

Announcement was made the past week by officials of the Dodge Motor Car Company, of the appointment of the Willis Motor Company as successors to the Lambeth Eskridge Motor Company, and that they will be dealers for the Atlanta for the Dodge line of cars and trucks.

This company is headed by William H. Willis, who has been identified with Dodge since its beginning in 1915. He was associated in the dealership in Washington, D. C., until 1921, when he was appointed distributor by the Dodge company for Harrisburg, Pa., which business he has operated until the present time, when he decided to move to the south.

The company has taken over the quarters of the Lambeth-Eskridge Motor Company, located at 72 Peachtree street, N. E. This is said to be one of the finest automobile buildings in the entire country, it having received national publicity as to arrangement and accessibility as well as the first full daylight shop, and gives them an ideal arrangement to take care of the service requirements for the large number of Dodge car and truck operators in the Atlanta territory.

They have already added thousands of dollars to their stock of parts, which will give them the largest Dodge Brothers parts stock in this section of the country. This move on their part, officials state, will enable them to give prompt service to their clients that is so materially affected when time is required waiting for a certain piece of the automobile to be shipped from the factory. Every one of these parts are the genuine Dodge quality, as nothing but authorized parts have been included in their order. This alone will save Dodge owners many hundreds of dollars in repair charges on their cars.

In the sales department Mr. Willis has retained Walter Jolley as manager. Mr. Jolley has been connected with the retail sales division of the automobile business for many years and goes to his new duties in the same capacity as his connection with the Lambeth-Eskridge Company, which position he has held for the past two years, prior to which he was retail sales manager for the largest dealership in Florida. He is well-informed regarding the automobile business, as well as the customers' needs, which will give the Willis Motor Company the very best executive talent right from the beginning.

"In the service department," said Mr. Willis, "we are giving Atlanta Dodge users the best man we were able to employ." Oliver M. Knight, who will have full charge of this department, has been connected with the service end of the Dodge business for the past 15 years. From 1915 until 1925 he was with the Dodge factory as traveling service representative, which position gave him a world of knowledge of the service requirements of Dodge cars. He has been with our company in Harrisburg, Pa., for the past five years and did such an outstanding job for us there that he was immediately offered this position in Atlanta, and we are sure that our Atlanta friends will find him eager and willing to help them solve their car ailments."

As assistant to Mr. Knight they have appointed J. H. Collins, well known to Dodge owners here, already having been in the service department of the Dodge dealer for the past 11 years, and has always been found to be thorough in his estimates and work turned out.

The Willis Motor Company is displaying a full line of the Dodge and Plymouth cars all this week and cordially invite Atlantans out to see these new motor car creations and get acquainted with this new organization.

WALTER JOLLEY, Sales Manager. WM. H. WILLIS, President. OLIVER M. KNIGHT, Service Manager.

He has been, in the 20 months in the service, to Spain, Italy, England, Panama and Guantanamo bay. Parks is in Atlanta, on his second furlough, to visit his mother.

STATE ROAD PROGRAM TO BE STARTED SOON

Construction Expected To Be Well Under Way by June 1.

The expectation that Georgia's state highway program would be well under way by June 1, with construction actively going forward on all federal aid routes which by that time have been given the approval of federal engineers, was held out by J. W. Barnett, state highway board chairman, Saturday.

One group of contracts already has been let, another will be let April 22, and a third and final group, he announced Saturday, would be let at a meeting of the highway board April 29. The contracts to be let on the last-named date are expected to approximate $2,000,000.

"We cannot lose any more time," Mr. Barnett said. "This is the best road-building weather one could expect, and we must have our program under way by another month."

He also said that efforts would be made to build roads in the several congressional districts as a means of avoiding traffic congestion and of providing general employment. He has been informed that the unemployment situation in the state is serious, he said, and desires that his department do all in its power to remedy the situation.

The locations of the routes to be considered April 29 were not announced by Captain Barnett. But he said that the road between Gainesville and Baldwin would be included. This will be a direct paved route to Ashville, he said.

The entire state highway board this week will make an inspection tour of south Georgia. District offices will be visited and roads and materials used in south Georgia routes will be examined. The commission will be guests of honor at dinners at Savannah and Milledgeville and will return to Atlanta the latter part of the week.

Mayor Ragsdale Still Undecided About Extension

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale Saturday declined to say whether he would claim the two-year extension which, it is claimed, the legislature gave to him in an amendment to the charter of the borough of Atlanta which lengthened the term of office of mayors of Atlanta from two to four years.

"I haven't given the matter sufficient thought to make an announcement yet," he said. "I shall probably make an announcement within a short time."

In the interim, there are several prospective mayoralty candidates marking time until the definite announcement is made.

Included in the list mentioned prominently for the post are Councilman Wiley L. Moore, of the seventh ward; Alderman Ben T. Huiet, of the third; Councilman John A. White, of the fourth; William Candler, Atlanta financier; Frank Neely, chairman of the Atlanta bond commission, and others.

Greatest First Quarter

Last November and December, forecasts for business in 1930 were largely based on surmise. Today, the result of the efforts of the first three months of 1930, gives us a definite guide for the future. March this year was the greatest March in number of shipments in all of Auburn's history. The first three months of 1930 gave Auburn the largest sales both in units and dollars of any January, February and March. For Auburn to show this increase, in this most competitive period, has a much deeper significance than our justifiable pride in this sales record. It is a vindication that Auburn's policy is fundamentally sound and operates in favor of the buyer. For more than five years the only business that Auburn could get was that which it could take away from competitors, because there has been no surplus market. Auburn, therefore, could not depend upon past performance, could not ride upon the momentum of the prestige of a name. Auburn had to design and build newer and better cars; Auburn had to give greater value for less money; and Auburn had to prove it! The changed conditions of 1930 presented no new problems to Auburn. Instead, it produced a condition very favorable to Auburn. As Auburn has grown and acquired many new factories, the economies of increased production have regularly been passed back to the buyer in the form of an even better car for less cost. This has been a fixed policy. Auburn's success this year, therefore, is not the result of an expediency measure, but a natural sequence. Auburn has not penalized its owners with frequent radical model changes. The Auburn of today is a product that has been continually bettered until its performance and endurance are definitely established as a known quantity. Auburn's Straight Eight pioneering in more than five years' leadership ahead of the industry has won a public following because it deserves it. It was the judgment of Auburn's management that buyers in 1930 would weigh their investments more carefully and compare values with greater scrutiny than ever before. Such a buying tendency was welcomed by Auburn, because our success has been based upon the following invitation to the public: "Compare and drive the Auburn car and if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy." That is why Auburn's sales are breaking records in 1930!

Atlanta Growth Revealed In Junior Chamber Figures

Atlanta's steady growth and consistently increasing business activity were revealed Saturday in figures announced by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

This information, gathered by the organization as part of its "Progress and Prosperity" movement, undertaken as one of its major 1930 objectives shows that full business activity along all lines has been resumed and that more than 500 new families have become residents of Greater Atlanta since the first of the year.

Figures graphically illustrating this steady growth, as part of a sweeping survey begun by the civic body, were obtained from the Georgia Power Company. Officials gave concrete evidence concerning industrial operations in Atlanta, as well as in other municipalities served by the company, showing that practically all manufacturing plants furnished with power, which formerly had closed down or reduced operations, had resumed work. In nearly every case, production now is on a full-time basis. The data include a number of big textile mills here and elsewhere in the state.

Power Installations.

The company also stressed the number of new power installations being made, as an index to the steady growth of industry. There is very little part-time operation in Greater Atlanta at this time, the figures show.

Actual figures from the records of the Georgia Power Company show that 63,822 electric meters were in operation in the Atlanta district in January. February showed 64,278 meters in homes, business houses and manufacturing plants, and March showed 64,374. An even greater increase for the month of April is indicated.

This is a total gain of 552 meters for the first three months of 1930, and is cited as proof, not only of industrial development, but of increase in population. In this connection, Joe W. Ray, Junior Chamber of Commerce president, said the increase in residential consumption came through substantial, home-occupying citizens, who bring their families and make permanent connections.

Industrial Expansion.

Industrial expansion revealed by the power company figures, include 14 new companies, with a total capitalization of $11,950,000, which established themselves in Georgia since the beginning of 1930. Further proof of the rapid industrial growth of the state is revealed in the statement of the company that six large companies already established in the state spent $7,200,000 during the year in expanding their plants, capacities and activities. Employment of 7,925 people was made possible by these expansions.

In announcing these figures, the Junior Chamber of Commerce pointed out that they included only those municipalities and territories served by one company, and were not a complete guide to the entire state. Comprehensive figures for the whole state, which are being compiled, will reveal an even more optimistic picture of prosperity, it was pointed out.

NEW TIRE DEPARTMENT INSTALLED AT RICH'S

With the establishment of a complete tire department in the bargain basement, Rich's, Inc., is offering another shopping service which, officials of the store believe, will prove particularly attractive to women.

This is the first time in Atlanta, it is claimed, that a standard tire has been offered by a department store at standard prices. Kelly-Springfield tires, regarded as one of the leading brands manufactured in the United States, will be handled in the department.

"Women, particularly, will appreciate this new service," says H. Schwartz, who is in charge of installing the new department. "She may order by telephone and have the tires mounted at her home or she can park at the Forsyth Street garage while the work is being done."

The announcement features the service plan, either at home or on the road, at no extra cost. Tires may be bought on the club plan and are guaranteed against defects in workmanship and material, regardless of mileage or time.

Hugh D. Brower, who has been engaged in the tire business for a number of years, will be manager of the new department. He has had experience in both the retail and wholesale business and is considered thoroughly competent in his new position.

GIRLS' HOMES WORK PRAISED IN REPORT

Value and extent of service rendered in the field of human welfare by the 39 societies operating through the Atlanta Community Chest was indicated Saturday in a review of work of one of these, the Churches Home for Girls, as made by John A. Manget, chairman of the board of the home, in connection with a regular service report.

More than 11,000 girls have been sheltered and lodged in the six homes operated by the organization in the last 15 years, all of them being young women who came to Atlanta seeking business training and work. Of these, 95 per cent have made good, the report said.

One of the six homes is a shelter for sick and convalescent girls, and the others, all boarding homes, have a combined capacity of 272. They are the Buford Memorial Home, 50 boarders; Eliza Manget, 30; Martha Candler, 90; Allie Calloway, 32; Irving Thomas, 75.

Girls who come to Atlanta to make their way, and who without friends or resources find the way beset with difficulties, are boarded in these homes, paying what they can. For each there is a "mother," who helps her to find employment, advising her with problems, caring for her when sick and treating her as nearly as possible as her own mother would.

"The amount of board paid by the girls depends on what they earn," said the report. "Girls without homes, without money, without jobs, are welcomed, and pay after they find work. The cost per girl when the home is full is $5 a week.

"This sum is the highest board charged any girl, and when a girl pays that amount she is entirely independent. Only those girls who earn over $10 a week are required to pay $5. Those who earn less pay less. The average amount collected from each girl per week is $3.27."

The substantial nature of the societies which perform the city's work of social welfare through the Community Chest was said by Frank Miller, executive director of the chest, to be indicated in the figures of the report showing the total value of the six homes and their furnishings to be $175,000, against which are mortgages aggregating $65,000.

The support of these homes is derived from board paid by the girls, appropriations from Fulton county and the city of Atlanta, allocation from the Community Chest, and contributions from individuals, churches, and societies. Financial and service reports are filed with the chest office every month and are revewed by the executive committee of the chst.

Large Congratulated On His Renomination

Postmaster E. K. Large spent a busy day Saturday receiving congratulations of his friends and political associates on his nomination to be postmaster of Atlanta for a third term. The president sent Mr. Large's name to the senate Friday and confirmation is expected just as soon as the senate reaches consideration of the appointment.

"It is more than gratifying and I am extremely happy, to say the least," Mr. Large said Saturday. "I deeply appreciate all the kind interest and courtesies shown me and expect to show this appreciation by maintaining the very best service possible for the mail-using public."

Tech Troubadour Club To Perform WednesdayNight

Georgia Tech's wandering Troubadors, just back from musical conquests of Wesleyan college, Bessie Tift college, Thomaston, Barnesville, Cartersville, Marietta, are to make their bow to the Atlanta public Wednesday night at the Atlanta Woman's Club. Enrico Leide, the director of the organization, states that he expects the club to be as pleasing to Atlanta audiences as anything he has offered in his many years of amusement endeavor.

According to Ward Grantham, president of the organization, and others officially connected the grouped Georgia Tech organizations are going to make the final performance of the club the school's leading social event. He states that the younger Atlanta society is lending its entire support.

Boxes have been engaged by the members of Georgia Tech's leading fraternities. The program offers a bunch of rollicking fun-makers in the personnel, offering sparkling comedy and a chorus of jazz and semi-classical numbers.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LXII., No. 302. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 13, 1930.

Opera Visitors To Add Gaiety To 1930 Opera

The presence of a number of prominent visitors, who will journey to Atlanta for the 1930 grand opera season, will add a gay note to the brilliant social program planned in connection with the festive days marking the first week of May. Among the most important visitors who will arrive the latter part of April to remain through the opera period are the Hon. Mr. Fred Britten and Mrs. Britten, of Washington, D. C., who will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little at their apartments in the Biltmore. A series of social gayeties will be given by members of fashionable Atlanta society in honor of these noted guests, the first event scheduled in their honor being a dinner party at which Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox will entertain Wednesday evening, April 30, at their home, Woodhaven, on Pace's Ferry road. Preceding the opera premier, "Louise," Thursday evening, May 1, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson will be hosts at dinner in compliment to these visitors from the national capital at their home in Druid Hills. On this same day Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson will entertain at luncheon at Broadlands, their home on North Side drive. Friday, May 2, Mrs. Robert Adgar Smythe will be hostess at luncheon at her home on Fifteenth street.

Bride-Elect, Visitor, European Traveler, and Recent Bride

Miss Brawner Will Marry Mr. Hightower

An announcement of wide social interest made today by Dr. and Mrs. James Newton Brawner of the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Evelyn, to William Hays Hightower, the wedding to be an event of Wednesday evening, June 25, at All Saints' Episcopal church. The bride-to-be is the second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Brawner. She received her education at Washington seminary, where she was a popular member of the Pi Pi Sorority. Since her graduation she has devoted her time to the study of music.

Mrs. Brawner, mother of the bride-elect, the former Miss Nellie Viola Barksdale, has been active in club, parent-teacher and medical auxiliary work in Atlanta and the south for many years, and at the present time is the president of the woman's auxiliary of the Southern Medical Association. Dr. Brawner, father of the bride-elect, is well known in medical circles in the south. He has been engaged in the practice of medicine in Atlanta for the past 30 years and now holds the office of president of the Fulton County Medical Society.

The maternal grandparents of Miss Brawner were the late Charles Edward Barksdale and Cynthia Murphy Barksdale, of well-known Georgia and South Carolina families. The paternal grandparents of the bride-to-be are James Middleton Brawner, who now resides in Atlanta, and the late Mary Buchanan Brawner, former resident of Harris and Troup county, Georgia. Their families came from Virginia and South Carolina and their names are prominently associated with the early history of the south.

Mr. Hightower is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Hightower, Jr., belongs to one of Atlanta's most distinguished families. He attended the University School of Boys, where he was president of the Theta Kappa Omega fraternity. He is interested in the textile industry and is associated in business with the Gate City Cotton Mills. His father, Thomas Jefferson Hightower, Jr., bears the distinguished name of his noble ancestor, Thomas Jefferson, former president of the United States. Mr. Hightower organized and is president of the Hightower Box and Tank Factory, one of the oldest box factories in the south and one of Atlanta's foremost manufacturing plants. His parents were the late Captain Thomas Jefferson Hightower, Sr., of Tennessee and Georgia, who served with distinction in the cause of the Confederacy, and Miss Eliza E. Henderson, of Cumming, Ga.

Mrs. Hightower, mother of the groom-elect, formerly Miss Georgia Broughton Hays, of Louisville, Ky., is a worthy representative of families prominent in the early history of Kentucky and Georgia. Her father, Major General Thomas H. Hays, was one of Kentucky's most gallant and outstanding figures during the War Between the States. In command as major in the state militia at the beginning of the war, he was rapidly promoted to posts of great honor, serving as assistant adjutant general with General Joseph E. Johnston and later with General John B. Hood during their campaigns in north Georgia, Atlanta and Tennessee. He was a member of General Wheeler's staff and served gallantly with him until hostilities ended. After the close of the war, Major Hays returned to Kentucky, where he became associated with the Pullman company, later becoming vice president of that company. Major Hays married Miss Georgia Troup Broughton, of LaGrange, Ga., whose father, Judge Edward Broughton, figured conspicuously in the early development of Georgia and the south, being one of the officials of the company that built the Atlanta and West Point railroad and the railroad from Mobile to Pensacola. Mrs. Hays now resides in Louisville, Ky., and often visits her daughter, Mrs. Hightower, in Atlanta.

Announcement is made today of the engagement of Miss Margaret Evelyn Brawner, whose photograph is at the upper left, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Newton Brawner, to William Hays Hightower, the wedding to be solemnized in June. Miss Florence Rice And Sidney Smith To Wed in June

NEW YORK, April 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Grantland Rice, of 1158 Fifth avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Rice, to Sydney A. Smith, of 375 Park avenue, son of Mrs. Tailer Carpenter and of Sydney J. Smith, of New York. The above announcement carries social import in Atlanta and Americus, Ga., as Mrs. Rice was formerly Miss Kate Hollis, of Americus, and Mr. Rice was a former resident of Nashville, Tenn., and lived in Atlanta for several years before going to New York. Only the families and intimate friends will witness the wedding set for June.

The lovely bride-elect, who has often visited Mrs. Robert Crumley here, is a graduate of Dwight school, Englewood, N. J., and attended Smith college. She is one of the several socially prominent young women appearing on the New York stage this season. Her first professional engagement has been a characterization in "June Moon," the comedy by Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman, which opened last October and continues at the Broadhurst theater. Her father, a well-known sports writer, is editor of The American Golfer.

Mr. Smith was graduated from Yale in 1921 and is a member of the Yale and Racquet and Tennis clubs. On both his mother's and father's sides Mr. Smith is related to many prominent New York families. His mother, the former Miss Fannie B. Tailer, is a daughter of the late Edward B. Tailer, of New York, and a sister of the late T. Suffern Tailer, of New York and Newport. On the paternal side he is a grandson of the late Samuel Smith, of New Orleans, a prominent banker, and is a nephew of Cora, Countess of Strafford; of Mrs. Alfred Kessler and of Andrew W. Smith. His brother, Earle E. T. Smith, married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt and William K. Vanderbilt, in January, 1926.

Like his father and brother, Sydney A. Smith, has been prominent in athletics. At Yale he and Earle E. T. Smith held the heavyweight boxing championships. Their father also at one time held an amateur boxing championship and is a well-known sportsman.

To Reside in Hollywood, Calif.

Mrs. Melvin Frederick George, formerly Miss Dorothy Atkinson, of LaGrange, whose marriage was brilliantly solemnized last Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. George were married in St. Mark's Episcopal church before a fashionable assemblage. She is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Alexander Atkinson and the late Judge Atkinson. Mr. and Mrs. George will reside in Hollywood, Cal.

Delta Sigma Delta Gives Banquet For Dr. Ralph R. Byrnes

Theta Theta Chapter of Delta Sigma Delta dental fraternity gave a banquet last evening at 6:30 o'clock in the Georgia ballroom at the Henry Grady hotel, in honor of Dr. Ralph R. Byrnes, supreme grand master of the fraternity. Some 75 members were present, including chapter members and alumni.

Several interesting talks were made on this occasion. Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, principal speaker of the evening, and one of the leading Delta Sigs throughout the realm of the fraternity, spoke in praise of Dr. Byrnes as supreme grand master and of his pronounced ability to fill this office, the highest in the fraternity. Dr. Byrnes is considered one of the most popular Delta Sigs who has ever held the office of supreme grand master. Not only is he extremely popular in his fraternity, but he is recognized both nationally and internationally as a leader in his profession. His ability as a great dental educator may be verified by the fact that he is executive dean at the Atlanta Southern Dental College.

Among the other speakers were Dr. Norman C. Poer, deputy of the local chapter, and Dr. Thomas B. Sharp, assistant deputy. Dr. Poer has for the past two years been a most popular deputy and loyal supporter of the chapter. Dr. Sharp, recently appointed assistant deputy, is also popular among the boys, and the members of the chapter feel grateful in having such capable deputies.

The occasion of this banquet served as home-coming day for Theta Theta Chapter for this year. At a recent meeting a definite date was passed on and adopted by the chapter for the annual home-coming day. This date will be the Friday just before Easter, at which time there will be given a banquet in the early evening, and following this will be the annual senior dance.

Savannah Federation Hears Achievements Told at Meeting

Savannah Federation of Women's Clubs held its annual meeting Wednesday in the auditorium of the Independent Sunday school with Mrs. J. S. Howkins, the president, in the chair, and reports of the officers and chairmen as well as the annual reports of the affiliated clubs were featured, giving a comprehensive idea of all the constructive work being done by Savannah clubwomen.

Mrs. C. C. J. Carpenter, Mrs. Sam G. Adler, Miss Sarah Cunningham, Miss Ecie Reynolds and Miss Romana Riley were elected to fill unexpired terms on the public service council, the names being brought in by a committee consisting of Mesdames Frank P. McIntire and T. P. Waring. Election of officers will not be held until the biennial meeting next April.

President's Recommendations.

The recommendation of the president, Mrs. Howkins, was adopted that the Savannah Woman's Federation indorse the early closing of the stores during the summer and that members promise not to shop on the afternoon when the stores are closed. The recommendation was also adopted that the federation work steadily to make Savannah a cleaner city in her streets, parks and squares.

The meeting voted that the federation sign the letter protesting against the bill boards on the highways and promising to give preference to merchants who do not take this method of advertising. A vote of thanks was given to Dr. Neal Anderson for the use of the Sunday school auditorium for the meeting.

Mesdames Clarence G. Anderson, Jr., Max Wolff and H. E. Wells were appointed on the committee to judge the best piece of work done by one of the clubs as shown in the annual report at the meeting. A prize of $5 will be awarded for this at the annual garden party which will be held in May at the home of Mrs. Olaf Otto on East Fifty-fourth street. All of the clubs which did not report at the meeting yesterday are asked to send in their reports within the next week to Mrs. J. S. Howkins, president.

Mrs. Howkins' Report.

The following interesting report for the year was given by Mrs. Howkins:

"Another year finds us here to compare work and gain courage and inspiration to carry on. It is always a pleasure to meet annually and this report will give you an account of some of the works accomplished and the adventures of federation.

"The Savannah Women's Federation is the largest organized group of women in Savannah. In the federation practically every woman's club is represented. It is an organization of organizations and meets once a year in April.

"The work of the federation is conducted through the public service council made up of representatives of the several clubs. The business of the council is largely concerned with matters of such public importance as unite the efforts of all women—indeed of all good citizens.

"The council recently went on record again opposing advertising bill boards on our highways and action was taken in regard to the moral conditions of some of the road houses in the county. We have responded to the following worthy calls: Tallulah Falls Industrial school, Savannah family welfare. Many visits and letters have been written to the proper authorities, when occasion required, and an alertness kept on civic and moral conditions. We have marked eight squares and Forsyth park with handsome bronze markers. Our squares are in better condition but we hope for steady improvement.

"While the individual clubs within the federation work for public health, child welfare, civic beauty, law enforcement, better education constantly, and all the time, the public welfare service council speaks and acts for each of these things at such times and on such occasions when the combined strength of the entire body is needed to serve the public welfare.

"In the early history of the federation the necessity for federated clubs was not nearly so essential as today. The modern world has grown so large and so complex that no individual and no single club or organization of any kind can make the highest state of efficiency or development without co-operation and fellowship, social or business. Co-operative group work does not destroy individually but does increase efficiency and efficiency is the keynote of this particular era. Ability to associate profitably and pleasantly together, and to team well without losing individuality is the test of efficiency.

"When the public service council takes a stand upon an important question it does so only after the most careful deliberation and consideration of all the values, and a stand, once taken, is held to until the evil is corrected or the good cause established.

"'We are all blind until we see
That in the human plan
Nothing is worth the making if
It does not make the man.

Why build these cities glorious
If man unbuilded goes?
In vain we build the world, unless
The builder grows.'

"In closing my report I wish to thank both the Morning News and the Savannah Press for their ever-ready interest and kindness in printing our club news, and express my keen appreciation to the officers and members of this organization for their unfailing courtesies and kindness and wish you all continued success and good luck.

"Your president recommends the following:

"First—That the Savannah Woman's Federation indorse the early closing of the stores from June 15 to September 15 on Saturday, or the day decided upon by the Retail Merchants' Association, and that the members of this organization promise not to shop on the afternoon of the day decided upon and induce as many others as possible to make a similar promise.

"Second—That we work steadily to make Savannah a cleaner city in her streets, parks and squares."

President Hoover Gives Indorsement To Garden Week

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—In response to the request of the president of General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. John F. Sippel, President Hoover has given the following indorsément to National Garden Week, April 21-27.

March 17, 1930.

The White House,
Washington, D. C.

I cordially commend the observance of Garden Week for the purpose of creating interest in more and better gardens, from the health and contentment that comes from contact with mother earth, for the conservation of our native trees and flowers, and because of the satisfaction that comes from an appreciation of the beauty that trees and flowers add to our homes, school grounds and city parks.

HERBERT HOOVER.

Every one of the 14,000 clubs belonging to the General Federation is urged to observe in some way National Garden Week. The chairman of the committee on gardens, Mrs. W. I. Higgins, of Butte, Mont., offers the following practical suggestions. Seek co-operation of the press. Have talks on gardening and tree planting and bird sanctuaries broadcast. Ask the management of the moving picture theaters to show films and colored slides of parks, gardens, trees, flowers and birds.

Request every woman's club, church, school, fraternal and civic organization, Boy and Girl Scout troops and Camp Fire Girls' groups to observe Garden Week by planting trees and having talks on gardening and nature's beauty spots at their meetings during that week or the week following. Organize junior garden clubs. Ask the city superintendent of education to set aside Friday afternoon of Garden Week for a special program devoted to nature study. Encourage the children to have gardens of their own by offering prizes for the best flower and vegetable gardens, apple trees, rose bushes, etc. Adopt for your city some flower that grows easily in the locality, and ask for a general planting of that flower. Urge the conservation of your native trees, shrubs and flowers. Plant evergreens in your home gardens, school grounds and city parks to illuminate next Christmas. Scatter seeds of your state flower along the highways, and when the nation's flower has been selected urge everyone who has a garden to cultivate that flower to perfection. Illustrated lectures may be obtained from the department of agriculture and state agricultural colleges, the art in the home and garden division of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the American Garden Association, Garden City, N. Y.; the American Rose Society, West Grove, Pa.; Better Homes and Gardens, Des Moines, Iowa, and from your local landscape artists.

Have an exhibit of bird houses, bird feeding stations and bird baths in the shop windows to encourage the building of a bird sanctuary in every garden. Organize a garden club that will have for its object: To stimulate interest in gardening, promote civic improvement, conserve native trees and flowers, protect the birds, hold flower shows and conduct garden contests.

Fourth District Votes $25 To Tallulah School

Fourth district executive board held its semi-annual meeting in Newnan Friday, April 4, and Mrs. Ray Cole, president, presided. Mrs. E. B. Estes Gay, chairman of music, wrote that she had suggested to the state president, Mrs. A. H. Brenner, to have "Georgia Land" and music put in the General Federation song book, but Mrs. Brenner advised that perhaps it would be better if the state song and music could be copyrighted in the State Year Book.

Mrs. J. L. Weddington, Newnan, chairman of club institutes, proposed an institute to be held in Newnan this summer, which was heartily indorsed by the board. It was voted to send a gift of $25 to Tallulah from the district treasury.

Mrs. J. O. McGehee, Columbus, district treasurer, reported that the fourth district is 100 per cent in dues paid, and that with only one or two exceptions it is 100 per cent for Tallulah, too. The president urges the delinquent club or clubs to send their gift for Tallulah to Mrs. McGehee or Mrs. Ottley at once.

Mrs. J. A. Latimer, Newnan, chairman of press and publicity, appealed to the clubs again to send club news to her for her report to the club page.

In closing Mrs. Cole, the president, expressed a hope that every club in the fourth district will be represented at the convention in Macon.

Ninth District Deplores Death Of Valuable Member

Members of the ninth district of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs are deeply grieved in the passing of Mrs. Arthur L. DeLaperriere, of Hoschton, one of the most beloved and loyal club members in the district. Mrs. DeLaperriere was district chairman of the department of American citizenship and to awaken and stimulate interest in this phase of club work she offered each year a beautiful banner to the club doing the best work in that department. She was also state chairman of citizenship and was an outstanding woman, ever alert to the best interests of club life and in every way a most valuable member.

The district feels a keen appreciation for her life, as she was always untiring in her efforts and zealous in her enthusiasm to reach the goal, which was a high standard of club life. She was a forceful and efficient leader and gained and retained the confidence, love and esteem of all club members, and her influence for good will always linger in the lives of those with whom she worked.

She will be greatly missed, not only in her club life and home life but in her religious life, where she was also a leader, and she bravely carried on her hopeful ambitions for the betterment of life until her last illness reached such a critical stage a serious operation was imperative, and her death occurred a few days later.

MRS. A. D. McCURRY, Winder,
President Ninth District, G. F. W. C.
MRS. J. B. PARHAM, Canton,
Ninth District Chairmen Press and Publicity.

The tenth district board members enjoyed a pleasant and profitable day as the guest of Wrens Improvement Club.

Mrs. Stovall's Report.

Following is the report of the district president, Mrs. J. Glenn Stovall.

"There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true—
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

"Madame Vice President, District Officers and Friends: I am delighted to be here and delighted to see you here. I come to you today with no formal address, for, I believe such would be entirely out of place, for we have come to discuss, frankly, freely and informally, the problems of our clubs and the district. I bring to you a heart full of appreciation for your unselfish co-operation in a work I believe our heavenly Father is directing. I want to thank you for the sweet spirit in which each of you accepted your appointments, and for the many kind and gracious letters you have already written me, so full of cheer and inspiration. I want you to know that I read and re-read them every one, and find them more and more helpful as I read them over each time.

Make Donations.

"There are just a few things to which I desire to call your attention, for this is a meeting in which I want you to do the talking.

"First, I want to stress the importance of donations to Student Aid Foundation, Ella F. White, fund, Merry Memorial scholarship and our own Tallulah Falls school. If it is impossible to make large donations, do the best you can, but be sure to send something. We want to report the district 100 per cent when we meet at Warrenton this fall.

"Remember when we give to the boys and girls of today an education, we leave to them an heritage that no one can take away. If you have no Junior Club, let me plead with you with all the earnestness I can command to organize your young people at once; they will surely prove an asset. You will be proud of them. The life of the federation depends on them.

"I cannot stress too much the importance of every club bearing in mind the value of publicity. Be sure to send all your club events to the local papers for the benefit of your members and in the hope of interesting those who should become members, and to Mrs. Herbert Franklin of Tennille, your district publicity chairman, for such use as she may make of it. Mrs. W. Edward Platt, 417 Telfair street, Augusta, will greatly appreciate anything you may have that you think may be of value and entitled to a place in the 'Scrap Book.' In the year's to come this will be of much interest and should not be overlooked now.

"Mrs. Kilgore, our chairman of correction, if you will permit me, I have a message which I would like to bring to the mind and heart of every president of the district in regard to prison work, for I feel that this important matter is being overlooked more than we realize. If you have not already done so, appoint the best chairman of correction you can find in your club, lay the work on her heart and urge her to seek the co-operation of the sheriff and other county officers in an effort to reach and serve that class of unfortunates who occupy our prisons and other places of detention, and who, for most part, are forgotten by the world as it 'passes on the other side' without a word of cheer or encouragement which might mean the saving of a life and the redemption of a soul.

"We can place Bibles in the jails and prison camps, and send various kinds of simple religious literature to these unfortunate people. A testament may be bought at Kress' for the small sum of 10 cents. Who knows what it might accomplish in the life of some one. Let them know that we want to help them become good citizens. Remember we have a community responsibility in helping discharged prisoners to become normally adjusted as members of the community. I need not call your attention to the multitude of duties and obligations that rest upon us. We all know them too well. Let us then be up and doing, each to her own task, and all joining in one common effort to make every community a better community for our presence in it, and the district a better district because of the co-operation of every community in it. Build up a community spirit by the following simple recipe:

Civic Pride.

"Mix a little co-operation with unselfishness. Sweeten it with civic pride. Throw in a dash of common sense, stir it with leadership, roll it with persistency, flavor it with optimism, bake it with enthusiasm, and the result is community spirit. Let us resolve to make ourselves worth while through real service. Let each of us find our own place and fill it to the best of our several abilities. Whether we be the possessors of one talent or five, will be a matter of little moment, for when we shall have done our best and come to the end of a perfect day, we shall receive the welcome plaudit, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'

"That man may breathe, but never live
Who much receives and nothing gives.
Whom none can love, whom none can thank
Creations blot, creations blank.
But he who strews his generous way
With loving gifts from day to day,
Is on the road the Master trod
That leads to glory and to God."

Garden committee, Mrs. Roy Adams, chairman, reported that the committee had decided to hold a flower show every other year. Librarian, Miss Carolyn Harmon, reported 506 books in circulation. Sixth District Sets Example In Tallulah School Tag Day

At the sixth district executive board meeting held in Griffin February 8, the Tallulah Falls maintenance, always dear to the sixth district clubwomen, was discussed and it was suggested that each club in the district put on a Tag Day for Tallulah the first week in April, or as soon after as convenient. The sixth district had its Flag Day as scheduled in the first week of April. It was pointed out that this not only brings in a nice sum which relieves the club treasury from too much obligation, but it makes a public appeal for the school to the people of the community and gives information and arouses the interest of those who would not otherwise know of this splendid undertaking.

Mrs. L. P. Adams, of Zebulon, chairman of Tallulah Falls school for the sixth district, has with the co-operation of the sixth district president, Mrs. Hartford Green, inaugurated an annual district-wide Tag Day.

Mrs. Adams in a letter to all club presidents in sixth district said: "I am now planning to have published in all of our county papers of the district, a history and the aim of our Tallulah Falls Industrial school, and also the purpose of the Tag Day. I feel that with the articles recently published in our Sunday papers, followed with those in our county papers we can certainly put 'The Light in The Mountains' before the public as well as our club members.

We can do a lot of publicity both by posters, through our papers, and in meetings for it beforehand, which is good advertising for the school and then the very fact that the women are on the streets asking help from their friends for their school, calls the attention of the public to it and I can assure you it will raise public estimation for your club. The general public is always interested when they find clubwomen doing any real thing through their organizations.

There can be no better opportunity to broadcast the interest in our school and to make a nice sum for your club maintenance fund. I suggest every club put on this anniversary Tag Day, Saturday, April 5, but if some other date suits your local club better that is all right."

The first of these Tag Days was observed on April 5, when a number of clubs observed the day. Other clubs in the district named other days more suitable and the district will go to the state convention with a good sum for their own Tallulah Falls school.

General Federation President To Be Biennial Honor Guest

Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the honor guest of the Georgia Federation at the first session of the biennial convention to be held at the chapel of Wesleyan Conservatory Tuesday evening, May 6. Georgia clubwomen who met Mrs. Sippel before she was elected general federation president, when she was the guest of the Georgia Federation at the convention held at Decatur, have delightful recollections of this gentlewoman whose charm and poise were so much admired by the Georgians.

Speaking Trip.

Mrs. Sippel has recenlty returned from a 10,000-mile speaking trip, which carried her across the continent, thence down the southern coast of the Pacific, through the Panama canal and to Cuba, the trip occupying six weeks. Mrs. Sippel spoke in 17 California cities on various phases of club work.

The clubwomen of Panama and Balboa joined in welcoming her to the Canal Zone, where she spoke and was entertained with social affairs and with trips to points of historic interest. She flew from Panama to Cristobal, where she was again entertained. Clubwomen of Panama have one great common interest which is the establishment of a junior college there in order that their young people will not have to leave the homeland for advanced schooling. There is no institution of higher education along the Isthmus. In Havana Mrs. Sippel was met by a large delegation of clubwomen. She was given a reception by the wife of the president, and was entertained with a luncheon at the Country Club, with representatives of 14 women's organizations present.

Mrs. Sippel will be introduced by Mrs. A. H. Brenner, state president, and will speak to the federation. Dr. T. F. Murphy, chief vital statistician, bureau of the census, department of commerce, Washington, D. C., said to be a delightful speaker, will speak at the opening session on the phases of work in this department that are most interesting to clubwomen. Dr. Murphy will be introduced by Mrs. John King Ottley. Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, will address the convention on Wednesday evening, May 7, on "New Privileges and Opportunities for Women." Dr. Soule will be introduced by Mrs. S. V. Sanford, first vice president.

Hon. Henry T. McIntosh, editor of the Albany Herald, Albany, will speak on Wednesday afternoon, May 7, on "Club Publicity From the Editor's Standpoint." Mr. McIntosh will be introduced by Miss Julia Sparks, state chairman of press and publicity.

District Presidents' Evening.

The district presidents will each report three outstanding accomplishments by a club, or clubs, in their respective districts. Mrs. L. O. Freeman, president of fifth district, will speak on "The Doctrine of Finances."

The reports of officers, heads of foundations, departments and divisions will not be lengthy or tiresome and will give the delegates an opportunity to learn of the many interesting and worthwhile things being done in the federation.

Mrs. Stewart, state chairman of rural co-operation and president of Franklin County Federation, will conduct a conference on "Rural Co-operation Through County Federations." Eighteen presidents of county federations will be interested in this.

The department of the American home, Mrs. Ira Farmer, chairman, will present a pageant called "This Homemaking" on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. A. Clarke, Macon, will be timekeeper and will hold all speakers to time allotted on program.

The program when released in full will give all of the delightful plans made for the convention by the Macon Woman's Club, hostess to the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Georgia Federation.

Miss Smalley, home demonstration agent, presented plans for a fashion show to be held in Royston June 6, and the club voted to co-operate with Miss Smalley and board of trade in sponsoring the show. Mrs. Jep Winn represented the teachers in thanking the educational chairman, Mrs. S. D. Brown, for her thought in having members do something nice for a teacher each month. Mrs. Winn said she had appreciated this more than she could say.

Members answering to roll call with "What the Club Has Meant to Me the Past Year," was answered with real heart to heart expressions of what the club meant to each one, showing that the club means much to each individual, as well as an asset to the school, town and community.

Miss Vera McConnell presented the program and Mrs. Phil Davis gave as current topic the appointment of Mrs. Corra Harris as professor of evil at Rollins College, in Florida. It was of interest to those readers of Mrs. Harris who knew her as a bride when her husband, Rev. Landy Harris, was pastor of the Methodist church in Royston. A beautiful violin solo was rendered by Miss Carolyn Wilder, accompanied by Mrs. Stark Ginn.

Miss Kathleen Duncan gave a talk on club ethics. A parliamentary drill was conducted by Colonel George Adams, who told many points in parliamentary law that proved beneficial. Tennille Club Elects Delegates To Biennial

The April meeting of Tennille Woman's Club meeting was held at the clubhouse Friday afternoon with Mrs. Joe Rich Smith, Miss Marguerite Smith and Mrs. Milo Smith hostesses. The Woodrow Wilson library was used for the meeting, and was brightened with spring flowers, while the view from the window showed that it was "azalea time in Tennille," for the azaleas on the clubhouse grounds form a border along the stream which flows through the park.

Mrs. George C. Daniel, the new president, presided and prayer was offered by Mrs. Louis K. Rogers. The treasurer, Mrs. M. G. Smith, made a report and Mrs. R. F. Theis, chairman of the building committee, reported an increase of funds during the month. Mrs. W. C. Little reported a sum from the recent waffle supper given by her committee. The committee appointed to raise funds during April are Mesdames W. G. Pervis, M. G. Smith, George Franklin, E. B. McDade, G. L. Loggins, Miss Marguerite Smith.

In behalf of Mrs. D. R. Thomas and the J. D. Franklin chapter U. D. C., a comfortable office chair was presented to the club by Mrs. H. M. Franklin, president U. D. C. The chair belonged to William N. Harman, father of Mrs. Thomas, who was a valiant soldier of the Confederacy, and after his death, the chair was presented to the U. D. C. by his wife who was a loyal member of the chapter. Mrs. George Daniel accepted the chair in behalf of the club, and there were many expressions of appreciation to Mrs. Thomas and the U. D. C.

Southern Baptists Will Convene In New Orleans, La., May 17-18

For several years the city of New Orleans has coveted the honor of entertaining southern Baptists in their annual convention. Now that the new municipal auditorium (one of the largest and best equipped in the country) has been completed, New Orleans is supremely happy to extend to this great convention the unstinted hospitality for which this city has always been voted. The headquarters of the different agencies of the convention and its auxiliary will be at the municipal auditorium May 17-18. The auxiliary (Woman's Missionary Union) meets May 13-14, two days before the general convention, therefore delegates to the woman's meeting, who desire to be present on the opening morning and to go by the most convenient and direct route will go over the Atlanta and West Point railroad, leaving Atlanta, May 11 or 12 at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon and arriving in New Orleans the next morning at 7:20 o'clock. Special sleepers will be operated by the A. and W. for delegates and visitors on both of these dates. Reduced rates of one fare and a half can be purchased from May 8 to 15, good for returning until May 23. Members of the executive board and special committees of Woman's Missionary meet Monday, May 11. Delegates from many other parts of the state will find it desirable to leave with the Atlanta delegation over Atlanta and West Point railroad on May 11-12.

World Missions Are Discussed At Lutheran Meeting

World missions and the race problem, the gist of which is contained in the fifth chapter of "Roads to the City of God," was the interesting study subject at the monthly meeting of the W. M. S. of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Wednesday afternoon, April 9. Race prejudice and its causes were the introductory thoughts and showed how it is the result of a lack of knowledge or understanding of the object of our prejudice, which, with proper enlightenment, Christian tolerance and fairness, soon loses itself in its supreme challenge to Christianity.

At the Jerusalem international missionary council, personalities, representing every race and color attended. Here were presented problems of every conceivable interracial relationship in harmony, with only the object in view for the betterment of the entire whole. Among the outstanding personages were Bishop Uzaki, of Japan; Mr. Cynn, Y. M. C. A. secretary from Korea; Max Yergan, first negro from the United States permitted to work among African students: President Hope, of Atlanta, Ga.; Bishop Beauchamp and Dr. Cram, of the southern M. E. church of the United States; Basil Mathews, author of this book; Bishop Ferguson Davis, representing Indinesia; Dean Bocobo, of the Philippine Islands; Harold Grimshaw, of the international labor office at Geneva; R. H. Tawney, of London School of Economics; Mr. Tucker, representing Brazil; Dr. Zwemer and Dr. Richter, of Berlin, both of whom stressed the fact that in Africa many negroes are being won to Islam through the failure of Christianity to live up to the principle of Jesus' teachings.

These conferences emphasized the world-wide co-operation that is slowly being developed among the races of the world through the teachings of the Master. They emphasized that all are after all of one blood, a physical oneness as well as the ultimate spiritual oneness, for which all are striving. As Dr. James D. Vanbuskirk, of Union Medical college school, Korea, so ably explained, that in his 20 years' experience as a doctor he finds that the bloods of Americans and of Koreans is identically divided into four groups. The outcome of these findings resulted in the framing of recommendations to further the fulfilment of our Lord's prayer "that all may be one" by a true desire and earnest endeavor to live up to the teachings of Jesus through actions as well as words.

News From Atlanta's Public Schools

Superintendent's Message

My Dear Boys and Girls:

May 1 is known throughout America as Child Health Day. It is the beginning of what we call the summer-round-up to try to get every child in physical condition to attend school next year.

We have had our health program going in the Atlanta schools now for a number of years. We are doing our best to see that every boy and every girl has perfect teeth, has a body without defects; and is doing the things for his body that will keep it from being sick. In other words, we have three great plans for our health program.

The first one is that every child shall be inspected, that a physician and a dentist shall each year examine us and see if we have anything wrong with us.

The second part of our program is to get these defects corrected, to have our teeth fixed and to have whatever the physician finds wrong with us made right.

The third, and the most important, is that we will do those things that will keep us from being sick. We should practice the right kind of health habits, drink the required amount of water, we must eat fruits and vegetables, and we must sleep with the windows open. We will give to our bodies the bath that is necessary, and will see that our systems have all of the poison eliminated from them. In addition, we are trying to teach the right kind of eating, the right kind of exercise that will make a boy's or a girl's body strong and well.

Now on the first day of May we are going to have Child Health Day, and I do hope and sincerely trust that every boy and girl will have his dental certificate and his health certificate by that day. Then on the week of May 5 to 10 the physicians, the medical colleges, the parent-teacher associations and the dental societies and all of the health workers of the state are going to put on what is known as Health Week in Georgia.

Now we are anxious for every boy and girl to help us make this week a success in Atlanta, and the way that you can do that is first to see that your own physical defects are corrected and that you are strong and well, and, second, to ask your mother and father if they will not go to a good dentist and have their mouth examined, to a good physician and have their bodies examined and then carry out the advice of this physician and dentist. If you will do this simple thing for your mother and father they will live longer, and if your mother and father will carry out these instructions they will be better and happier, and all of us will be able to do better work because we are all keeping well.

I am going to depend on you to help us with this work.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

C. H. S. STUDENTS HEAR DR. SUTTON

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, addressed the junior and senior classes of Commercial High, in the school auditorium on Tuesday, April 8.

"Dare to think," said Dr. Sutton. "We are in this world to individualize, and when you dare to think, you dare to be individual," continued the superintendent.

"This is the machine age, and more and more people are finding themselves without work every year," declared Dr. Sutton; "but if you know how to think, how to look ahead, how to dream, and do more than the ordinary things you are expected to know how to do in life, you are going to get the job."

In conclusion, the appreciation of the students was expressed to Superintendent Sutton by Frances Whitworth, president of the student body, and Mr. Lowe, principal of the school, said a few words stressing the importance of thinking.

The Lanier Debating Club of Commercial High school defeated the Culver Literary Society of Tech High in one of the most interesting debates held at the school in the past several years, Friday morning, April 4, in the Commercial High auditorium.

Robert Brown and Herbert White, representing the Commercial society, upheld the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, that the emergence of women from the home is a depressing feature of modern life." Rupert Shockley and Jessie Davis represented the Culver society.

Elton Skelton of the Tech High club, declaiming "One Niche the Highest," won declaimer's honors from John Black of the Lanier club, who gave "The American Flag."

The debaters kept the audience in a continuous uproar with their witty remarks and quick retorts.

Dr. L. B. Crantford, Dr. A. J. Moncrief and Dr. W. H. Faust were the judges.

In the fifth district debating contest held Friday evening, March 28, Robert Brown and Charles Gallaher of the Lanier Debating Club, upholding the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, that the county should be the unit of administration of public education in Georgia," were defeated by Russell High of East Point in the Commercial High auditorium.

Pupils of Low 4 grade of Crew Street school have written a play on Phoenician life. In the picture are shown, left to right, Lloyd Young and Van Abercrombie, dramatizing a part of the play, sailing off to trade with the Tin Isles in the Phoenician boat made by members of the class.

CENTRAL SCHOOL LOSES TO G. H. S.

Under a star-studded sky the gray and gold colors of Central Night were lowered and in their place was hoisted the black and gold of Girls' High, a symbol of victory, when the Jeffersonian Literary Society of Central Night met defeat at the hands of the Feltonian Society of Girls' High in an interschool debate, held in the night school auditorium, Monday evening, April 7.

Bernadine Hester, Mildred Cohen and Elizabeth Langford, of Girls' High, were successful in debating the negative side of the question, "Resolved, that the practice of installment buying should be drastically curtailed." Miss Langford was given the judge's decision as the best debater of the evening.

Gertrude Taylor, Lois Jones and Harriet Robison, representing the Jeffs, fought vainly to meet the deluge of points heaped upon them by the visitors, but were unsuccessful.

Miss Myrtle Rushin, the popular coach of the Feltonians, and Miss Ozna Tontak, president, headed the large delegation visiting the night school.

The Grady Literary Society of Central Night elected J. O'Neal Johnson, LeRoy Seignious and Fred L. Hester as their debating team to meet the Jeffersonian Society in the fourth and last inter-society debate of the year to be held on Thursday evening, April 17. The Gradys will debate the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved, that the Philippine Islands should be given their independence at once." James Smith was selected as the Grady declaimer to compete against Garnett Trotter, declaiming for the Jeffs. Lewis Moseley, Charles Welch and Allen Beech are the Jeff debaters.

Robert T. Tillman, a graduate of '27, has returned to school to take a post-graduate course in mathematics.

JOE BROWN FACULTY HAS COMEDY WEDDING

Joe Brown boys and girls received a real thrill last Friday night when they saw their dignified men teachers sweep down the aisle of the auditorium in evening gowns of the latest fashions. The occasion for all this was the womanless wedding put on by the faculty to help toward buying a new water cooler for the cafeteria. There's no doubt about the water cooler being paid for, because the auditorium was packed.

No bride was ever more charming than "Miss" Wrenn. Master E. L. Rudolph was the little ring bearer. Little "Miss" P. H. Cook, the bride's baby sister, was the hit of the evening, and only interrupted the ceremony four times. The bridesmaids were "Miss" J. E. Howard and "Miss" Harry Hall.

Besides the ceremony, there was a prologue consisting of several vaudeville skits which were put on by the pupils under the direction of Miss Mary Holder and F. E. Hankinson.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

A GREAT MYSTERY NOVEL.

The Door and the Woman Behind the Door, are responsible for one of the best mystery novels of the age. —Mary Roberts Rinehart.

"Then I happened to raise my eyes, and they fell on the mirror—"

"There was a man on the staircase—"

Do not get this story confused with "The Circular Staircase"—there are others.

Grant Overton pays deserved tribute to Mary Roberts Rinehart, and calls her "The Woman Behind the Door." It was Edgar Wallace, an internationally known writer of mystery stories, who called the popular author "the queen of us all."

Mr. Overton in his tribute says that the author is "not a writer of mystery stories, that she is a novelist, and one of the most remarkable women in America." "The Door" is not an everyday mystery based on imagination, but one in which the author makes a discovery herself and, realizing that the information can be used to good advantage, she bases a first-class mystery story on the data.

There is a series of crimes, one follows the other, just a few feet away—covered by a few minutes of time—and there is plenty of humor, action, excitement, not a dull character from the first one introduced—"the man on the staircase"—to the servants of the household, or—well, to the leading story teller, in this swiftest of mystery stories. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Freak Show. Translated from the Russian of Andre Sobol by Jenny Covan. Jacket design by Jeanette Seelhoff. "A hand destined to shatter the clockwork of the universe—." "The hand of soviet Russia—strong as iron, weak as a reed—will it bend or break the will of the world?" Andre Sobol tells the story in fiction. (Claude Kendall, publisher, New York.)

Movieland. By Ramon Gomez de la Serna. The author prefers to be known as Ramon. He is 33 years old and has already written some 70 volumes. Ramon seems to have been selected of all modern Spanish writers for an American presentation, and the selection has been "Movieland"—"An American fairyland seen by the sophisticated but appreciative eyes of a witty European. This surely is the best entry point to the charming Ramonland, where wit is language, and all time a holiday." It is predicted by his friends and admirers that he will succeed Ibanez as the Spanish writer known to the whole world. (The Macaulay Co., New York.)

Espionage. By H. R. Berndorff. This spy story is called an "international sensation." It has passed through innumerable editions and America and England find much interest in the story. The whole spy system is exposed—before the war, during the war and after the war. There are chapters that show the remarkable points of such mysterious and famed spies as Colonel Redl, of the Austrian imperial staff, and, above all, Germany's greatest spy, the "Lady Doctor." The story is well written, it is interesting, for it is full of the facts of what went on inside the lines. (D. Appleton & Co., New York. $2.50.)

Romance by Request. By Steuart M. Emery. "Would you walk a mile for a million dollars?" This question was asked by a young man who had just inherited a summer hotel on Cape Cod, to his friend whose eyes were watching him behind a pair of horn-rimmed nose glasses. Ted Holly did not wait a second to reply. "Would I? What's the matter with you? You need an alienist! Are you crazy? Go get yourself psycho-analyzed."

But that was not all; there was to be the successful consummation of three love affairs during the summer. If not, the hotel goes to Mary Smith, of Denver, who was one of the first arrivals at the hotel.

As fast as Stephen arranges love affairs, Mary Smith disarranges them, so, in desperation, he realizes there is only one way out of the complication, and that the wise thing for him to do was to talk to Mary Smith about it, and he did. (McRae-Smith Co., Philadelphia.)

The House on the Hill. By Anne Putnam. The story is located in a small midwestern town, and it is truly the story of one woman whose life has never grown beyond the ancestral atmosphere. The story has a splendid background, unusual characters, and an interest that will hold the reader's attention, but no description, no criticism, no outline of the tale, which seems so realistic, can do the author's motive in writing this story the justice it deserves. Love, marriage, wifehood, motherhood, and then the end. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

BONI'S PAPER BOOKS.

My Reminiscences as a Cowboy. By Frank Harris. The interesting introduction is by H. M. Kallen, who, among other things, writes as follows:

"To the generation of 1930 Frank Harris is already a legend. At 75 he sits on his balcony by the still Mediterranean waters and remembers his youth . . . and it seems to him golden . . . it was a youth upon the American prairie, among the cowboys and Indians and buffaloes of the '70s. So it is no wonder that he can say, 'Kings and cowboys I have known, and the cowboys stand out above the rest.'"

So Frank Harris, whose books have been read the world over, now from the storehouse of youth gathers his reminiscences of the days when he was a cowboy.

The Master of the Day of Judgment. By Leo Perutz. Translated from the German by Hedwig Singer. The author was born in Prague, which today is the capital of the young Czecho-Slovakian republic. His reputation as a German has long been established. The location of the present story is Vienna. (Charles Boni, New York.)

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
Author of Mystery Story

HENRIETTA, PRINCESS OF ENGLAND.

The Secret History of Henrietta, Princess of England. First wife of Philippe, Duc d' Orleans, together with Memoirs of the Court of France for the Years 1688-1689. Both by Madame De La Fayette. Translated with an introduction by J. M. Shelmerdine. This is the third volume of the series. The Comtesse De La Fayette, as confidante of Henrietta, gives a picturesque account of the private and court life of this exquisite princess whom Louis XIV refused to marry. As writer of her memoirs (translated here for the first time), the comtesse describes the French court, and says "artificiality could go no further."

The introduction covers 12 pages which the reader will find of special advantage in reading the volume. The princess was the youngest child of Charles I of England. The story of her life is thrilling, and the comments in the introduction are most interesting. It is a splendid explanation of the trials and the struggles endured by the queen and Princess Henrietta. Mr. Shelmerdine continues to say in the introduction that "the secret history does not purport to be a serious biography of Henrietta—its historical interest today, apart from its charm as a 'portrait,' lies mainly in the description of a highly artificial court life."

Many interesting pages are devoted to the "Memoirs of the Court of France" with attractive picture of Comtesse De La Fayette, James II and king of England. These pages cover the period from 1688 to 1689. The book is edited by Cyril Hughes Hartman. (Published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

A CHINESE LADY.

Portrait of a Chinese Lady. By Lady Hosie. This is a true picture of the real China of today. Though the author is English, she was born and bred in China, and perhaps learned the Chinese language at the same time she learned her own. Her father, Dr. William Soothill, is now professor of Chinese at Oxford, England. The story is really woven around Mrs. Sung, a charming young Chinese woman whose husband is a businessman and whose children are being educated, so naturally she is interested in the modern problems. Lady Hosie and Mrs. Sung became good friends and it was through their confidences that this story of modern China is told.

The author has not written a story on Chinese history, but she has woven a chronicle of modern, everyday China, of its men and women. Especially interesting is the story of Miss Wu, a tutor in a woman's college. Three Chinese gentlemen, a Manchu princess, boatmen, rickshawmen, beggars and bandits, all find a place in this book. There are amusing incidents and many pathetic episodes about the Chinese and their home life from the highest to the lowliest. (William Morrow & Co., New York. $5.00.)

SEE CHINA.

See China With Me. By Jane A. Tracy. The book is dedicated to two of the Y. M. C. A. secretaries at Shanghai. Those who have enjoyed travel in China, especially on the Yangtze Kiang from east to west and west to east, will enjoy this travel story, which is extravagantly illustrated with many pictures. This river is especially known to religious and educational workers among the Chinese, for it is by this way that they reach their stations.

The author and one other lady were the only ones who accepted the invitation for a trip in the interior of China and the valley of Yangtze Kiang to study the Chinese, their manner of living, customs, etc. The story of their experiences will be found quite interesting. (The Stratford Co., Boston.)

THE MODERN LIBRARY.

The Modern Library continues to grow in popularity—of its pocket size books—over a million copies have been sold during the past year. This library of "little" classics was begun in the summer of 1918, the first book on the list being "Dorian Gray" by Oscar Wilde, and it is still one of the most popular titles of the series. In 1925 two young university graduates purchased the library series for a quarter of a million dollars and began to increase the list of copyrighted books that had never sold before for less than three to five dollars a copy. As the reader well knows, ten years ago there were no cheap editions of the classics and the better class of literature in general. Today "times have changed—" there are no real bookstores; every drugstore, department store, newsstand, railroad depots the country over has gone into the "book" business, with an alluring sign "Books for $1," being displayed.

Among the number that have recently been issued are the following:

Anna Karenina. (One volume), by Count Leo Tolstoy.

The Turn of the Screw. By Henry James. Itnorduction by Heywood Broun.

The Sun Also Rises. By Ernest Hemingway.

The Painted Veil. By James Hunneker.

The Plays of Tchekov: "The Sea Gull," "The Cherry Orchard," "Three Sisters," "Uncle Vanya," etc.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

The Book of Bird Life. A Study of Birds in their Native Haunts; with photographs by the author. By Arthur A. Allen, Ph. D., professor of ornithology at Cornell University; editor, "School Department Bird Lore." This handsome book of more than 400 pages should be in every library. Dr. Allen has written most interestingly the story of bird life in America, their habits and haunts. It is a book that will delight all bird lovers as well as be of untold information to them. The 400 illustrations, or more, are from photographs and are of almost every bird in America. It is a charming book, written in a style that will appeal to any bird liver. (D. Van Nostrand Co., Inc., New York).

The Normal Diet. By Dr. W. D. Sansum. Third Revised Edition. The author is director of the Potter Metabolic Clinic, Santa Barbara Cottage hospital, Santa Barbara, Cal. This is a simple statement of the fundamental principles of diet for the mutual use of physicians and patients. It is a valued treatise in this day when the dietitian is the ruler in the kitchen. (C. V. Mosby Co., St. Louis).

French Cooking For All. By Gaston Voisin. Here is a different cookery book. The recipes will remind you of the "good things" you had to eat in Paris and other continental cities. The American traveler has to come back home some time but he does not have to forget the art of the foreign chef, so the author has brought these tempting dishes right here, having collected all that is best of French cookery for the benefit and the pleasure of his American friends. (Frederick A. Stokes, New York).

Whispers From Eternity. Universal Scientific Prayers and Poems. By Swami Yogananda. The foreword is by Galli Curci who asks that the reader "pass not by, with hurried intellectual reading, the mines of realization hidden beneath the soil of words in this sacred book." (Published by Yogoda and Sat-Sanga, Mount Washington Center, Los Angeles, California.)

The Creed of a Biologist. A Biologic Philosophy of Life. By Alfred Scott Warthen. Professor of pathology and director of the pathological laboratories in the University of Michigan. (Paul B. Homer, New York.)

To Be Taken Before Sailing. By Irvin S. Cobb. The author was in a rather poetic mood when he wrote the lines:

"To learn about Europe, consult Mr. Cobb."

The prescription by "Dr." Cobb, author of "Speaking of Operations," should be read by the prospective tourist. (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

VIRGINIA QUARTERLY. Has Fifth Birthday.

RADIOS INSTALLED AT FULTON AND CECIL

Baron & Wilson Announce Plans To Equip All Hotels in System.

Baron & Wilson, operators of the Robert Fulton and Cecil hotels, announce that radio installations have been made in these hostelries, with speakers located in all rooms for the reproduction of both mechanical music and broadcast programs.

The equipment is especially designed after considerable research to meet hotel demands on centralized radio installations by RCA engineers. It was installed by the engineering forces of the Robert Fulton and Cecil hotels, under the supervision of W. L. Rothenberger and J. C. Lamont, engineers of the RCA-Victor Company, Inc., in co-operation with Georgia Power Company engineers.

The installation includes a centralized receiving set, an especially constructed super-heterodyne with automatic volume control, electric time clock, and a distribution system that enables the operator to control any section of the hotels or any floor as the occasion may demand.

RCA type 100-B loud speakers are installed in all of the guest rooms, and all the public rooms are equipped with power dynamic speakers. The receiving equipment is coupled with a powerful amplifying system which assures sufficient volume without distortion.

Continuous programs will be given daily from 11 a. m. until 11 p. m., and records will be reproduced when desirable programs are not on the air. The speakers may be cut on or off at the will of guests with the switch mounted on the wall.

Volume is controlled by the operator as well as the automatic feature, so as not to disturb guests in adjoining rooms. Sufficient volume will be maintained, however, to make the programs enjoyable. The management announces that special dance programs may be arranged for private parties on the roof of the Cecil.

The installation was made in 30 days, reported to be record time for 600 rooms with all wiring concealed. Three hotels of the Baron & Wilson system, which is considered one of the leading hotel chains in the south, have now been equipped with radio, the third one being Hotel Savannah at Savannah. The others, including the Mecklenburg, at Charlotte, N. C.; Exchange, at Montgomery, Ala.; Hillman, at Birmingham; Jefferson, at Columbia, S. C., and the Seminole, at Jacksonville, Fla., will be similarly equipped as soon as time will permit.

Joseph Gardberg, formerly a wireless operator at sea, and who holds a first-class operator's license, is in charge of operation. Mr. Gardberg is now a student at Georgia Tech and he will be assisted by B. Ackerman, also a Tech student.

'Drowned in Water' Gibbons Subject

"Drowned in water."

That phrase has a special significance for Floyd Gibbons, famed war correspondent and special newspaper writer.

For, in the middle of the night of February 25, 1917, while a passenger on the steamship Laconia traveling to Europe to cover activities at the front for his newspaper, the boat was torpedoed by a German submarine 200 miles off the Irish coast. A number of lives were lost, but Gibbons miraculously escaped drowning, and, after swimming some distance, he managed to reach a small boat in which he and others spent the night. They were rescued the next day and Gibbons, true to newspaper instinct, first cabled a 4,000-word story to his paper before receiving badly needed medical attention.

He's going to tell something of that harrowing experience next Saturday night when he speaks at 8 o'clock over WSB and the NBC red network on the "Drowned in Water" test of the General Electric Refrigerator. In describing this dramatic test, made at the research laboratories of the General Electric Company, Gibbons will put into his story the same dramatic interest that won him world fame as a correspondent in war-torn France.

Rev. Wm. T. McElveen To Talk Over WSB

The Rev. William T. McElveen, Ph. D., pastor of the United Congregational church that worships at the Atlanta Woman's Club on Peachtree and Thirteenth streets, will broadcast four services over WSB this week.

The dates and topics are as follows.

Wednesday, April 16—"Saving Others: Not Saving Himself."

Thursday, April 17—"Have We Forsaken, Denied or Betrayed Jesus?"

Friday, April 18—"The Cross Uplifting Christ, and Christ Uplifting the Cross."

Saturday, April 19—"Christ's Grave Not a Blind Alley."

Shipment of Majestics for Distributor Here

Three carloads of Majestic electric radios and tubes received during the past week by the Capital Electric Company, local distributors, from the Grigsby-Grunow Company, at Chicago, manufacturer.

Shipments of Majestic radios to the Capital Electric Company reached a total of 136 cars for the 19 months it has had the distributor franchise in Georgia and eastern Tennessee, with the receipt of three cars during the past week, it is announced by W. H. Brimberry, vice president of the distributing firm.

The Capital Electric Company took the line in August, 1928, and receipts since that time have amounted to more than 18,500 radio sets, the retail value of which is more than $3,000,000. One of the cars in the last shipment was made up exclusively of the popular 92 model, and contains 170 receivers valued at $33,150.

Mr. Brimberry states that in the face of a general opinion as to depressed conditions, their business has exceeded in each month that of the same month the previous year, excepting in February, which is accounted for by receipt of heavy shipments in February, 1929, over and above their quota. The first complete train load of radios ever to move in one shipment came through Atlanta that month, seven cars of which were for the Capital Electric Company.

Majestic soon will place a popular priced electric refrigerator on the market, according to Mr. Brimberry, and plans are now under development for the first train load of Majestic refrigerators to follow the same route as the radios did. The Capital Electric Company anticipates a volume on the refrigerator in excess of that they have had on Majestic radio. June 1 is the tentative date announced for its appearance.

WGST Features Old Plantation

"Liza" and "Mammy" who appear over WGST with "Mis' Lucy" at 7 o'clock every Wednesday evening in a series of "Reminiscences of the Old Southern Plantation." They will be on the air again from 7 to 7:15 o'clock Wednesday night and will be glad to receive requests for old plantation favorites.

To Celebrate Anniversary of 'Rhapsody in Blue'

Listen in Tuesday evening if you wish to enjoy "Rhapsody in Blue" over the air for the first time in its entirety. This feature on the Old Gold hour marks the sixth anniversary of Paul Whiteman's association with George Gershwin's greatest work, written especially for Whiteman.

The famous composer himself was piano soloist for the premiere performance in 1924, an orchestra recital that overnight made Whiteman the world's leading interpreter of jazz music. Strains of the rhapsody are now familiar as the signature and musical interludes of Old Gold broadcasts.

The anniversary program also will include a specialty by no less a celebrity than Ray Bargy, pianist in the Whiteman ensemble. In addition to a veritable parade of popular new melodies, Tuesday's broadcast will star a new one from Al Jolson's picture "Mammy," entitled "Looking at You," as well as special selections from "Fifty Million Frenchmen" and the "King of Jazz." It goes on the air from Station KVI, in Seattle, at 8 p. m., over WGST and the Columbia Broadcasting system's coast-to-coast hook-up.

Majestic Program Over WSB Today

Another of the series of Majestic concerts will be broadcast today, sponsored by the Capital Electric Company, distributors of the famous Majestic radio and Majestic tubes in Georgia and eastern Tennessee.

These programs originate in Atlanta and are under the direction of the Capital Electric Company.

The orchestra is under the direction of Marcus Bartlett and today's program includes one of Sousa's well-known compositions, "Sound Off" and "Southern Roses," by Strauss, also selections from "Sweethearts," by Victor Herbert.

Majestic's tenor has chosen two selections of wide popularity, "Do You Know My Garden," by Hayden Wood, and "Homing," by Teresa del Riego.

From the acknowledgments received by Mr. J. C. Montgomery, sales promotion manager of the Capital Electric Company, these programs are highly appreciated at the Sunday dinner hour.

WORLD-FAMOUS MARCH IS STROMBERG FEATURE

"1812 Overture" of Tschaikowsky To Be Given by Orchestra Monday Night.

The world-famous composition, "1812 Overture" (Napoleonic) of Tschaikowsky will be one of the familiar classics played by the Rochester Civic orchestra, Guy Fraser Harrison conducting, on the Stromberg-Carlson program of Monday from 9 to 9:30 o'clock. This program, which originates at WHAM, Rochester, is spread from coast to coast over WSB and WJZ network.

This favorite composition gives the composer's impressions of Napoleon's first victory in his Russian campaign. One hears in this "Overture" old Russian chants, a Cossack battle song, the Russian national hymn, the pealing of giant bells and the thunder of cannon.

Another selection in different vein on this program is the sparkling intermezzo preceding Act III of the opera "Jewels of the Madonna." In this opera the composer, Wolf-Ferrari, followed the custom of many Italian composers in writing no overture but rather preceding each act by melodious orchestration. This prelude to Act III is one of the most famous intermezzi.

Music of varied nature rounds out this program, the complete schedule for which follows:

Polonaise from "First Orchestral Suite" ..... Lippacher
The Last Sleep of the Virgin ..... Massenet
Introduction to Act III—The Jewels of the Madonna ..... Wolf-Ferrari
Overture 1812 ..... Tschaikowsky

Stimson To Talk Over WGST Tonight

Atlantans will be given an opportunity to hear Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson explain the terms of the tripartite naval treaty from London in his final radio address from the British capital tonight from 11:30 to 11:45 o'clock through the Columbia Broadcasting System and WGST, Georgia Tech station.

Announcement was made by WGST Saturday that the Columbia system had arranged, following a series of cable and trans-Atlantic telephone conversations with its London representatives, for the final radio talk of the secretary of state to be broadcast via short waves from London, which will be picked up by receivers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and rebroadcast from New York over the national network of the Columbia system.

Secretary Stimson will sail for the United States on April 22, and his final radio talk will contain pertinent comment on the naval pact signed by five nations, but agreed to by only Great Britain, Japan and the United States.

THREE CHILDREN'S HOURS OVER WGST

WGST's second feature for children, "The Land O' Make Believe," coming directly from New York over the Columbia network, will be on the air from 9 to 9:50 o'clock. The cast will include Artells Dickson, Dr. Arthur Torrance, Helena Gilbert, Donald Hughes, Pat Ryan and Yolande Langworthy. The musical background will be by Emery Deutsch's Columbia ensemble.

Bowen David, Jr., 11-year-old violinist; George Waters, Jr., 11-year-old "boy soprano" and pianist, and Lewis Silverboard, 13-year-old flutist, sponsored by Mrs. Bingham Bache, participate on Aunt Sally's Bible Hour broadcast for children from 6 to 6:30 o'clock. HONORING THOMAS JEFFERSON.

On this date 187 years ago there was born in Virginia a man-child who has profoundly affected the subsequent history of mankind around the world. His name was Thomas Jefferson—a name dear to democratic spirits in all nations and that will continue to sanctify genuine democratic institutions until civilization crumbles into utter collapse.

Practically the highest terms that eulogy can reach have long since been employed to establish reverence for the character and political principles of Jefferson. He will be a vain man who endeavors to add to the stature of the author of the American "Declaration of Independence," the Virginia statute for religious freedom, and the president of the republic he helped to found who set up in it a political party the philosophy of which is the gospel of popular government in this nation and the prescription for self-determination for all free people upon the surface of this planet.

Jefferson was the seer who discerned that "resistance to tyranny is duty to God." He was the sworn foe to every form of autocracy, monopoly of power and government, restriction of "the rights of man," and the immortal apostle of the indefeasible sovereignty of the people. By strict adhesion to the principles of Jefferson the democratic party that he fathered held and administered the national government for more than half a century. By sacrificing many of those principles for political expediency and lust for the spoils of office the modern democratic party has become weak, spasmodic and barely popular only when the Hamiltonian, federalistic party has divided in counsel and power.

The democrats of the nation are anxious to recover control of the federal power in the professed hope to better its administration in the interest of the common welfare. Whenever the democratic party will return solidly and frankly to its Jeffersonian fundamentals and swear unalterable allegiance to the "decalogue of democracy" that Jefferson wrote into his forever famous first inaugural address, it can cherish the hope to again become the guide and guardian of this American republic.

Unless and until the party claiming to be the child of the Moses-like brain of Jefferson can purge itself of political and legislative heresies that would make him, if alive today, a scandalized and indignant father, it will have scarcely any persuasive and powerful appeal to the common people to exchange a predatory republican party for a democratic party offering to be yet more predatory upon the people's rights and treasures.

There will be many Jefferson day celebrations over the country tomorrow and they will be profitable to democracy in that measure with which celebrating democrats abjure federalism, centralism and seductive subsidyism for the sternly righteous principles of the democracy founded by Thomas Jefferson.

WOMEN AS VOTERS.

An apprehension is voiced by Will Rogers that the victory of Ruth McCormick in the Illinois primary will start a nationwide influx of women candidates into the political arena. But that fear is probably "too previous," although quite naturally there will be other self-conscious lady-statesmen who will be induced by the success of the militant Hanna girl to appeal to "the many-headed mob" through the ballot boxes.

But a Ruth Hanna McCormick candidacy and one of common stock pattern are different things altogether. She had much stronger and vote-winning qualifications than a lipstick and a rayon petticoat. Be it remembered that she is the apt graduated student of a father who was the political Warwick of the nation in his day. She is the widow of one of the smartest senators of recent times. She has for a generation watched and studied state and national politics. She is a popularly accredited congresswoman-at-large from Illinois in the present congress. She knows her political onions as perfectly as Paderewski knows the keys of his piano.

Of course, she is not the only politically smart woman in these United States. There are others, but they have far to come yet before they can travel nose to nose with Mrs. McCormick. They lack, also, the concerted backing of their sex which is awfully inclined to catty jealousy of anyone of their breed who aspires to leadership. There are more women in the nation than men and if, like Curran's bed bugs, they should all pull together and pull the same way, they could dominate the government and hold all its offices. But they don't do that; they succumb to their yen and follow the men!

BUILDING BOOMS.

Those who persist in the cry of "hard times" are put in an unenviable light by the F. W. Dodge Corporation's review of building and engineering activity during the month of March.

The review of this nationally known survey firm shows that in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains the figures were 45 per cent over those for February and only 5 per cent under those for March of last year, which was one of the greatest construction months in the last decade.

Better yet, this report shows that for the southeastern states there was an increase not only over February but also over March of last year. In referring to the construction situation in this section, the Dodge review says:

"Building and engineering contracts awarded in the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and eastern Tennessee during the past month totaled $27,288,700. This, compared with $20,650,100 for February, an increase of 32 per cent, and compared with $26,444,000 for the amount let in the corresponding month last year, an increase of 3 per cent.

"March contracts in the 37 states east of the Rockies reached a total of $459,119,000, this being the largest monthly total since August of last year; it registered the full seasonal increase of 45 per cent over February of this year, and was only 5 per cent under March, 1929. This year's first quarter contract total has amounted to $1,100,147,000, being only 12 per cent behind the corresponding period of last year."

There is no better barometer of economic conditions than figures showing the comparative condition of the building trades. If they are busy and prosperous, there can be no ground for complaint of "poor business," because only under sound economic and prosperous conditions generally do construction and engineering figures mount.

The Dodge report shows conclusively that those sections which were hit the hardest by the economic slump following last fall's Wall street debacle are again nearing a condition of normalcy and that the south, suffering as it did less than any other section from the depression, is considerably ahead of the prosperous conditions of last year's first quarter.

It would certainly seem, therefore, that the sensible manufacturer and merchant desiring to wind up this year with the largest possible profits, will realize that the only way to do this is to lay his plans now to take immediate advantage of the general return to normal conditions, and not to further hesitate to secure assurance that the reported reaction is not a false alarm.

THE ROMANCE OF COTTON.

The story of textile development and the perfecting of efficiency in modern cotton mills, as told in a recent statement by Leavelle McCampbell, vice president of the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York, sounds more like the tale of an American Nights dreamer than the account of the progress of a great industry.

Even a poorly operated cotton mill, he declares, is probably more efficient than a well-run automobile factory, for "it is one thing to introduce improved methods into an industry 30 years old and quite another to attain the same objective in an industry as many centuries old."

Mr. McCampbell brings out that to make a yard of ordinary eighty square print cloth, not less than 35,000,000 individual pieces of raw material are gathered by hand from many hundred locations, each piece of hairlike diameter and about an inch in length. In turning these millions of tiny shreds into yarn, spindles turn at as high a rate of 10,100 revolutions per minute, a machine speed almost unknown in other industries. Then in the final making of this yard of cloth, some 6,000 of these yarns are laid crosswise, intermeshing each other 9,000,000 times before the piece of cloth is finally finished. When all of these processes are completed, the manufacturer gets about nine cents for his product.

The lesson to the southern farmer who grows the fleecy staple, the converting of which into cloth is accomplished under such conditions of efficiency, is obvious. If he were to exert the same care in the raising of cotton and in perfecting it, that is exercised in its manufacture into articles of merchandise, it would not be long before he would belong to the most fortunate class of American agriculturalists.

If the textile operator by the adoption of modern methods and machinery can manufacture and profitably sell for nine cents a yard of cloth calling for the crossing 9,000,000 times of 35,000,000 pieces of raw material, no sensible person would deny that the adoption of equally as effective time and labor-saving devices, and the application of studious attention to the perfection of his product, would enable the cotton grower to wax wealthy even at the prevailing low prices.

GUNNING FOR GRUNDYITES.

Significant signs are appearing in various sections of the country that popular sentiment is turning just now strongly against the republican control of the government. The prospect of being saddled with the Grundy tariff bill is stirring widespread discontent, manifested more strongly among the rank and file of the consuming people than among the politicians who are always disposed to accept whatever seems the party order of the day.

But the far-flung phalanx of politicians have their ears to the ground and are not making any loud noises in premature championship of Grundyism. The farmers as a class show obvious disgust over the failure of this republican congress to redeem the pledges made to them in the 1928 campaign. They seem to realize that by the Grundy bill they are being showered with tariff confetti while the makers of the goods they have to buy are given new power to more richly profiteer upon them.

And in the general revolt against Grundyism labor begins to sense that the lowered purchasing power of the people, with a possible "buyers' strike" will mean reduced factoring operations, less employment and loss of wages.

The leaven of discontent with absolute republican domination is working more widely daily and the promise is that it tends toward the election in November of a house of congress, at least, as the available means of putting a ratchet for the time being upon an administration that has failed to make good on its pre-election pledges.

THE JUDGE PARKER CASE.

The confirmation by the senate of the nomination of Judge Parker, of North Carolina, to be a justice of the supreme court of the United States is opposed from two sources. The American Federation of Labor object to Judge Parker because of an opinion by him as a federal circuit judge upholding the legality of so-called "yellow dog contracts," which mean contracts by employes who agree with employers not to join labor unions. The other objectors are the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, because Judge Parker when the republican candidate for governor of North Carolina deprecated the participation of negroes in the politics of that state.

These protests raise two interesting issues for the senate to decide. One is the legal correctness of the decision of Judge Parker in the labor contract case and the other is the political right of a citizen to believe it unwise for the interests of both races for negroes to seek political power in a southern state notoriously committed to white supremacy.

In the first case it appears to be generally conceded that the decision written by Judge Parker for the circuit court in the "yellow dog contracts" case tracked the precedent decisions of the supreme court of the United States and is, therefore, not assailable with reason upon legal grounds. It is only attackable by the labor leaders from the angle of a labor rights policy which the federation desires to see established and affirmed by the courts of the nations. It is, therefore, put up to the senate whether it will make the precedent that no man, however honest and qualified, shall sit upon the supreme bench because his views of the law do not accord with those of the leaders of a class of the population.

One may thoroughly sympathize with the contention that the "yellow dog contracts" are unfair requisitions made of workingmen, but the greater constitutional right of contract is superior to sentiment and sympathy. Until such contracts are specifically made illegal it will be the duty of all courts to protect the right of persons to make them.

As for the opposition by the negro association it is based on a campaign speech by Judge Parker in which he said:

The negro, as a class, does not desire to enter politics. The republican party of North Carolina does not desire him to do so. We recognize the fact that he has not yet reached the stage in his development when he can share the burdens and responsibilities of government. This being true, and every intelligent man in North Carolina knows that it is true. . . . the participation of the negro in politics is a source of evil and danger to both races.

The qualified negro voters of North Carolina do not appear to have resented the views of Judge Parker, but are reported to have voted strongly for him as the republican candidate for governor. It is the hell-raising negro political vampires of New York and Boston who are fighting the Parker nomination, purely on color line contentions. But the supreme court, in its most republican complexion, has uniformly decided that it will pass upon no such contentions of political character except in cases where a state abridges the right of a person of proper qualifications to vote on account of his "race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

The senate, therefore, knowing the "yellow dog contracts" decision to be in harmony with the precedents and that Judge Parker's views as to the qualifications generally of the negroes to "share the burdens and responsibilities of government" are only personal and political, will have to travel far away from both justice and precedents to refuse confirmation of his nomination to the supreme bench. Its decision on the show down will be watched for with curious interest in both legal and political circles.

PROBING THE WORLD COURT.

In a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post appears a cogently reasoned argument by ex-Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, against a ratification of the Geneva protocol looking to the adhesion of the United States to the World Court. He contends most forcibly that the senate should stand immovable upon the reservations it voted in 1927 and not be seduced into any agreement with the interpretative Root-Hurst amendments which President Hoover directed Ambassador Gibson to sign recently at Geneva.

There are few men in the United States who can be assumed as being better able to discuss this vital issue of World Court adhesion by this nation than ex-Senator Pepper. He is nationally known as a most accomplished constitutional and international lawyer and as a statesman who approved his wisdom during his service in the senate, which covered the period of the World Court protocol discussion. His showing as to how adhesion to the World Court without the senate's fifth reservation would intrigue us with the League of Nations, reverse our heretofore fixed policy of non-entanglement with European political questions, and possibly involve us in military adventures, either self-defensive or by moral obligation to World Court opinions, seems irrefutable.

The temper of the American people is being demonstrated by many agencies and recurring incidents, so that the essay of Mr. Pepper will obtain sympathetic responses from many sources and doubtless be received with ardor by a majority of the senators to whom President Hoover may sometime in the future submit the so-called amended World Court protocol.

While in the senate Mr. Pepper voted for the reservations that body adopted as necessary to prevent the court from rendering opinions to the League of Nations upon questions in which we have, or claim, an interest, without our consent. He has not changed his attitude further than to reject the Root-Hurst formula as a substitute for the senate fifth reservation to the effect above explained.

Without any commitment prior to the issue being again before the senate we recommend the Pepper article as one that is particularly informative and illuminating to those interested in the important issue of our relations to the League of Nations and the World Court.

The report of the death of "John Barleycorn" matches that which was attributed to Mark Twain who denounced it as "grossly exaggerated."

The South Carolina legislature has adjourned while ours is about to be returned. To which should sympathy be expressed?

This is "Clean Up Week" everywhere except in congress. As to it there is no modern Hercules in sight.

Every now and then Senator Borah is reported as making up his mind. It seems as hard to make up as a country feather bed.

The next republican primary cock-fight comes May 20 in Pennsylvania, with Shawlneck Jim and Shanghai Joe in the pit.

Congress wants to raise its salaries again. Well, the people are used to the high cost of congressmen.

Look at Ruth Hanna McCormick and then talk about the "weaker sex"!

Colleen Moore, not to be left out of her class, is to sue for a divorce and collect more matrimony.

What we want in Atlanta is a postoffice building that will compare with our fair city.

Hoover has been presented with a medal as a premier engineer. The medal is gold—not leather.

We'd rather be William Fox than to be president. Fox's salary is half a million a year.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

A Stinging Indictment of Church Dictation in American Politics.

It is not pleasant or profitable at any time to perpetuate a feud, personal, or clannish, or social, or political. But it is profitable for instruction, for warning, and for reproof to perpetuate any salient history of the times that can neither be obliterated or forgotten.

An instance in point comes to the review table in the form of a volume of 320 large pages, from the pen and memorabilia of Rev. Dr. Rembert Gilman Smith, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, at Washington, Ga.

This meticulously composed and pungent book is copiously entitled: "Politics in a Protestant Church: Memoirs of the War on Governor Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic Party and the Roman Catholic Church, led by Bishops James Cannon, Jr., J. M. Moore, E. D. Mouzon and H. M. DuBose, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—the Four Horsemen of the Political Apocalypse of 1928."

* * * *

Events Made the Book Necessary.

Viewed from the angles of prudence and Christian charity one is warranted to regret that the publication of this particular record was made necessary by a congeries of events that added to make both ecclesiastical and national history.

The book is a serious and documented story of how certain leaders of a great and powerful church organization with astonishing success committed it to political alliance with and support of a political party, theretofore alien to its membership, in the presidential campaign of 1928.

That was a startling innovation. The historic precedents in the church were all against it. The theorem of its polity had always been that of strict separation of church and state, each to operate in its own appointed sphere, and those spheres not to interlock. The functions of the two organisms were not to intermix.

As between them there was to obtain a full submission to the counsel of Christ to "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things which are God's." That rule had been almost sacredly observed by the church for over four-score years.

* * * *

A New Occasion and Its Theory.

It was when the evangelical churches of the United States entered into an organized war against the immoral, irreligious, and dominant liquor power of the states and nation that a new theory of church obligation came into play. The Anti-Saloon League of America was formed and adopted the sub-title of "The Church in Action Against the Saloon."

That was all right enough, both in morals and civic righteousness, and would be all right yet if the liquor-prohibitionists had held faithfully to the nonpartisan program it started with and with which it was winning a progressive victory over the organized and corrupt liquor trade of the nation.

But their successes inflamed the minds of the leaders who were almost entirely churchmen and led them to a program of constitutional teetotal prohibition. That objective could obviously only be attained through political action. Hence the frank and bold entry of the Anti-Saloon League and its allies into national politics, the purpose being to control congress, submit the prohibition amendment and elect majority in the state legislatures pledged to its ratification. In that political adventure the prohibitionists won a phenomenal victory.

* * * *

Then Came a New Tug of War.

On the ratification of the eighteenth amendment almost every one, including the old liquor element, thought the war was over and done. But it soon developed that voting that the nation should be "dry" and enforcing the dry laws were things amazingly different. Then came a new tug of war between the friends of prohibition enforcement and the appallingly big army of liquor addicts and the law-breakers who found enormous profits in supplying them.

Hence the deplorable liquor conditions which now prevail in practically all parts of the nation. The country is infested by an innumerable and uncontrollable army of rum-runners, bootleggers and local speakeasies and their countless customers.

That condition has led to formidable undertakings to secure the repeal of prohibition, or, at least, convenient modifications of its drastic terms. And that again led to the capture of the democratic national convention at Houston in 1928 and the nomination for president of Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, an outspoken advocate of the modification of the existing prohibition policy of the nation.

* * * *

On Which Side Lay Loyalty?

So the national campaign was set with Hoover, the republican, as a reputed dry and Smith, the democrat, as a confessed wet. The question instantly confronted every democratic prohibitionist: "Under which flag, Bezonian?"

The churchmen prohibitionists proclaimed it an issue of conscience and religious duty to fight for the defeat of Smith, and that meant, of course, to support and vote for Hoover as the means of upholding and preserving the national prohibition policy.

Without reference to what happened elsewhere, consider what happened here in the south and especially in the southern branch of Methodism—for that is what the book under review deals with.

"The Four Horsemen" pictured graphically on the jacket of the book—Bishops Cannon, Moore, Mouzon and DuBose—took command of the church anti-Smith zealots. They made bitter war on the democratic ticket because of Smith, opposing him because he was wet and a Roman Catholic in religion. They preached a holy crusade against the party because of its candidate, helped six southern normally democratic states to go republican, and sowed political hate and feudism throughout the south.

* * * *

A Manly Man and Martyr.

Against that bishop-led crusade Dr. Rembert G. Smith, staunch churchman, prohibitionist and democrat, uttered his strenuous protests. He stood for the abstention of the church from partisan politics, for the constitutional freedom of every American from attack and persecution because of his religion, and for the loyalty of southern men and women to the democratic party which had rescued their states from military tyranny and mongrel subjection.

For his opposition to ecclesiastical politics he was subjected to acrid abuse, contumely and tyrranous mistreatment by bishops and church conferences and publications. His protests were fairly made, in Christian spirit and conservative terms, but for all that he became a martyr to an un-Christian fanaticism. Now he has assembled the record and printed it in a book that is likely to prove a penetrating thorn in the flesh of his enemies and persecutors. It is a story too voluminous to be summarized here, but it is worthy to be carefully read by every one who is jealous of the purity of Christian churches and the integrity of the American doctrine of the strict separation of church and state.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Questions from Constitution readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Radio Minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

Milwaukee, Wis.

If God revealed himself mainly through men of the Jewish race, and chose a Jewish maiden for the mother of Jesus, should not these facts develop respect for the chosen race? And why, in your opinion, have there been no such divine revelations for the past two thousand years?

No one who knows the history of the Hebrew people and appreciates the significance of their contribution to the religious life of mankind can have anything but profound respect for that great race. This does not mean that we have to approve everything they have done as a people, or that is now done by individual Jews. Appreciation and criticism are by no means incompatible. But Christians should never forget that their faith is vitally related to the faith of Judaism, and that there are countless Christian scholars today who stress that fact. Christianity, properly understood, is the flower of Judaism, and the sooner our mutual prejudices disappear the better will it be for religion and for the world at large.

Revelation did not cease, as you seem to assume, with the New Testament. To be sure the Christian claim is that a final and complete revelation of God's character and will and of man's true destiny are found in Jesus Christ. But He Himself declared that after His death the Holy Spirit would continue to lead men onward into the sacred realities of God. Christians do not believe that any intervening revelation has superseded Jesus. But they maintain that again and again the Holy Spirit has revealed new meanings in what Jesus was and in what He said. Whether we call this a new revelation or a new insight is simply a matter of terminology.

There is another sphere of revelation besides the purely religious. God is as active today as he ever was and every new understanding of nature or fresh formulation of hitherto unknown law is a part of the revelation to men. Once we clearly apprehend this truth, science and religion will appear not as enemies but as two sides of one and the same process of revelation, in which the All-Father continually shares His life and thought with His children.

Bangor, Me.

Why is it that so many modern writers have little that is worthwhile to say about Christmas, as compared with Dickens, Washington Irving and other earlier writers.

Gilbert K. Chesterton is the best interpreter of Dickens because he is one great modern who inherits the spirit of that master. Chesterton shows how Manor Farm, at Dingley Dell, and its rustic inhabitants were made to glow and burn in the fur-symphony direction of

nace to vital joy which flamed in the heart of the Victorian novelist. The same observation holds true of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." The real beauty and blessing of the story do not lie in its mechanical plot, but in the temper of its author. The outcome converts us because it is impelled and sustained by a quality of life which too many contemporary writers either ignore or deny. Hence, the anaemic quality of their festival literature.

Dickens presupposes a God-ordained universe, in which His creature, man, can, if he will, live decently and happily. That is intended as our normal condition. It is as attainable as sleep, positive, passionate and conscious in its blessedness, and this blessedness is evoked by sacrificial love and service for others.

Washington Irving was one of the same type. His quiet, equable way of expressing Christmas sentiment is not less convincing because it is more restrained. The school of literature which Dickens and Irving represented was also honored by Thackeray's splendid genius. He chose Christmas time as the most thrilling scene in all his books—Esmond's return to Castlewood. I congratulate you on your good sense. When we seek the fine gold of Christ as literature we go to the poets and men you mention and are not disappointed.

Charlotte, N. C.

How do you account for the exaltation which Christians give to Jesus? As a student of history it seems to me to be a remarkable phenomenon.

There are three explanations of Christ and Christianity. The first is philosophical, the second is historical, the third is derived from faith in Him. Philosophers dispute about the adoration He receives. Historians cannot deny its actuality and beneficial effects, or the fact that He appeared among men. The religion related to that appearance has played a significant part in the finest developments of humanity.

The faith which puzzles you is the dearest belief of millions of the best and most intelligent men and women. Its hold on them and on past generations has never faltered. It lives in the realm of the transcendental, or if you prefer, that of the supernatural. Briefly stated, God became man in Christ. He did not achieve His own divinity as the perfect flower of the human race. That divinity was His from all eternity and was revealed in His person, teaching and works.

The name for this revelation is The Incarnation. It presupposes the inability of man to be self sufficient. He exists for help and guidance and cannot realize his destiny apart from them. They become his by union with Christ, through faith in Him and obedience to His commands.

Christians maintain that the universal desire for aid other than the human race can supply is answered by God in Christ, reconciling the sinning, suffering, longing human family to Himself. Upon this belief they rest their case and center their worship. Their actual experience supports them in so doing.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES

The Law a Schoolmaster.

Of course many of my readers will recognize my theme as a quotation from the Apostle Paul. He was discussing the very question which engages the attention of nine-tenths of the American public today; viz., What relation has law to the building of character? He agreed with the verdict which is so popular today expressed in the usual phrase, "You can not make a man good by law." Indeed, that was the crux of his whole argument. But he maintained that the law does have an educational value, and that is its contribution to the making of character.

We do need to remind ourselves that character is inside, and that conformity of conduct, even to the best laws, will not necessarily make a god man. If there is a thief inside of a man, you may keep him from coming out by putting a policeman at the door, but at heart he is still a thief. We haven't enough policemen to sentinel every soul, even if we believed that policemen could make thieves honest.

Social Legislation.

No, the function of law is quite different, but has a very definite purpose. So-called criminal laws are for the purpose of protecting society. A man may be a very bad man, with impulses to steal from, and in other ways to hurt, his neighbors, but fearing the penalties which would follow these acts he lives an orderly and harmless life. It is well to remind ourselves also, that many of these so-called criminal laws forbid acts which in themselves are not bad, but which in the ever increasingly crowded populations interfere in some way with the rights and welfare of others. For example, the raising of hogs in the country is quite a wholesome contribution to the needs of society, but in the crowded city this industry becomes a nuisance which must be forbidden. So a very large portion of our criminal laws today have grown out of changed social conditions, which demand different social customs for the protection of society.

Recognizing clearly, that while the law cannot compel men to be good, nor can it completely protect society from hurtful people, the ideal society, toward which we strive, will be composed of those who do not want to hurt other people. But even if such a Utopian dream should come true, society would not be perfect. All good people are not wise people. All of us are liable to do things with the purest intentions, which are hurtful to others. So the law may have another distinct function. It may teach people what is good and what is bad for society. This is not a moral but a social authority which it assumes.

Its Teaching Function.

The scientist does not make the laws of nature, but simply discovers those already existing, and reveals them to the world. In the truest sense legislative bodies, when they act wisely, do not make laws. They discover the nature of certain social acts and customs, and reveal them. The nature of the evil effects of these social acts is taught in the penalty attached to the prohibition. It is so often true that an act which performed by only a few people would be perfectly harmless, would be very hurtful should it become the tabit of many people. "Window shopping" is quite an innocent, and even helpful indulgence of one's curiosity; but should a shop make such a sensational display as to attract a mob sufficient to interfere with traffic, the law would have to interfere. This is too apparent for discussion, but one can readily understand how many good people, quietly and moderately drinking intoxicating beverages, without any sense of injury to others, would be ignorant of the social hurt which the manufacture of liquor is doing. The justification of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors is that it reveals to all men a great social evil which could not be revealed in the case of one man, or a few men. (I am not attempting here to argue for the wisdom or unwisdom of this particular law, but merely to call attention to the educational value of a law wisely enacted). The law is a school teacher. Whether it is to be a good, or poor, teacher will, of course, depend upon the wisdom of our legislative bodies.

It would be difficult to estimate how many people have been kept from forgery, not because they were afraid of being put in the penitentiary, but because they have been taught from childhood that the commission of forgery is so bad that society must put a forger in the penitentiary. I am trying to say that the penalty attached to criminal law is something more than a threat. It is society's definition of social significance of an act. A burglar is so dangerous to society, that in addition to defining burglary as a penitentiary offense, we declare that it may be a capital offense.

Of course we are discussing an ideal, which should be the ideal of every legislative body. Paul said, "The law has become a schoolmaster to lead us to Christ." Yes, the law should be a wise teacher, revealing to the growing youth the evil nature of certain social acts, so that he himself may rise above he compulsions of the law, and not want to do those things which are hurtful to the welfare of others.

NEW YORK SKYLINES

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

NEW YORK, April 12.—Everybody's glad to hear that William A. Brady is recovering nicely, following an operation for appendicitis, and the more serious exponents of the dance are especially gratified. Just before he went to the hospital Mr. Brady stood on the stage of his theater and defied the police to arrest him for letting a dance program be given on Sunday.

Once or twice a season one of the organizations with convictions about Sunday complains that a dance recital is being given and then the police have to make arrests because that is the law. This time Mr. Brady became interested and it looked as if there might be a showdown. He contended, and of course it's so, that Sunday after Sunday the movie and vaudeville houses put on ballets and other dancing that is more spectacular and less artistic than the dance programs against which action is taken.

Mr. Brady, in his time manager of pugilists, an actor, playwright and stage magnate, can get up more righteous indignation in defense of the theater and Sunday liberality than a dozen of his fellows can. Once the late Dr. John Roach Straton so infuriated him that he strode to the Baptist pulpit and proceeded to deny all that the celebrated fundamentalist had been saying about actors.

"The idea of picking on poor little Mary Pickford that way," he said. "I can prove that more ministers are in jail than stage folks."

Speakeasies Should Have Signs.

A confirmed dry, who really disapproves of drinking, complains that speakeasies are not well enough labeled. There ought to be a law or something, he feels, requiring the proprietor to designate a speakeasy as such, so that innocent and law-abiding people would not make a mistake.

With his wife and a six-year-old daughter this man was wandering about Brooklyn Heights on Sunday afternoon. That section is unusually well equipped with churches and it has a reserved and dignified air. Wishing to dine, the three ambled into what appeared to be a nice basement restaurant.

"Nobody stopped us and nobody questioned us," the man says. "There was no lookout and entry was free and yet at most of the tables the patrons were openly drinking wine. I didn't notice it until our dinner was on the table and then it was too late to go, but I didn't like it a bit. No father of the better sort cares to introduce his daughter to a speakeasy at the age of 6."

Making New York Grow Right.

The average citizen is bound to be puzzled when he reads statements by city planning experts here and then in the same newspaper reads of plans for higher buildings in congested areas. He can't reconcile the talk of zones and metropolitan unity with the enormous building excavations now found at Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets, on Fifth avenue.

What's the use of all this elaborate planning, he wonders, if a new haphazard city rises even before any "regional plan" can be officially adopted? Well, it is the necessity for some control that causes George B. Ford, general director of the Regional Plan Association, to advocate a bill now in the New York state legislature for an official city planning board.

He is the American engineer whom the French government engaged to supervise the rebuilding of war-shattered Rheims, Verdun, Lens and Arras. He points out that in 50 years Chicago wasted $100,000,000 on improvements removed in a short time. He has advised more than 30 American cities along this line. Bad judgment in locating railway stations particularly annoys him.

The Census in New York.

In this most populous city the federal census will be most inaccurate, and the supervisors freely say so. Enumerators are quitting in numbers because they can't find anybody at home and have made so many visits that the pay is not worth while. They have left blanks to be filled in and the tenants have neglected them.

Enumerators, interpreters and police have failed to get the necessary information in some cases. While the residents in suburban towns resent the fact that gossiping neighbors are asking the questions, city enumerators are fretting because those living in tenements know nothing whatever about their neighbors.

In a city so large it is hard to get good enumerators. Some are inefficient and others are careless. People complain that the enumerators have gained from the servants what information they could and have departed, saying that they would make up the rest of it themselves.

The Peculiar Police.

Grover Whalen is police commissioner and as such he is well known around town, so now 500 businessmen, including Rockefeller, Morgan, Astor and Baker, 'tis said, are to give a testimonial dinner and tell of his mighty deeds. Well and good, yet history may assign a higher place to one Mike Whalen, a police sergeant. Recently he gave a birthday party for his mother-in-law.

Yes, the police have many eccentricities and hobbies. On Staten Island, across the bay, Deputy Chief Inspector Murphy collects rocks and pebbles. He goes in for geology in an amateur way and accepts all kinds of stones, labels them, places them in cases and talks about them.

Lieutenant Dick Pierce, at the Arsenal station, Central Park, is said to use up quite a fraction of his salary in buying peanuts for monkeys, beefsteak for lions and tin cans for goats. The park menagerie is right behind his station.

Evidence that space is getting so precious that apartment house dwellers must sit on the stove is seen in an offering of one of the stores. It is, in fact, a gas stove disguised as a piece of furniture. The treatment is modernistic. The stove has a dull black finish and corrugated surface and is trimmed in red enamel. Burners are inside.

Every so often the city editors here have to call a halt on "journalism." Reporters take on spats and walking sticks and get to looking so smart and distinguished that to send them out on police stories and the like almost seems sacrilege. One city editor recently gave a look about the office, observed the number of walking sticks and the general trained-seal look of the staff and remarked:

"We need a couple of old-fashioned reporters. There's nobody on the premises that I'd have nerve enough to send out to cover a fire, unless the Woolworth building were burning."

Nature's Charms

Afar, I gaze o'er verdant fields,
Admiring nature's charming gown,
And think that people never can
E'er find such beauty in the town.
Green velvet carpets spread o'er fields,
And all the trees are clad in green;
While 'neath their fool, protecting shade,
The sweetest love scenes oft are seen.

While, in the branches up above,
The birds will sing of joy they feel,
The butterflies, too, fly around,
To see that nature's charms are real;
While bees are sipping honey, sweet,
From sweetest flowers now in bloom,
Together, nature's charms all join
To drive away all life's sad gloom.

So when you, sad at heart, may feel,
Come out into the country lanes,
With nature, sweet communion, hold,
Till joy again, your heart regains.
Let babbling brooks, your sorrows take;
Or tell them to the stately trees;
They may be wafted far away
By nature's little summer breeze.

Georgia's 1930 Master Farmer Contest

BY DR. ANDREW M. SOULE,
President Georgia State College of Agriculture and the Mechanical Arts, Athens, Ga.

Initial steps looking toward the selection of the third group of master farmers in Georgia have already been taken by the Georgia State College of Agriculture in co-operation with The Progressive Farmer. According to Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the college, county committees throughout the state, with the assistance of the county agents, are making the necessary studies of the operations of different farmers within the counties to enable the committee to place in nomination the best county prospect in the competition.

The field service, in so far as the Georgia State College of Agriculture is concerned, will be in the hands of Professor J. G. Oliver, assistant director of extension and state agent, while Professor W. C. Lassetter will represent The Progressive Farmer.

The Georgia State College of Agriculture through the executive action of its board of trustees some three years ago, determined that every other year special effort would be expended in giving recognition to farmers throughout the state who have achieved success in their farming business. Upon those selected by their neighbors for this distinction, the college authorities have arranged to confer a certificate of merit at the convocation exercises in connection with Farmers' Week conference held at the Georgia State College of Agriculture each year in January.

Distinct Honor.

In view of the several requirements for measuring the abilities and accomplishments before one is eligible to receive one of these certificates of merit, it is an honor that any farmer might feel a just pride in handing on to posterity. Farmers thus recognized are men who have risen to the surface in rural affairs and have successfully maintained themselves in positions of leadership and trust. They are therefore entitled to as much approbation and reward for the contributions they have made toward our economic progress as those who have achieved something of constructive worth in any other avocation. The institution feels itself privileged and honored in being permitted to bestow recognition of this type upon outstanding leaders of farming.

Thus far, 24 Georgia farmers have been awarded this distinction as follows:

In 1927—J. E. Davidson, Peach county; J. W. Allgood, Cobb county; John R. McElmurray, Richmond county; H. E. Morgan, Haralson county; F. C. Newton, Morgan county; C. H. Ellis, Wayne county; W. J. Mathis, Terrell county; C. P. Bulloch, Meriwether county; S. W. Brown, Turner county; W. H. Smith, Bulloch county.

In 1928—H. R. Staight, Habersham county; W. C. Hillhouse, Burke county; R. P. Burson, Walton county; James L. Kelley, Washington county; Fred W. Schroer, Lowndes county; U. G. B. Hogan, Laurens county; W. W. Tabor, Peach county; George T. Deriso, Sumter county; W. P. Bryan, Tift county; C. J. Ross, Fulton county; Ben L. Redwine, Coweta county; J. H. Shackelford, Pike county.

Outstanding Leaders.

These are outstanding leaders in their respective communities and take a keen interest in all matters pertaining to the public welfare. Their methods of farming have been such as to enable them to satisfactorily weather the adverse conditions which have prevailed in recent years. Their success in making their farms self-sustaining are worthy of emulation.

The people of Georgia as a whole are proud to recognize the accomplishments of these master farmers. It is quite evident, therefore, that those so fortunate as to be selected in the 1930 group will have achieved something in the way of an outstanding service to the cause and so add to the luster and glory of the names of those already enrolled in this agricultural legion of honor.

Cashier Reeves Says No Excuse for Status Of State's Finances

Editor Constitution: A rumor has gained currency in north Georgia, among us mountaineers, that the Georgia legislature and some Georgia officeholders are somewhat peeved at criticisms leveled at them by the people generally. I wish to discuss this very delicate situation just a little in an effort to bring the said legislature and officeholders to a state of "mutual understanding" with the voters who elect them and the taxpayers who pay them.

The Georgia legislature belongs to the people. It is their piece of precious property. The men elected to serve in that august body are the representatives of the people. The officeholders are the servants of the people, and the money they handle belongs to the people, to be spent efficiently and economically for the public welfare. The people do not elect legislators to create debts the state can't pay, and make promises that can't be fulfilled. The people did not create a legislative department of the state to bring about financial deficits and then increase taxes to wipe out thes deficits; and keep up this kind of perpetual, see-saw motion until the fiscal department of the state should face bankruptcy. It is a disregard of the will of the people that has brought criticism on the legislature and officeholders. Since there seems to be a disposition among legislators and officeholders to resent this criticism, the voters and taxpayers feel about like the late Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, felt when he thus delivered himself:

"Things have come to a h—ll of a pass,
When a man can't wallop his own jackass."

Our public servants are now getting busy, that a campaign is on, and are telling the people that Georgia is not as bad in debt as some other states. I fail to see how they are going to pay off the old vets, the school teachers, and the university and its branches, with this kind of thunder. While this comparison to some extent mollifies the people on account of their pride in their state, it is believed by every taxpayer from Nickajack to Tybee that conditions in Georgia would have been just as bad if General Robert Toombs had not securely locked the flood-gates with unbreakable padlocks and carried the keys into eternity with him.

To have to admit that there is a deficit of more than $4,000,000 in Georgia finances is no credit to the state. To have it published to the world that our government has made promises and contracts to pay, which can't be met with good money, puts the state in the position of being a bad moral and business risk. That the governor has accomplished financial wonders is to his credit. But to say that the state has millions of dollars of revenue-producing property and at the same time a deficit of $4,000,000 in current assets, doesn't relieve the Georgia legislature of having overridden the will of a democratic majority. To say that this same legislative body didn't co-operate with the governor because he criticized it, puts legislators in the unpatriotic position of taking care of their feelings first and the state afterward. There is no excuse to be made for the present plight of Georgia finances. The responsibility for it rests on the Georgia legislature.

A Modern Product

BY ERNEST NEAL.

In ye olden time ye old maid aunts
Ne'er panted for bootleg and pants.
Demure at home, they homely sat,
Content with rocking chair and cat.
Saintly, prude and prim were they—
Alas! Alas! They've passed away.

The bachelor girl is everywhere,
With mannish voice and masculine air,
She pants for pants and cigarettes
And rants and rants with suffragrettes.

"He sings to the world, and she to the nest;
In the nice ear of nature which sings best."
When Lowell wrote those catchy words
He had in mind the women and birds
That God sent down from Eden's shade,
And not the goose the times have made.

'Most all the fowls none of the rest,
Would compel the male to set on the nest,
And he would not while his wife runs loose,
Were he not, himself, a son-of-a-goose.

The Cosmopolite

BY ROSE PATTERSON,
Staff Correspondent of The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

PARIS, April 12.—The answer to "when is a hairdresser not a hairdresser?" so far as Paris is concerned, runs approximately as follows: "When he's a rate collector, a street sweeper, a museum attendant, a postman or a policeman."

The city is, in fact, overrun with hairdressers, for the simple reason that every Pierre, Jacques and Henri seems to have turned barber in his offtime. All the week he sweeps, collects, attends or otherwise pursues his regular calling, but at the weekend the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of lather and a little additional income.

This wielding of the brush and the scissors by all and sundry has caused alarm and indignation among the professional figaros and they are calling loudly and insistently for the shoemaker to stick officially to his last.

If half the homes of Paris are
Shampoo saloons on Sunday,
And every churl can snip and curl,
How shall we do on Monday?

cry, in effect, the barbers proper.

It may be startling to many people to learn that hairdressing and shaving are so popular a "second" calling, but it doesn't surprise a Parisian to hear that countless workers are jacks of at least two trades. Many a medical student helps along his good work by the tips he gets as a restaurant waiter in the evenings and innumerable poorly paid government clerks go straight from what appears to be the end of a day's work to get busy again in another place. From the higher functionaire, who is an author in his spare time, to the bank messenger, who polishes floors at night, tout Paris has its "other job." It is hard for the professionals on whose preserves they ponch, but the poachers are often so poor that one cannot help sympathizing and hoping that their change of work is as good as play.

However, if they will all go a-shaving there is sure to be trouble. In fact there is trouble.

A very gallant gentleman it was who possessed the famous chateau of Dampierre (in the Aube district) at the time of the French revolution. His castle has been acquired by a wealthy American. It is to be demolished and built up again stone by stone in the New World.

You will remember how Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette were stopped at Variennes, within a few miles of safety, on their flight from Paris to the frontier, and how they recompensed their terrible journey back again in a stifling coach whose atmosphere was rendered more feverish than the hot summer. On that awful ride they were met, at a little village, by this M. De Dampierre, who bowed as courteously and tranquilly as though no one but their royal highnesses were there to see him and to receive his offers of refreshment and hospitality. But there were indeed other terrible eyes [illegible] and ears to hear and his courtesies were scarcely proffered ere he was butchered.

Rome: "Talkies" Invade Italy.

The "talkie" wave is only lapping very gently round the shores of Italy so far, because the Italians have not made "talkies" themselves yet and Mussolini has prohibited the use of them in any foreign language.

The only talking films that do exist are a few early American ones that got in before Mussolini banned them. However, an Italian company proposes getting really busy with the new art and hopes to put forth its first flowers before the summer is over.

But the present state of affairs makes it all the more necessary for the foreign settler to perfect his Italian. And the settlers grow apace. To have a flat in Rome is becoming as fashionable and as necessary as to have one in Paris. Lady D'Abernon receives many distinguished English and foreign residents in hers and other well-known women want to emulate her in their own pied-a-terre in the city of cities.

The delights of entertaining in Rome, says one such English lady, are legion because society is much less scattered than it is in London. You meet the same interesting people again and again and make real friends rather than mere acquaintances.

Zurich: Tell Legends Now Accessible to All.

We shall all be able to read about William Tell now lots and lots about him; because the archives of Schwyz, where all the most important documents about the legend were to be found, have been made accessible to the public by their removal to one of the splendid old patriarchal houses.

These archives have been lodged for five hundred years in a small, strong tower, which survived the fire that once destroyed the whole village. Until recently you had to be a very privileged person if you were to see the jealously guarded parchments and the old torn flags, but this season you will only need to be an interested visitor.

The archives also contain the documents covering the foundation of the federation as well as later Swiss history.

Berlin: Beautifying Leagues Increase.

The city is making its spring toilet and getting ready for bright times, with a great deal of open-air exercise and enjoyment.

There is a real need for the "verboten" sign so far as the Berliner himself is concerned and the authors of the many new ideas in statuary-grouping and playground-planning in the public gardens will still be liberal in their use of it.

It is the lament of many that the 24 old ladies who are constantly engaged in picking up the orange peel and papers in the Tiergarten cannot have their counterparts in the Grunewald, whose pine woods are far too full of bottles and scraps after a fine Sunday.

The tourist traffic leagues are welcoming ideas architectural and otherwise and there are as well those enterprising beautifying leagues that grow from individual enthusiasm. The Berliner who is fired with a great idea for a public rose garden, a memorial, a seat opposite a fine view or some nesting boxes for birds in the city's trees collects a few friends about him, wins their support and founds one of these leagues ("Verschonerungs-Verein") and then the league sees to it that its great idea is made a party political matter for the local town council. Each borough is responsible for its own expenses as regards public gardens.

Charlottenberg is finishing its first popular tennis court complete with trainer. Here the youth of Berlin that has been keeping off the grass all the winter, as well as once or twice a week all the year round to allow it to recover, will be able to hire balls and racquets for sixpence a game. There will be a loudspeaker to entertain the school children who will also find new swimming baths and playgrounds ready for them.

Vienna: The Untieable Tie.

A lost collar-stud has been the food of comedy from times long past, but a tie that will not come undone is dramatic.

People walking in the Einiedlergasse the other day were alarmed to see a man gestulating wildly at an open window and struggling frantically with his collar. Before their horrified gaze he made as if to hurl himself from the window onto the street.

Pushing through the awe-stricken onlookers a policeman dashed into the house, up the stairs and was just in time to catch the man by the leg before he crashed to the ground.

"You see I couldn't undo my tie," the young man, a chauffeur, explained a little later. "So I lost my temper and determined to kill myself.

Madrid: Football Grows—Bull Fighting Wanes.

They are inaugurating this month the largest arena for bull fights in Spain. It is in Moorish style and will seat 25,000 spectators. They have been building it for 13 years.

When the provincial authorities were inspecting it the other day two teams of bull fighters were having a game of football in the stadium near the new arena with a hundred thousand spectators and this fact inspired some of the newspapers to prophesy that bull fighting has had its day.

Football has been growing in popularity in Spain for some years past and bull fighters enjoy the game very much, both as spectators and players.

Moscow: Russians Reform Calendar.

A double date will be required for documents setn abroad if the government accepts the plan of a commission appointed to work out a new calendar. The new calendar has been considered necessary in order to conform to the new continuous working [illegible] first day of the year, under this p[illegible]s November 7 and the year is d[illegible]d into 12 30-day months, each ha[illegible] six five-day weeks and five rev[illegible]tionary holidays, completing a tot[illegible] of 365 days.

T[illegible]e will thus be counted from the date of the bolshevik revolution.

The old names of days are retained in the scheme, except Saturday and Sunday and the letters and documents to be sent out of the country would be dated according to the old as well as the new calendar.

MUSIC CLUB TO HOLD PROGRAM WEDNESDAY

Berlioz, Saint-Saens, Franck and d'Indy Will Be Discussed.

Berlioz, Saint-Saens, Franck and d'Indy will be the subject for discussion at the next forum study program to be given by the Atlanta Music Club at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in the auditorium of the Wesley Memorial church, according to announcement of Mrs. DeLos L. Hill, chairman of the forum series.

Under the leadership of Charles Beaton, of the faculty of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, chairman for the day, a brilliant program will be presented—the seventh in a series of study programs following the textbook, "Masters of the Symphony," by Percy Goetschius.

A paper on the four French composers, Berlioz, Saint-Saens, Franck and d'Indy, and their contribution in the field of symphonic writing, prepared by Mr. Beaton and read by Mrs. Hill, will be illustrated by selections for piano, violin and string ensemble from the works of Saint-Saens and Cesar Franck, to be played by Miss Ruth Cathey, pianist; Harvey Dowling, pianist; James De La Fuente, violinist, and the ensemble class of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music under the direction of George F. Lindner.

The personnel of the ensemble class include George F. Lindner, first violin; Miss Eugenia Dozie, second violin; Miss Agnes Adams, viola; Mrs. Mildred Wharton, 'cello, and Miss Hazel Wood, pianist. The program will include the Waltz Etude for piano, by Saint-Saens, played by Harvey Dowling; introduction and Rondo Capriccioso, by Saint-Saens, for violin, played by James De La Fuente, with Miss Hazel Wood at the piano; th second movement, lento con molto, from the celebrated quintet for piano and strings by Franck, played by the ensemble class, and a brilliant number for piano and orchestra, "Wedding Cake Waltz," by Saint-Saens, played by Miss Ruth Cathey, the orchestral accompaniment being given by string ensemble.

Preceding the program Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the club, will hold a short business session beginning at 10:30 o'clock.

To non-members of the club price of admission to the program is 50 cents.

Spring Rhapsodies

BY MAYBELLE M. PORTER,
Bishop, Ga.

SPRINGTIME.

Jonquils nodding in the breeze;
Buds are bursting on the trees.

Birds with love songs in their notes,
Trilling from their tiny throats.

Farmers working in the fields,
Planting for the fall-time yields.

Grasses growing, fresh and green,
Making earth a beauteous scene.

Youths and maidens 'neath the boughs,
Plighting love's sweet, solemn vows.

Flowers blooming everywhere,
For there's Springtime in the air.

TRY TO SING.

When the skies are overcast,
And the rain is falling fast,
Try to sing!
For the sun will shine again;
Earth be brighter for the rain,
Try to sing!

If you you find your days are blue;
Full of vexing things to you,
Try to sing!
Fight off anger or a frown;
Always hold your temper down;
Try to sing!

Others like you when you're gay;
Then you scatter clouds of gray.
Try to sing!
For who likes a face all sad,
Or a moody person mad?
Try to sing!

IN LILAC TIME, SO SWEET.

Oh! The perfumed breezes blowing,
In lilac time, so sweet,
Always set my heart aglowing;
Make swift my lagging feet,
As down a wood-land path, so old,
I seek for blooming treasures bold.

And the mockingbird's clear singing,
In lilac time, so sweet,
Sets my happy thoughts awinging,
Carrying dreams, so fleet,
To lovely dells and shady glen
Where wind-blown flowers sway and bend.

I pity hearts that are so blind,
In lilac time, so sweet;
They never any beauty find
In spring days, passing fleet.
They see the earth as only sod,
And not the handiwork of God.

Should Be No Juggling Of Registration Lists

Editor Constitution: The report of the January-February grand jury calling attention to irregularities in city primaries and especially to the method of voting for certain city officials by wards only, seems to have awakened the public to some of the evils of our present primary system.

The grand jury heard sufficient testimony to convince anyone that the "numbering of ballots, which precludes a secret ballot, is obviously wrong."

Numerous city employes in testifying would state that they had worked for the city three or four years and would add "I was laid off from last June until January." These dates coincide with the June primary and the time new officials took office in January. The inference being that someone checked up their June primary vote and had these men laid off. Later the new official, on taking office, put them back.

President Women's Voters League States Its Purposes and Achievements

BY ELEANOR RAOUL,
President Atlanta League of Women Voters

Editor Constitution: It is the purpose of this article to lay before the public the methods of an organization which has been functioning for good citizenship for ten years and to show what results have been obtained so far in the city itself, leaving the county for a later discussion.

It should be kept in mind that the desire of the league is to make possible informed citizens and in no way to control votes either of its members or others. Its basis of operation is truly democratic because it shows a belief that the electorate can be trusted if it knows the facts, but it readily recognized that the public has no way of securing the real facts concerning politics. In the south we have not even two parties to keep the public informed, but if we did have we would find the same condition as everywhere else, which is that the parties give out half truths and warp the real truth to suit their own particular ends.

The league believes a new day has dawned and the public must have a source from which to secure its information, which is not partisan and has no ends to serve, other than giving facts to the people.

We have only to observe other fields of activities to know that the demand for facts separated from opinions is creeping in everywhere. It is the scientific attitude of mind and is one of the most valuable by-products of science. It is teaching a new method of thought.

League Does Not Indorse Candidates.

The league as an organization never indorses candidates, but urges its members to actively work for those of his or her choice.

But the league does have a program. It is divided into four sections—study, educational, organization and political. The very plan of formulating the political section precludes hasty action or action in the heat of aroused public opinion. The program is planned only once a year and nothing may go in the political section unless it has previously been on the study program. The question must be announced to the membership several weeks in advance of the annual meeting and then carried by two-thirds vote of those present.

It limits the political program to carefully thought out matters and so far has only touched fundamental changes in the structure of our city government and a few simple though important changes in the democratic executive committee. It is as follows:

Simplification of city government in conformity with the principles previously indorsed by the league.

Reduction of council to one small chamber voted on by city at large.

Reduction of membership of school board.

School revenue to be not less than 30 per cent of city's gross income.

Reduction of city democratic committee from 48 to 24 members.

Adoption of a rule by the city democratic committee that no primary shall be held prior to October 1.

How the Program Is Made Effective.

Questionnaires are the teeth of the league. All candidates for policy determining offices are asked questions. These questions generally pertain to the league's program but may concern questions of immediate public interest. It is not necessary for the league to indorse either side of the question asked. Its object is to give out information which it believes the public desires. It is of no consequence to the league as an organization how the people shall vote or the outcome of the election or primary. Its object is to give out information and leave the people really free as to the vote. Its service is to citizens. Under this plan immediate or spectacular results are not to be expected nor desired. It is a method to change an attitude of mind, to dignify citizenship and to exalt the profession of politics—the science of government.

What the League Has Done.

The first accomplishment of the league was to secure public sessions of the city democratic executive committee. Another was to get the committee reduced from 72 to 48 members though the league advocated 24 members only.

In 1921 the league asked the council candidates if they would vote for a modern form of city government if elected. So many were elected who answered this question favorably that the first council-manager charter campaign was precipitated in 1922. Important features of this form of government are now being agitated by the press leading people and organizations of the city. Undoubtedly the work of the league along these lines for the past eight years is no small factor in the public's reaction to the present situation. The league has had over 1,000 paid-up members for a number of years past and the figure would probably run several thousand more if all those whose memberships have lapsed were counted. The league's work is only just beginning to show in the city.

In 1927 the league raised in one day a referendum petition which forced another election on the council-manager form of government. The result of the two charter campaigns convinced most informed persons that it would be necessary to reform our registration and voting laws before any fundamental far-reaching changes could be made. Many believe the first charter really carried but was counted out.

The league was the only organization last year to protest the departure from a majority rule to a minority rule in primaries when it was decided to eliminate the run-over primary and declare elected the candidate receiving the highest number of votes. The league showed how by preferential count . . . a simple method of marking ballots . . . the run-over could be eliminated and yet the majority rule retained. The new rule went into effect and the result of it is that the politicians have only to see that three or four candidates enter the lists. They then concentrate their efforts on their candidates and control the election. Under such a rule the politicians can win elections even when a considerably larger number of voters decide to go to the polls than do now. It is a very serious situation, but not more so than a good many others in the city which can be cured only by a large informed group of citizens.

More definite and striking results have been obtained by the league in the county than in the city and they will be summarized and discussed next week.

Specialist on Hair At Keely's This Week

Miss Rubye Holleander, representative of Ogilvie Sisters, hair specialists of New York and Paris, will be in the toilet goods department of Keely Company Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday to give advice on scientific care of the hair.

MISS RUBYE HOLLEANDER.

Miss Holleander says that brushing the hair with a long-bristle brush is very important. The hair, she says, responds to treatment quicker than anything else and also shows neglect more quickly. Brushing the hair five minutes out of every 24 hours will make it beautiful, she says.

Frigidaire Sales Reach High Mark

DAYTON, Ohio, April 12.—(Special.)—All first quarter production records were broken by Frigidaire Corporation during the first three months of 1930, according to E. G. Biechler, president and general manager. More men are being employed than ever before at this time of the year, he stated.

"This increase in employment took place after the installation of a large amount of labor-saving machinery, which in itself was counted upon to take care of a normal increase in business without additions to the personnel during the first quarter," he said. "This company expects to again break all records in 1930.

"Present manufacturing activity is centered upon the household electric refrigerator. The moist air compartment, or hydrator, recently added to the line, has proved to be a very popular improvement and indications point to a still greater demand when the public becomes acquainted with the advantages it affords."

Fire Insurance Men Will Meet on Friday

Every month the insurance association has one of the leading businessmen of the city to talk along lines of vital interest to their industry. The association has doubled its membership in the past year under the leadership of Fort Adams, president, and George White, vice president and chairman of the executive committee.

Alabama Druggist Urges Change 18th Amendment

Editor Constitution: In my investigations of "Jakeralysis" I have come to conclusion that it is not caused from U. S. standard Jamaica ginger bought from reliable drug stores; but, there is an alcohol dryer sold in the paint shops, and I guess in all other towns; it is part denatured and wood alcohol and I have known many to buy that stuff and dilute it with water, which makes it a milk color solution, then filter and drink same.

There is not enough wood alcohol in it to cause blindness or coagulation of the blood and death, but there is enough to produce loss of power of the voluntary motion by thickening of the nerve substance, thus producing partial paralysis.

Now my opinion is that the U. S. fluid extract of ginger is used, about eight ounces to the gallon of paint alcohol, to make the tincture of ginger and sold by unscrupulous persons as "Jake," but such persons are only one class out of the thousands of other law breakers the 18th amendment has made. It prohibits but there is no "prohibition." Our penitentiaries and asylums are full and our city and county highways have all they need to feed.

Every plan that has some hope of betterment should be studied.

I know what I am speaking about for I have been in the drug business for 38 years and I am positive the prohibition law is a failure.

For the first two years after it went into effect the farmers raised more ribbon cane and sorghum because they could sell all the syrup they made to make whisky, but now they cannot get help to work their farms at a reasonable wage price, for the farm laboring class can buy sugar and blackstrap grown in Cuba and make more and easier money by making whisky.

The 18th amendment must be changed.

JACK GILBERT FACES FINAL CHANCE TO REGAIN GLORY

New Stallings Scenario May Save Slipping Star

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 12.—In a very short time Jack Gilbert will begin his third talking picture.

It will be his great offensive to regain his foothold with the public which once crowned him the king who could do no wrong. The story selection has brought gray hairs to the heads of executives. It has been the vital point on this lot these many weeks.

Jack Gilbert's great offensive will be in the guise of an American sailorman. A brawny he-man of the salty seas with all the buoyant, zestful ways peculiar to the star. Backgrounded by the finest sea stuff the camera can take and replete with vital and novel material.

Lawrence Stallings, creator of Jack Gilbert's greatest success, "The Big Parade," will do the story. Few tales written in Hollywood have had the responsibility this one carries. Many scripts have been intended to launch a new star. That's easy. A certain set of circumstances plus a certain background and full of showy dramatic material, is bound to go off well.

Tremendous Task.

But this tale must save a slipping career. And what a task that is!

On the eve of its production, Jack Gilbert, weary of all the tiresome things that have been said for and against him, is utterly silent as to his hopes for it. His first talkie has never been released. A version of "Redemption" with dialog, it lies in a tin can, as expensive a celluloid pudding as ever decorated the shelves of Hollywood's studio morgues.

His second venture, a Molnar comedy, got laughs at the wrong time. That is the most fatal thing that can happen in Hollywood—or elsewhere. Just why the audiences reacted this way to the Gilbert-Molnar vehicle is difficult to tell.

A disinterested observer—or rather an interested but strictly impartial observer—might point out some possible reasons. This is not a defense of Jack Gilbert, the public will be the final judge of his talkie merits, it is an analysis of the peculiar series of circumstances which have made his throne a sort of Damocles business.

Not Enthusiastic.

The first talkie which revealed the king of silents to the world of talkiegoers, was not regarded by Gilbert as such a triumph during the days when he was making it. Mind you, it was his second talkie. He had already gone through the tedious days and weeks of one story which was not going to be released. He had grave doubts of the Molnar.

But producers called him into the inner sanctum after the picture had been cut and enthusiastically told him that they had the record-breaking success of all time. Naturally this picked him up.

When men who have put their money into a venture are enthusiastic about that venture they may well inculcate some interest in the breast of a chap who has drawn a big salary for making it. Jack Gilbert was the golden-haired child about his studio when "His Wonderful Night" was first finished. As returns from various cities came in, with the disheartening report of unseemly laughter in the love scenes and elsewhere, there was a diminishing of interest on the part of producers. Producers are a bit inclined to be that way.

All of this proves that the boys who spend millions making pictures really don't know so much about what they are making as they should know.

Asinine Lines.

Gilbert's opening dialogue sequence was merely a shot of a bower of roses. No sign of Jack Gilbert. But, within the bower comes Gilbert's [illegible] untrained voice, speaking the [illegible] asinine lines that perhaps have [illegible] graced a motion picture. There is something about "Oh dear lady" and "Oh fair princess" and a lot of like balderdash. We have ceased to speak thus, rhapsodically, even to our princesses. It is fair to bet that young Leeds offering his heart and hand to the Princess Xenia didn't go down on one knee. And doesn't an American audience, fed on magazine, movie-news reels, and newspaper material, know all this full well!

No player can be put in the position of having himself hidden whilst he is told to lean heavily on weak lines. That's worth a laugh any day of the year with any actor you want to pick. But studio boys getting six thousand a week or so ought to know these things before they are loosened on a public with an active sense of humor.

The studio knows Jack Gilbert's voice. It has been familiar with it through the years. It does not, therefore, seem paradoxical with this personality, to them.

The voice came as a surprise to the public. The actor should have been given every possible opportunity to divert his audience from full concentration upon his tones. He wasn't given this opportunity.

Dr. Marafioti, Manhattan voice expert who has Jack Gilbert in training at the present time, tells me that many actors have as light caliber a voice as Gilbert. He is not hampered by speech defects, by the lisp of which he is accused or other drawbacks. The tone is light in texture. His face is heavy of texture. He is a caveman type with a clubman voice. But correct stress on certain phrasings, and the sophistication in reading lines which must be acquired through strenuous work by any pantomime artist suddenly thrust into talk, will cure that.

"Make Way for a Sailor" will be the vehicle, then, for this readjustment of the Gilbert reign. A he-lad wrote it. A he-man will act in it. And the finest voice specialist in the country is betting on his success with the clubman inflection.

Georgian Offers Screen Comedy In "Loose Ankles"

Loretta Young and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Star in Broad Talkie Farce.

Loretta Young, whose sensational marriage to Grant Withers made telegraph wires hum and front pages glow recently, is co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Loose Ankles," a comedy-romance which also features Louise Fazenda, which will be shown all week, starting Monday, at Keith's Georgia theater in connection with a bill of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville.

"Loose Ankles" is a comedy riot from start to finish, with Louise Fazenda and Otis Harlan holding up the slapstick end of the comedy and the two stars indulging in various light caperings which bring many chuckles.

The story is that of an enormously wealthy young lady who, in order to keep her despised relatives from inheriting, with her, a large sum of money, determines to become involved in a scandal, thus voiding the will of the deceased uncle and sending the money to care for the cat and dog hospital.

She advertises in the paper for a "young man, attractive, willing to be compromised." Three gigolos, with a fourth boy friend, whose college education and so-called finer sensibilities, keep him from such a profession, rope him into answering the ad.

He goes to the apartment and is caught by the indignant relatives, who subsequently try to keep the scandal from the papers.

The vaudeville bill is headed by Mrs. George Primrose and her "Spirit of Minstrelsy," including many of the famous stars of the George Primrose Minstrels. Jack Major, radio and record artist, also is featured.

Comedy Rules on All Atlanta Stages for Week

The Erlanger Theater Players this week bring us the most successful comedy of the Chicago season, "Your Uncle Dudley," and a scene therefrom is shown at the upper left, above. The four gentlemen getting on in years at upper right are old-time minstrel stars who come back strong on Keith's Georgia stage in "Spirit of Minstrelsy," presented by Mrs. George Primrose. The lady in a huddle all by herself at lower left is Mabel Todd, featured player in the Fanchon and Marco "Kisses" idea on the Fox stage, while the amply gowned charmer in the oval is one of the Watson Sisters, declared the funniest act in vaudeville, who will headline at the Capitol. And, at lower right, is none other than Jimmie Hodges himself, the popular and clever leader of the musical comedy company at the Metropolitan, who give "Honeymoon Isle" as the week's stage attraction there.

S. R. O.

by Ralph T. Jones

Titles are ofttimes misleading, especially in the amusement world. How many times have you discovered some picture or play that was altogether different from anything the title would lead you to expect?

The above paragraph is by way of introduction to a remark. I don't think the playwright who selected "Your Uncle Dudley" as the name of his stage creation was exactly the wisest man in the world.

After seeing a rehearsal of the comedy, which the Erlanger Theater Players are to give us next week, I really believe it is the funniest and certainly the most hilariously 'human' thing this so delightful production company of ours has yet given us.

And the title, somehow, didn't arouse tremendous enthusiasm in my breast, or wherever the enthusiasm generates, when I first heard it, and before I had seen the play. It sounded rather more like the name for a newspaper comic strip than the name of a play.

Not that it doesn't fit. But it isn't the best "box office" title that could have been chosen. And, to point the moral, you'll fool yourself sadly if you stay away from the Erlanger this week.

Another piece of advice for the week. Pay a visit to the Fox. "Blaze o' Glory" is a thrilling thing, packed with drama and punch. You'll hang onto the edge plush of your seat almost all the way through. It doesn't matter that Eddie Dowling is the featured player. It would have been a corking good picture with any competent performer in the leading role.

Manager Mike Minday at Loew's Grand is the happiest manager in Atlanta today. He set all sorts of new records last week with "Hallelujah" and, to cap the climax, has had to keep the picture over a second week just to meet an overwhelming popular demand.

* * *

Speaking of pictures—and the local legitimate stage—I note that Universal is going to make a feature talkie out of "Little Accident," the delicious stage comedy that the Erlanger Theater Players presented the second week of their stay at the Erlanger.

There is a picture coming to the Paramount in two or three weeks that you all should make a date to see right now. It is "Puttin' on the Ritz," with Harry Richman starred. Richman is good, but as in "Blaze O'Glory," it is the picture itself, and not the star, that is the supreme attraction.

Received many letters after my invitation to all Atlanta theater-goers to write in and comment upon amusement affairs in Atlanta. Some of them were awfully good and some were awfully interesting. For different reason. Answers to a few of the more important ones will be found at the end of this column.

In the meantime, send in as many as you like—and I'll answer as many as I can.

* * *

Confidentially, I'm working out a scheme to give some of this column's correspondents occasional free tickets to the theaters of the city. Some kind of a contest, it'll be. Send in your letters and watch for the big prize contest announcement. Attaboy!

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. A., Atlanta—Universal has changed the title of "La Marseillaise" to "Captain of the Guard." John Boles and Laura La Plante featured. It will be shown at the Capitol in a few weeks. "Honky Tonk" was rejected by a couple of Atlanta theater managers as undesirable.

Joe W., Atlanta—"A Lady to Love" is Vilma Banky's first talking feature. She did a little sound once before, but not enough to mention.

N. W. L., Atlanta—Your letter, with its suggestion, has been sent to Manager Newton of the Fox theater.

Alice White Hit As "Dixie Dugan" At Paramount

"Show Girl in Hollywood" Is Fast Moving Comedy of Studio Life.

Paramount theater patrons during the coming week are to be conducted through the studios at Hollywood by none other than "Dixie Dugan," as portrayed by Alice White, while she capers through 70 minutes of fast comedy, in J. P. McEvoy's best seller, "Show Girl in Hollywood."

"Showgirl in Hollywood" in its printed form, was one of the most widely read "behind-the-scenes" tales and in the all-talking picture version critics have hailed it as one of the season's best.

Alice White, as Dixie Dugan, showgirl and ambitious Hollywood extra, does a corking good job in her portrayal of a role that is very nearly an exact picture of her own efforts to "crash" the silver sheet. Alice, you may recall, went out to Hollywood as a stenographer, but wound up a few short months later as a dazzling star. Since rating the star's appellation Alice has done several mighty fine jobs but in "Show Girl in Hollywood" she is said to outdo all previous efforts. In this picture Alice sings several real hits, among them being "I've Got My Eye on You," "Hollywood" and "Hang on to a Rainbow."

In turning Hollywood and the studios topsy turvy in this fast moving laugh fest, Alice is supported by a cast including such stars as Jack Mulhall, Ford Sterling, Blanche Sweet and John Miljan.

Other featurettes on the new bill which opens with a midnight performance tonight are "Oh Darling," said to be a corking good farce comedy featuring Nancy DeVore and Sydney Brace and a new cartoon comedy labeled "Hot Dawg."

A Grantland Rice sportlight, "Interesting Tails," is made up of many difficult shots of educated canine hunters which has received the praise of dog lovers all over the country.

The current Paramount sound news completes the new program.

The slighest noise registers in the talkies. One soft job in the studios is trying chairs for squeaks.

The "It" credited to screen queens sometimes turns out to be only "It."

Loew Managers To Meet In Cleveland This Week

Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's Capitol theater, left Atlanta late Saturday for Cleveland, Ohio, where he will attend the annual convention of Loew theater managers and executives for the south and the midwest.

Opening on Wednesday, a strictly business gathering is promised at Cleveland, with many important matters of policy and other subjects relative to theater management scheduled for discussion.

The sessions will open at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, at the Statler hotel, with Joseph Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., delivering the opening address.

Ed A. Schiller, vice president, and a former citizen of Atlanta, will preside at the sessions. J. R. Vogel, assistant to Mr. Schiller as general manager of theaters, will also take a prominent part in the program, as well as Lionel H. Keene, Loew's southern division representative, who makes his headquarters in Atlanta.

The convention is expected to continue for three or four days and, because of the importance of the programmed discussions, the entire time will be devoted to hard and serious work, advices from the home office assert.

'Your Uncle Dudley' Most Human Of Season's Plays, at Erlanger

Manager Lewis Haase announced, prior to the opening rehearsals for "Your Uncle Dudley," that in this new comedy the Erlanger Theater Players had the finest opportunity for a perfect production and for a laugh-provoking offering of any they have yet enjoyed at the Erlanger theater.

Remembering "Let Us Be Gay," "Little Accident" and "Bachelor Father," this statement was at first taken with the proverbial modicum of salt. But now, after seeing "Your Uncle Dudley" in rehearsal, apologies are offered Mr. Haase and the concession is publicly made that, once again, he is right.

"Your Uncle Dudley" is the most human play to come from the big producing centers in months. It was written by Bertrand Robinson and Howard Lindsay, the same pair who created "Tommy." And they seem to have even outdone their earlier success.

"Your Uncle Dudley" is so natural, so spontaneous, that the audiences who see it will have the feeling that they are not in a theater, but that they are sitting in a typical nice American home, enjoying the humor, the tribulations and the successes of a typical, nice American family.

The plot deals with the means employed by "Uncle Dudley," the kindly, easy bachelor who has supported his mother, his widowed sister and her two children ever since he attained manhood, to free himself from the domination of said widowed sister. He is aided in his efforts by this mother, the most hilarious character of the stage year. Incidentally, this role will be taken Monday by Melba Palmer, and if you saw her as Mrs. Boucicault in "Let Us Be Gay" you don't need telling just how good she is in such a character part.

Butler Hixon, Helen Louise Lewis, Roy Elkins, Caroline West, Jean Arden, Frank Joyner, Arthur Nicholson and the rest of Atlanta's popular Players' organization have parts that fit them to perfection, and Director Harry McKee has created a stage setting—the same set is used throughout the three acts—that outdoes his greatest efforts hitherto.

Any Atlantans who have given themselves and their money to civic activities, to drives and to campaigns of various sorts—and what Atlantan hasn't?—should see this comedy without fail. For "Uncle Dudley" is the leading citizen of his town, constantly being called upon to "put across" some new civic undertaking and receiving in return the glory of praise, loving cups and kind words generally.

Grand Keeps 'Hallelujah,' Epic Of Negro Life, Another Week

There was nothing else today, after Loew's Grand had been crowded to capacity practically all last week.

Manager Mike Minday persuaded the head office to leave "Hallelujah" with him for another week. So the great talking and singing epic picture of negro life in the south, will be at the Grand all this week, just for the benefit of the few who couldn't get there to see it last week and for the thousands who want to see it a second time.

Manager Minday at the Grand made picture theater history for the south, last week, and he is headed to make some more during the next six days. Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer, producers of "Hallelujah," had been actually boasting about the records made by this picture in various cities of the south, before it came to Atanta.

For instance, in Memphis, in the regular first run Loew house there, a house record was set—partly because of the fact that many of the scenes in "Hallelujah" were shot near Memphis and there was a lot of local interest thereby.

Then in Dallas another first run theater broke its house record. So, the MGM people said Atlanta would probably like the picture but, as for outdoing the other southern cities—well, that would be too much to expect.

All Manager Minday did last week was to break any previous week's record for the Grand, accomodated more than a thousand more patrons for the week than either Memphis or Dallas did and became the only theater manager in the south keeping the picture for a second week after having actually booked in other attractions for his theater.

Its quite some achievment and if Atlantans flock to the Grand even at half the rate, this week, that they did last week, there'll probably be an alltime record for many years to come hung up there before next Saturday night.

Palace Has Program Of Hits for Week

On Monday and Tuesday Charles (Buddy) Rogers, in his daring romantic melodrama, "Half Way to Heaven," will be seen at the Palace theater, at Euclid and Moreland avenues. Jean Arthur, playing the feminine role, proves to be no novice at loving, and Paul Lucas depicts the part of a villain.

On Wednesday Helen Kane, singing in her typical baby-voiced style in "Pointed Heels," scores a brilliant success. Skeets Gallagher, Fay Wray and William Powell, of "Philo Vance" fame, are also in the cast.

Thursday and Friday Betty Compson, in "Street Girl," her first radio dialog picture, which proves to be one of the most intriguing stories ever written.

For Saturday "Oh, Yeah," the laugh-provoking comedy-drama with Robert Armstrong and James Gleason, will be seen. This story of two "boomer" brakemen, has one of the most interesting climaxes ever witnessed.

All Sorts of Diamonds on Atlanta Screens

Diamonds for ladies and diamonds for baseball fans compete on the talking screens of Atlanta this week. At the upper left a couple of famous baseball players discuss prospects in a scene from "They Learned About Women," baseball drama starring Van and Schenck at the Capitol. The reluctant lady at upper right is Betty Compson, while the gentleman is Ferd Schumann-Heink, two players in "Blaze O' Glory," at the Fox, and starring Eddie Dowling. The lady at the left in the oval is in "Loose Ankles," a high temperature singing and dancing opus coming to Keith's Georgia. The peacock girl in lower center is Alice White, who stars at the Paramount in "Show Girl in Hollywood." And, at lower right, Richard Dix lays down the law to his lady friend in "Lovin' the Ladies," comedy romance that brings him to the Metropolitan screen.

Ball Players And Song Hits In Capitol Film

Van and Schenck Star in Fast Moving Musical Romance of Diamond.

With an even half score of new song hits and two full baseball teams composed of famous veterans of the diamond and new players now making big league history, "The Learned About Women," Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer's latest talking screen offering, should attract all varieties of picture fans to the Capitol this week.

Added to these attractions is the fact that Van and Schenck, for 20 years the favorite male singing team of Broadway, and composers of innumerable song hits themselves, play the leading roles in the picture. It is their first venture into a feature length talking picture.

Among the song hits of the feature are "Ain't You, Baby?" "Does My Baby?" "He's That Kind of a Pal," "Ten Little Mamas," "Partners," "I'm An Old Fashioned Guy," and "Dougherty."

And one more musical feature, "Harlem Madness" is the title of a song number that brings a spectacular stage spectacle featuring Nina Mae McKinney, colored "vamp" of "Hallelujah."

Among the famous ball players who take part in the pictures are Ernie Orsatti, Jim Thorpe, Bob Murray, Wheezer Dell, Bill Piercy, Art Jahn, Irish Meusel, Bob Meusel, Elmer Reiger, Chet Thomas, Sam Crawford, Tillie Shafer, Mike Donlin, Red Smith, Ray French, Walter Rehg, Jim McDowell, Bucky Harris and Eddie Pick.

The story concerns a couple of baseball players who fill in the winter months as a singing team in vaudeville. One Jack, is engaged to marry a sweet little girl named Mary, played by Bessie Love. A little golddigger gets her hooks in him however, steals him away from Mary, splits his friendship with his pal and keeps away from baseball as a new season opens.

The climax comes at a world series baseball game, after the golddigging wife has proven herself unfaithful and has disappeared. The reconciliation on the diamond, the dramatic ending of the game and the act of splendid renunciation by one of the two partners, forms a different ending and a dramatic finish for one of the best pictures ever made. If you like your vaudeville, your popular songs and your baseball—all three or either one—you are certain to get a big kick out of "They Learned About Women."

Dr. Taylor Opens His Fourth Week At Rialto Monday

With no signs of an diminution in size of the crowds that flock every afternoon and night to Dr. M. Sayle Taylor's presentation of "Married Love," at the Rialto theater, the noted authority on sex matters will open the fourth week of his Atlanta engagement on Monday.

Dr. Taylor will observe the same schedule between the sexes of his audiences this week as last. He will speak to women only every afternoon at 2:30 and on Friday night at 8:30, and to men only every night except Friday at 8:30. In addition, he will give a special presentation for business and professional women at 6 on Friday evening.

Never has any attraction created as much comment in Atlanta as "Married Love." Dealing in frank manner with the problems of sex and marriage, Dr. Taylor endeavors to bring to every adult a knowledge of those basic principles of nature's law that will result in lifetime happiness and love between married couples. He tells how to avoid those pitfalls, induced by ignorance, which cause lost health, lost youth, lost love, and lost happiness.

His work has been enthusiastically indorsed by everyone of the thousands who have heard him and, in other cities as well as Atlanta, men and women leaders in all walks of life have declared his message the most vital and important ever brought to the people of America.

Dr. Taylor is assisted in his presentations by Professor Samuel E. Olmstead, physical culture expert, who gives a remarkable demonstration of health possibilities in following the laws of life prescribed since earth began by mother nature.

Children under 18 are not admitted.

'Honeymoon Isle' On Metro Stage

Jimmie Hodges presents his colorful and tuneful song and dance revue, "Honeymoon Isle," on the Met stage this week. Set in the traditional atmosphere created solely for honeymooners, the clever skit sparkles with wit, humor, fast and intricate dancing and snappiest of songs.

Irma Dane, a former Follies beauty, who is more than an eyeful, will head the well-trained Hodges' sunkist chorus. Audiences seeing these dozen beauties last week marveled at their skill and will be given a new treat this week as they show them how the modern bride goes up honeymoon isle.

Jimmie, in his inimitable fashion, will have a bag full of laughs in his genial chater repertoire, to say nothing of a few surrises in his latest songs.

Billy Riley, the dancer with a thousand steps, will execute additional ones that were not seen last week.

Others scheduled for important numbers include Hilda De Voe, Ollie Hodges, Aimee Joye and Edna Jacques.

Rudy Brown and his boys have prepared a sizzling tune to offer from the pit.

"Honeymoon Isle" will vie for honors with the screen attraction, "Lovin' the Ladies," Richard Dix's newest, and lauded best, comedy romance.

New York's own playgirl, Texas Guinan, has returned home after a plesant sojourn in a Chicago night club where she acted as hostess. Her engagement in Chicago was only marred by a few shooting sprees indulged by local gunmen. Upon her arrival in New York she was asked for a statement and replied, "I was sorry to leave Chicago where they were grand to me and where all the gunmen are not as bad as all that. Why, my dear, before I left a group of gangsters presented me with a beautiful gold dressing set."

Lottie Loder, Viennese vamp, is learning English to speak in Vitaphone Varieties, "Come Easy;" but it comes hard.

After a Tough Winter.

"Spring Is Here" and millions of moths have been found starved to death in girl's bathing suits.

An effective blow was dealt to the song racketeer on Thursday last when a delegation of the nation's foremost songwriters headed by Irving Berlin, Harry Von Tilzer, Jerome Kern and Jack Yellen journeyed to the state capitol and induced Governor Roosevelt to sign a bill which made the pirating of songs a criminal offense. Returning from Albany to New York on the same day that the bill became a law, Jack Yellen had barely left the train when he was approached by one of these racketeers who offered for sale every one of Yellen's compositions published during the past year.

Farmer Silo says: "My boy in college knows a lot of team songs from the movies and there's not a 'gee,' 'haw' or 'giddap' in one of 'em."

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

"Blaze O' Glory," Eddie Dowling Talkie, at Fox

Unusual Story of High Dramatic Power Makes New Picture Intriguing.

With an outstanding Broadway star and a dramatic story to which full justice is done by a superb cast of artists from the stage and screen, pretty girls and plenty of tuneful music, "Blaze o' Glory," comes to the Fox theater Monday for a week's engagement.

"Blaze o' Glory" will introduce to motion picture audiences Eddie Dowling, famed stage star, in his second talking and dancing musical photoplay and follows closely upon the heels of "The Rainbow Man" of last season, in which Dowling leaped into immediate popularity.

Betty Compson, whose return to the screen in talking and singing roles has been one of the sensations of the season, is Mr. Dowling's leading woman. Frankie Darro, the wonderful kid of "The Rainbow Man," is again with him and such dramatic players as Henry B. Walthall, Frederick Shumann-Heink and William Davidson are other principals in the cast.

The story of "Blaze o' Glory" opens on the stage of a New York theater during the action of a musical comedy, passes backstage into the dressing rooms, on into the trenches during the war, back to a New York home, and winds up with a terrific smash in one of the most dramatic courtroom episodes ever staged.

There is a war background, but it is not a war story. It really shows the effect the war has on some of the principal characters, and the action opens the way for drama that is most realistic, giving a chance for melody, comedy and musical interpolations.

"Blaze o' Glory" is a melange of entertainment covering almost every phase of modern screen photoplays and, according to every report that has been received, it is a picture that provides a full evening's enjoyment.

There are a number of song hits in the first part of this dramatic production. They are "Doughboy's Lullaby," "The Red, Red Rose," "Put Some Salt on the Blue Bird's Tail" and Welcome Home."

"Blaze o' Glory" will undoubtedly be rated as one of the outstanding pictures of the year and Atlanta audiences have much to look forward to during the coming week at the Fox.

'Kisses' Is Stage Feature for Fox

Of all the "ideas" that have come from Fanchon & Marco's "Idea Emporium" out on the Pacific coast, the one coming to the big stage at the Fox Monday for a week's engagement probably has a broader appeal to all classes and ages than any of its predecessors. "Kisses Idea" will osculate under the proscenium arch when the curtain parts on the first and subsequent shows during the week ahead.

Kisses of all kinds, for all ages and in all forms of grandeur will be the dominant note in this idea. Added to which there is plenty of appropriate music and lots of pretty dancing by the well-known Sunkist Beauties and the headliners. The finale of the show works up to the most fitting "Lohengrin Wedding March," to which there is a bit of syncopation to show how really peppy modern weddings can become in this dizzy age.

The costumes of the girls are equally startling—first a dazzling array of white silks and satins on a score of brides and bridesmaids. Then suddenly as the syncopation of the dance numbers demand it, more than half of the wedding gowns is quickly discarded and the nuptial celebration becomes a revelous setting of whirling, swirling joyous youth.

Joe and Jean McKenna are the stars of the show. Favorites of Broadway for the past two seasons, they have no difficulty in keeping an audience rocking with laughter. Then there are Wallin & Barnes for the dances; the "E Flat Four" and Mabel and Marcia for sweet singing; Will Cowan as the minister and Helen Aubrey as the bride.

For the coming week Director Leide has prepared a symphonic overture that will please the most discriminating. It will be a contrast in moods and music and will include the "Rhapsody in Blue," by Gershwin; a special arrangement of "By the Waters of Minnetonka," and will conclude with the finale from "Poet and Peasant."

Don Wilkins' stage band will enliven the stage presentation with their rendition of the popular and jazzy music that is part and parcel of the current Fanchon & Marco idea, "Kisses." Iris will render new organ melodies.

The draining of the old reservoir in Central Park threatens to disband the famous rendezvous for multi-millionaires who for daily exercise are usually to be seen each morning from 6 to 8 circling the pathway around the reservoir before commencing the day's work. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; George B. Cortelyou, former cabinet officer during Roosevelt's administration; Daniel Guggenheim, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Vincent Astor, James Stillman and others have been members in good standing whose combined wealth easily totals a billion dollars.

The forthcoming revival of an old time minstrel show on Broadway, the first in 25 years since Cohan & Harris presented George (Honeyboy) Evans, was the means today of providing George L. Battle with his first job in 23 years. With the passing of this type of entertainment Battle lost his favorite occupation. The management's call for end men brought Battle on the run. His last engagement was with "Steamboat Bill's Minstrels," which toured the Mississippi valley in 1907.

Every effort to reduce the New York taxi men to robots meets with stiff opposition. The commissioner of police, anxious to confer some of his own sartorial elegance upon them, has ordered them to wear a vizored cap and linen duster while in pursuit of or carrying fares. Failure to comply with this order implies a speedy revocation of the hackman's license. A few days ago a supreme court judge ruled against the police commissioner and commented that a taxi driver is entitled to a license even if attired in pajamas.

Andy—What would you say if I asked you to marry me?

Min—Nothing. I can't talk and laugh at the same time.—The Pathfinder.

To Entertain You Again

Two of the most popular talking screen releases of recent weeks are coming again to Atlanta screens. At the left, above, is a scene from "Hot for Paris," the sequel to "The Cock-Eyed World," which will be shown at Loew's Grand in the near future. At the right is Marilyn Miller, lovely little star of the legitimate stage, who plays the title role in "Sally," her first singing, talking picture, for patrons of the Cameo on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Famed Minstrel Act for Georgia

Mrs. George Primrose and her "Spirit of Minstrelsy," including a number of the famous old stars of the George Primrose minstrels, will headline the new bill of Radio-Keith Orpheum vaudeville at Keith's Georgia theater this week on the same program with "Loose Ankles," starring Loretta Young and Doug Fairbanks, Jr.

Several years ago Mrs. Primrose decided to organize all available remaining stars of her husband's famous minstrel show and form a vaudeville combination. The result was success almost as great as that in which the George Primrose Minstrels themselves basked.

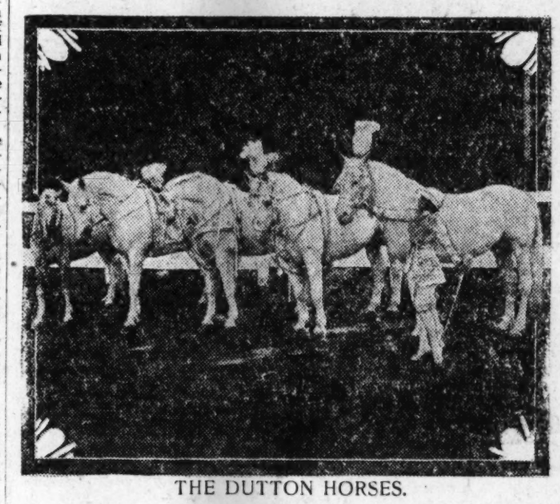

The new production features John Healy, who will be remembered as one of the outstanding lights of the old organization. Many others stars, including the Malloy Twins, also will be seen in the "Spirit of Minstrelsy."

Songs, dances and the inimitable and famous comedy of the Primrose group are presented in "Spirit of Minstrelsy," with the addition of many modern touches.

Jack Major, the radio and Brunswick recording artist, is co-headliner on th enew bill. Of all the radio and record artists who have sprung into popularity Mr. Major is regarded as one of the best. His is the "Voice of the Southland" and with his billing as such he has proven immensely popular over the entire Radio-Keith-Orpheum circuit.

Frank Rose and Olive Thorne have a unique presentation which is scheduled to prove popular with audiences at Keith's Georgia theater this week, while Harum and Scarum, two young Englishmen who style themselves such for comedy purposes only, also will add to the entertainment.

Shrine Circus Will Open For Week Monday Night

THE DUTTON HORSES.

Starting tomorrow night, the Shrine Circus will open at the auditorium with all the adjuncts necessary to reproduce a professional circus. The committee reports over $10,000 worth of tickets have been sold in advance.

From "pink lemonade" to peanuts and the sawdust of the rings, every feature will be at the circus when the doors open Monday night at 7:30. Atlanta, like every big city, will have a spring indoor circus and the committee of Yaarab Shrine uniformed bodies are making every effort to give the public all the thrills of the big top. Twenty feature acts will be included in the show.

The Dutton Horses, shown above, will present a bareback riding act, said to be one of the outstanding features of the country and a late feature of the Ringling Circus. Some of the acts, well known in the circus world, include Miss Nellie Jordon, wire walker; Stone, Stone and Stone, comedy acrobats; Bernard and Bernard, novelty perch performers; Miss Vivian De Vere, aerial loop artist; Comedy Mules, Steiner Trio, horizontal bar performers; Freda McGuire, the lady who keeps you guessing; the Silverlakes, double trapeze artists; Merrill Brothers and Sister, equilibristic feature; Howard Brothers, comedy acrobats; Conley Trio, iron jaw feature; Florence Barlow and Company, contortionists; Balew's elephants, Florence educated dogs, the Dutton Equestrian Revue is conceded by both press and public to be the most beautiful riding act in the country.

Marilyn Miller "Sally" at Cameo For First Half

All-Technicolor Musical Romance From Stage Success in Return Showing.

"Sally," Marilyn Miller's first motion picture, which shows at the Cameo Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is made entirely in Technicolor, showing the natural colors of costumes, settings and other spectacular effects. The picture has been adapted from Miss Miller's greatest stage success, and is an all-dialogue production with singing and dancing on a most lavish scale. Pert Kelton, who played in Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita," is the ingenue lead and Alexander Gray, the musical comedy favorite who sang in "The Desert Song," appears in the romantic lead. Joe E. Brown, Ford Sterling and T. Roy Barnes are the chief comedians in the gay and rollicking story of a grand duke who becomes a waiter and a humble waitress who becomes a stage star. The best remembered melodies of the original stage production are heard, as well as additional numbers written especially for "Sally," on the screen.

The all-talking drama of shipwreck, mystery, escape by submarine and battles for love in the Sargasso sea, "The Isle of Lost Ships," comes to the Cameo the last half of this week for a three-day engagement. Virginia Valli, Jason Robards and Noah Beery head the cast, while Robert O'Connor, Robert Homans and Harry Cording also have prominent parts. "The Isle of Lost Ships" is one of the most novel, striking and imaginative film epics ever spun by scenarists, director and actors.

Michael Murphy is an enterprising Irishman. He reasoned that the passing throng on Broadway was hungry for information regarding Rembrandt, El Greco, Goya and Velasquez. Securing copies of their nudes, he rented a vacant store on Broadway and announced a series of lectures on the old masters, illustrated with copies of their works. But, unfortunately or fortunately, agents of the anti-vice association in company with a police officer, interrupted Murphy's lecture long enough to have him escorted into the court, together with the pictures as evidence that the Irishman was violating that section of the penal code which deals with obscenity. The learned magistrate, recognizing the pictures as copies of famous canvasses on the walls of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, promptly discharged the defendant and restored his paintings to him. The notoriety given to this case by the vice squad was just the tonic to stimulate interest in Murphy's public exhibition and the lucky Irishman has since been lecturing to crowded audiences.

The art of showmanship is rapidly expanding beyond Broadway. In opening a new branch opposite the Grand Central terminal, a coast to coast chain of restaurants decreed red as the motif. Everything runs wild to vermillion; red chairs and tables, crimson-paneled walls and the general color scheme in the same hue. As an added attraction, 60 titian-haired girls have been added to the staff of employees.

pretty Loretta Young will be the feature on Wednesday and Thursday. The story deals with a campus flirt and a football player.

Friday's screen feature will be Charles (Buddy) Rogers and Jean Arthur in the daring romantic-melodrama, "Halfway to Heaven." Buddy breaks into carnival life in this talkie and does some dangerous stunts on the flying trapeze. At 8 o'clock in the evening the stage will be turned over to amateur entertainers who will compete for three big prizes.

The smashing underworld thriller, "The Night Ride," starring Joseph Schildkraut will be the attraction on Saturday. Other daily features during the week will be short talking subjects, comedies, news reels and serials, all set to enjoyable Movietone music.

Funniest Sister Team at Capitol

What is described as the funniest act in vaudeville, the hilariously funny comedy sister team of Fanny and Kitty Watson, is booked in the headline position at Loew's Capitol theater this week. And, take it from all authorities, this is one act that will make every audience laugh until it can laugh no more, will make them return to the theater for a repetition of the joyfest.

The feature talking picture to be shown in conjunction with the vaudeville program is "They Learned About Women," a classic about the professional baseball diamond, with Van and Schenck, world-famous song-writing and song-singing team, as the stars.

The Watson sisters present an act that includes singing, talking and dancing. But, what singing, talking and dancing? It has carried away chief honors on some of the most impressive vaudeville bills ever gathered together for a New York audience and Atlanta is to have a comparatively rare treat in this offering.

Second honors on the bill are expected to go to Amerique and Neville, the international dancers who have appeared here with outstanding success several times in the past. They are assisted this time by the Neal sisters, a clever girls' singing orchestra, and by Howard O'Shea, boy acrobatic dancing wonder, in a presentation titled "Melody and Rhythm."

Keith Wilbur, "the New Zealand Rancher," is another strong act on the bill, offering some of the cleverest impersonations seen here in a long time, while the program will be completed by Paul Nolan, known as the "jesting Swede," who, with the assistance of a decorative lady partner, does an exceedingly clever comedy juggling act.

What has been known as the Gay White Way, Mazda Lane, the Main Stem or any of the descriptive phrases of Broadway by romantic reporters, is now cleared entirely of theaters devoted to legitimate productions. The only theater which had been unmolested by the movie interests was the Columbia theater, built in 1910 expressly for that form of stage travesty known as burlesque. For 20 years it enjoyed a record unbroken by invasions of the classic drama, only to bow its noble head this week to make way for a modern movie temple.

Little Edith—May I sit on your lap, Daddy?

Sarcastic Mamma—No, darling. Papa's tired; he's had a hard day at the office—The Pathfinder.

Mary Groom, Welsh concert contralto, has become a member of the NBC staff on the Pacific coast.

'Lovin' the Ladies' Is Richard Dix's Latest at Met

Popular Actor Has Well Suited Role in Zestful Farce Talkie.

Again Radio Pictures has given Richard Dix one of his most thoroughly entertaining characteristic roles in "Lovin' the Ladies," lauded as his best comedy romance to date.

Produced with a zippish smartness and deftness, America's idol's newest opus offers him an ideal setting, moving rapidly and brimming with genuine comedy. Curiously enough, "Lovin' the Ladies" gives Dix the first chance he has had in pictures to play a role he originally created on the stage. The picture was adapted from William Le Baron's Broadway success, "I Love You," in which Dix was starred several years ago on the New York stage. The play was an outstanding hit during its long run and the film is claimed to surpass it.

Instead of the traditional heroine, the hero is involved with four women. They are Lois Wilson, formerly co-starred with him; Rita La Roy, Radio's "It" girl; Renee MacReady, a popular English actress who makes her cinema bow, and Virginia Sale, sister of Chic.

With the entanglements in this many-sided story, excitement, suspense, drama and hilarity are the result, giving Dix a great opportunity to demonstrate his keen versatility.

Romance and philosophy parallel the rollicking humor. The animating motive of the story is a $5,000 wager between two clubmen, one maintaining that "any two young people, mutually attractive, under given conditions of environment, can be made to fall in love and become engaged within a month." The development of this subject draws several stars for "Lovin' the Ladies" and even more for Dix.

Allen Kearns, who will be remembered for his clever part in "The Very Idea," returns in an equally hilarious characterization.

Under the superb direction of Melville Brown "Lovin' the Ladies" offers to full advantage every Dix laugh-getting situation.

Reading Titles Clear.

"Careers" in the movies are sometimes not quite.

"Done in Oil" savors of a stock-selling promotion.

"Gun Gospel" is preached in short and snappy sentences.

"The Woman of No Importance" lives under some other roof.

"The Perch of the Devil" was probably the original "poor fish."

Neighborhood Theaters

Story of Carnival Thrills at DeKalb

Charles Buddy Rogers and Jean Arthur are the featured stars in Monday and Tuesday's offering at the DeKalb theater in Decatur. The title of the picture is "Half Way to Heaven." If you like fast, outdoor, romantic action in your talking pictures," Half Way to Heaven" has it. It's a thrilling story of carnival life with the youthful Rogers as a daring, aerial-trapeze performer.

On Wednesday, pretty Betty Bronson will be featured in "Peter Pan." Here's a picture that every child and grown up alike should see.

Thursday and Friday, the sensational all-talking drama of the air will be offered when "Flight" will be shown. Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Ralph Graves are the featured stars in this love story of two aviator pals, both in love with the same girl.

Saturday, fun and laughter will rule supreme, when "Oh Yeah" will be screened. Here's a comedy that will cause laughter, like you've never heard before.

Poncey Has Winner In "Cockeyed World"

For movie fans who want real Dandy" picture, the Ponce de Leon comedy, snappy music and a "Jim offers "The Cockeyed World" for Monday and Tuesday. The stars of this talking picture include Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe, Lily Damita and a host of others. Seven orchestras and three big song hits are in "The Cockeyed World."

Wednesday and Thursday the famous Duncan sisters will be seen in "It's a Great Life." The ever-popular theme song, "Following You" is hard to equal. Besides being singers, the Duncan sisters are real dancers.

Friday the Ponce de Leon offers Janet Gaynor and Charles Morton in "Four Devils," with songs and dialog.

Saturday Chester Conklin and Louise Fazenda will be seen in the greatest mystery picture of a lifetime, "The House of Horrors."

"New York Nights" For Tenth Street

Norma Talmadge in her first all-talking picture, "New York Nights," is the feature attraction for Monday and Tuesday at the Tenth Street. This is the story of a show girl who fought to be queen regent in the heart of her erring husband. This is not only Miss Talmadge's first talking picture but it is considered the greatest picture of her career.

Wednesday brings Monte Blue riding his thrill-a-minute special, "The Greyhound Limited." Action, thrills, romance and comedy are packed into this fast-moving story of the railroad. Another attraction is a chapter of the serial, "The Pirate of Panama."

GEORGIA DIVISION, DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY

Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, president; Mrs. I. Bashinski, Dublin, first vice president; Mrs. C. H. Leavy, Brunswick, second vice president; Mrs. L. W. Greene, Sycamore, third vice president; Mrs. Harry A. Craig, Augusta, recording secretary; Mrs. Bessie Aldred, Sandersville, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, historian; Mrs. Ada Ramp Walden, Augusta, editor; Mrs. Frank Dennis, Eatonton, auditor; Mrs. Forest Kibler, Atlanta, recorder crosses of military service; Mrs. Loula Kendall Rogers, Tennille, poet laureate.

Honorary Presidents—Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta; Miss Anna Caroline Benning, Columbus; Mrs. John A. Perdue, Atlanta; Mrs. W. J. Vereen, Moultrie.

The U. D. C. Chatter Box

Mrs. Harry Taylor Johnson, of Griffin, whose letter as scrap book custodian, appears today, is just a bit more in her home town than the incumbent of that office, though that is of sufficient importance in itself.

Besides being president of the Boynton chapter, she has held various offices, among them that of being the first chairman of crosses of military service. As an active member in the Legion Auxiliary this has made that department of the work unusually interesting for Mrs. Johnson and for all concerned. She is regent of the Pulaski chapter, D. A. R.; recording secretary of Woman's Club; one of five charter members of the Woman's Democratic League of Spalding county; president Dorcas Society, First Baptist church, and secretary and treasurer of the Woman's Bible class. Her capability as a businesswoman has been demonstrated by the fact that for 20 years she has been bookkeeper in the office of her husband, H. T. Johnson, tax receiver of Spalding county, who is known as the dean of state and county officials.

Mrs. Harry Craig, recording secretary, 2447 Wrightsboro road, Augusta, has a number of the minutes of the Moultrie convention on hand, which may be secured at the price of 25 cents each. Only a small proportion of chapter members attend the conventions, but all may have the privilege of familiarizing themselves with their proceedings. To read the minutes carefully will not only afford inspiration for the work, but what is much more important, will obviate the "bobbing" up and down on the floor of the convention and board meetings of many who ask questions that are answered on the pages of the minutes; but who, nevertheless, halt the proceedings by taking up so much time. So, secure a copy of the minutes while they last from the recording secretary and ask no questions from the floor of the next convention.

Bainbridge Club Plans Flower Show.

BAINBRIDGE, April 12.—The Garden Club, which met recently with Mrs. J. M. Simmons at Greenwood Triangle, the president Mrs. Owen Fields, presiding, made plans for the customary flower show. The date of the fourth annual event of beautiful flowers will be determined by the progress of blooming plants. Mrs. Lloyd Hall, chairman of collection of wild flowers, presented a paper of 200 names. The club will furnish flowers for the state convention of Business and Profession Women's Clubs here in May, instead of a garden party for the noted guests during the two-day stay in the City of Oaks.

Miss Virginia Brittain, of Atlanta, niece of President Brittain of Georgia Tech and of R. G. Hartsfield, Bainbridge, Decatur county's representative on the state democratic executive board, has been invited to present her Bainbridge pupils in a dancing number at the May meeting of the Woman's Club. Miss Elizabeth Gilbert will be in charge of the program. Mrs. A. B. Conger, president of the club, will be hostess for this last meeting of the season at her home, "Lingerlong."

Mrs. John Monaghan, of Pelham, president Second District Women's Clubs, will address the Bainbridge Woman's Club in regular meeting Thursday afternoon. Mrs. John Reid will be hostess.

Jewish Women To Entertain.

The Fifth District of Women's Clubs will be the guests of the Council of Jewish Women at its meeting Monday, April 21, at 3 o'clock, at the new Standard Club on Ponce de Leon avenue, when Miss Helen Coyne Riley, of the Juilliard foundation and head of the Atlanta Music center, will interpret the opera "Louise." This opera by Charpentier, in French, has never before been presented in the south, and the cast will include Lucrezia Bori, Antonin Trantoul, Ina Bourskaya, Leon Rothier and nearly 40 principal singers. Mrs. Frank Miller, music chairman for the fifth district, will receive with the committee from the council, and tea will be served during the social hour following the interpretation.

Mrs. Johnson Issues Greetings To Georgia Division U. D. C.

Mrs. Harry Taylor Johnson, of Griffin, custodian of scrapbook, Georgia division, U. D. C., whose letter to the chapters appears today.

Mrs. Harry Taylor Johnson, of Griffin, U. D. C. custodian of scrap book, sends the following greeting to the division chapters:

"Your custodian of the state U. D. C. scrap book wishes to make special acknowledgment of the assistance rendered her in the collection of important data, sent by some of the state chairmen.

"Please send clippings from your local papers, telling of the activities of your chapters and in this way make known the constructive work of the chapters over the state. Let your achievements be an incentive for other chapters to put forth their best efforts through the medium of the press.

"Georgia Daughters hope to preserve the glorious memories of the War Between the States. Preservation depends upon publication. Especially does your custodian wish to thank Mrs. Ada Ramp Walden, editor, for valuable contributions sent. Hope to hear from you all."

Securing U. D. C. Scholarships Stressed by Georgia Division Editor

By Ada Ramp Walden, of Augusta, State Editor.

Since the late Mrs. Helen Plane, lovingly recalled as "Mother" Plane, suggested the securing of scholarships by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, whereby boys and girls of limited means, of Confederate lineage, would profit, the organization has stressed this as one of the very important of its numerous worthwhile features. Year after year the number of scholarships has been augmented and many a beneficiary has taken advantage of the opportunity offered.

This year the committee especially desires that every scholarship for the session 1930-31 be filled. With that end in view, the educational chairman of Georgia Division, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson; and the historian, Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, begs every chapter president to promote this work and comply, with the rules, the most important being as follows:

A division or chapter may present as many names as desired, through only one name may be presented for one vacant scholarship.

Scholarships mentioned herein as open to Georgia applicants are available for four years or until the student completes his course; all loans are time.

Division president and chairman of education must endorse every applicant, and application made upon official blanks furnished by Division.

Applicants must pass entrance examination of college for which they apply, and file letters from at least four responsible persons as proof of their inability to pay for their educathemselves to make the best possible use of opportunity offered.

The aim of the loan fund is to assist as many students as possible; therefore no large loan are made. Loans range from $50 to $200. Every student desiring re-appointment for the coming year shall apply to the division chairman not later than February 1 of the current session, with letter submitted by school or college recommending re-appointment.

The following are the scholarships available for the coming scholastic year for Georgia students: Alabama Military Institute, Anniston, value, $125; Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, $50; Bethel Woman's College, Hopkinsville, Ky., $100; Centre College, Danville, Ky., for boy or girl, two, $50; Chatham Hall, Va., $300; Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, $300; Columbia Institute, upper school, Tennessee, $100; lower school, $50; Columbia Military Academy, $100; Fassifern school, Hendersonville, $125, (preparatory for college, girl, from sixth to twelfth grade); Georgetown College, Kentucky, $50; State Woman's College, Valdosta, $20; Gulfcoast Military Academy, Gulfport, $100; Margaret Hall, Versailles, Ky., $150; Maryland College for Women, Lutherville, $250; Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., $55; Missouri Military Academy, Mexico, $250; Sophie Newcomb College, New Orleans, $100; Southern Brothers-Fugazzi School of Business, Lexington, Ky., $42.50; Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., $100; Stephens College (self-aid scholarship), $300; Stonewall Jackson College, Abingdon, Va., $80; Sullins College, Virginia, $300; Swarthmore Prep school, Pennsylvania, $200; University of Alabama, $45; University of North Carolina, $75; University of the South, Sewanee, $200; University of Virginia, academic department, $215. Of the gift scholarships, that of the Woodrow Wilson Memorial School of Law, University of Virginia, is valued at $420.

Four crosses of honor and six of military service will be presented at the Memorial Day meeting of the Roberta Harris Wells chapter, Watkinsville, when Honorable Abit Nix, of Athens, will deliver the oration. This chapter was made most happy at its last meeting by the presentation of a small lot and cabin for use as a chapter house, the lot being a portion of the Elder estate. The house has already been named in honor of the late W. Joe Elder, a Confederate veteran of the county who served the four years of the conflict and was severely wounded at Gettysburg. Mrs. T. W. Reed, of Athens, was a distinguished guest of the meeting and gave an interesting talk on her impressions of the convention at Biloxi last fall. This meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Roy Mahable, Mrs. W. H. Hodges, Jr., presiding.

The Rev. Mr. DeBardeleben, of the Methodist church, of Toccoa, has been selected by the Hartwell chapter as its orator on Memorial Day when the Confederate veterans will be honored guests at the exercises, and at the dinner which will follow. Two service crosses will be given, Dr. Thomas R. Gaines, of Anderson, and Dr. W. E. McCurry, of Hartwell, to be recipients. Mrs. W. D. Teasley, president, reported the gift of a book, "The Indian Princess," to the chairman of southern literature in home and foreign libraries. Five members were elected to membership at this meeting.

Miss Emily Woodward, editor of the Vienna News, will deliver the address Memorial Day at the exercises to be held by the Turner County chapter, in Ashburn. The essay winner will be announced at the same time, and prizes awarded. A sumptuous dinner will be served the veterans of the county, wives and widows of veterans, in pursuance of the custom established by the chapter a number of years ago.

At the recent meeting of the LaGrange chapter, held at the home of Mrs. R. O. Pharr Mrs. T. G. Polhill presiding, the chapter historian, Mrs. J. L. Bradfield made the report that 752 essays had been written by students of the schools, on "Jefferson Davis." The chapter is making strenuous efforts in the enlisting of new members, and the chairman, Mrs. J. E. Dunaway, and Mrs. W. W. Randall, expect to achieve splendid results from their efforts, particularly among the younger women, whom they are endeavoring to interest in the work. The annual dinner will be served on Memorial Day to the veterans and widows. The chapter expects, too, to put on a benefit party soon, the proceeds to be used in the repairing and refurnishing of Winnie Davie Memorial hall, at Athens. Mrs. Roy Dallis, division chairman of that committee, was present and made an urgent appeal that this work be done.

Methodist Missionary Society Holds Meeting in Americus

M. Frances Meadors Burghard, of Macon, Editor.

The W. C. T. U. membership campaign was given an appreciated boost at the annual conference of the south Georgia Methodist Woman's Missionary Society in Americus the past week. A recommendation of the social service department, Mrs. J. D. McKey, of Valdosta, superintendent, was adopted by the conference that each auxiliary would sponsor a W. C. T. U. membership campaign among its members, putting forth effort to have all its members join the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. At one time during the conference all delegates who were W. C. T. U. members were asked to stand. More than half the great audience stood. Practically all W. C. T. U. members are members of missionary societies of some denomination.

A pageant Wednesday evening showed the many co-operating organizations. All were cordially received, but the only one to receive an ovation was the W. C. T. U., well represented by Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, a national W. C. T. U. lecturer and organizer, a woman winsome and wise. As she appeared on the platform, he snow-white hair curling about her smiling, sunshiny face, with its schoolgirl complexion, proudly carrying the W. C. T. U. banner with its motto: "For God and Home and Every Land," the audience rose and applauded.

"The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, made up of Christian women of the various churches, whose love of home prompted them to take an active part in the protection of the home, years ago when women's organizations were few, still maintains its singleness of purpose—the destruction of the liquor traffic, in this day when women's organizations are numberless," she said.

"The W. C. T. U. majors in prohibition law observance and law enforcement and with the help of such women as you, must give the truth about prohibition to the women of the world. These are priceless days in the defense of the 18th amendment for every day is the day of crisis. Who is on the Lord's side in this temperance fight? In the words of Henry Ward Beecher, 'Now is the nick of time.' A woman who will stand and be counted with the W. C. T. U. now is worth more to the cause of temperance throughout the world than 150 years hence."

Temperance and Missions.

Mrs. Atkins made a stirring temperance and missions address one morning. Although she did not ask for members at its close, 26 voluntarily came to her and paid the dues of $1 and signed the pledge and joined.

Women may voluntarily send their dues to the state treasurer, Mrs. Wilbur Brown, Griffin, and ask for a pledge and thus become state members, if there is no local union near them. Never in all the years of the history of Georgia W. C. T. U. has there been so much active interest in the W. C. T. U. It seems to be true, as Henry Ford said, that the activities of the opponents of prohibition, the organization of women in some states to "end prohibition" has aroused the church to action as organized drys had been unable to do.

The membership campaign continues during April. Every union and every member is urged to secure more members—at least 10—paid and pledged as early as convenient. Continue to make reports to Mrs. Dudley Smith, Eastman, the state membership chairman.

Speaks in South Carolina.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Greenville, who recently completed a six-week speaking itinerary in Georgia, attended by notable success, is delivering prohibition addresses in South Carolina and is being eagerly heard by large audiences. Indeed, most complimentary reports of her work on the platform have been received.

"I have never seen so much interest manifested in the W. C. T. U. in South Carolina as on this trip," she writes. "The ministers are proving so very kind and helpful, especially the Baptist ministers. I spoke in three Baptist churches in Spartanburg last Sunday. All good meetings, especially those in the morning. The night meeting was not so large, as Gypsy Smith was closing a great revival at the First Presbyterian church and every effort had been made to make his farewell a success. After seats had been provided for all possible, they arranged to broadcast and asked all who had radios and could not get in to listen at home. Nevertheless we had several hundred at the enthusiastic W. C. T. U. meeting."

Mrs. Armor also wrote: "I have organized three unions this week, also secured a number of members at another place who said they would organize later, as they wanted to get more members of other churches from which to elect officers, so that all denominations would be represented."

"Monday afternoon I broadcast from a new station in Spartanburg, and they told me they were so sorry when I quit because people had been phoning in telling them how they were enjoying it and urging them to let me keep on. That is the first time I have had that radio experience."

Mrs. Armor is speaking for the South Carolina W. C. T. U. this week, then she will begin a lecture tour in Maryland.

Camilla W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Florence Atkins reorganized the Camilla W. C. T. U. with the following officers: President, Mrs. P. E. Bailey; secretary, Mrs. E. E. Smith; treasurer, Mrs. J. P. McRae.

She had a fine meeting there, and stirred a splendid audience in Bainbridge Sunday evening, gaining new members in both places. She went into the second district, of which Mrs. John Harrison, of Bainbridge, is president, to have a prominent part on the program at the second district meeting in Albany, when eight unions were represented. Among the luncheon speakers were the mayor, Episcopal minister(president of the missionary society and others. An interesting morning and afternoon program was carried out.

In addition to those contributing to the special fund to help complete furnishing the state headquarters, 1436 North Highland avenue, N. E., Atlanta, already acknowledged in this column, the following amounts have been received, Miss Idelle McDonald, Atlanta, $1.50; Miss Ruth McDonald, Atlanta, $1.50; Mrs. A. B. Smith, Valdosta, $5.

Service at Prisons.

Mrs. Ralph B. Ziegler, Columbus, state director of prison welfare, writes: "Where it is possible let us establish the custom of a White Ribbon Mother's Day service, when flowers are carried to prisoners, also materials for writing, books and magazines, religious and temperance literature and in other ways helping prisoners to observe the day." She suggests the following for a prison welfare program at the W. C. T. U. meeting in April: Song, "Rescue the Perishing;" devotional, Matthew, 25, v. 31-46. Discussion of plan of work prepared by state director; leaflet talk "The Youthful Criminal:" song, "Help Somebody Today;" talk, "The Juvenile Court;" talk, "Bible Knowledge a Preventive of Crime;" plans for local work.

Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, vice president of the National W. C. T. U., state president of the Iowa W. C. T. U., the speaker at the Georgia W. C. T. U. convention in 1928 at Bainbridge is traveling in the holy land. Before leaving she accidentally learned that the Iowa W. C. C. T. was preparing to give her a purse, through the state secretary she made known her desire that they give to the W. C. T. U. instead of to her. It was arranged that every one of the 16,000 Iowa members could make a good-by gift of only one penny—no more was permitted. So a check for $160 was sent Mrs. Smith with a card on which was written, "Sixteen thousand love pennies, a prayer with every one—for a pleasant trip and a safe return."

W. C. T. U. "We."

Recently Mrs. Smith summarized the W. C. T. U. thus: "We are 600,000 strong! We would, if all dues were paid, be an army of more than a million members. We gained 75,000 members in the last 10 months. We are organized in every state and every territory of the United States. We are in almost every county in the United States. We are growing every day! We know 'Our enemy is liquor.' We know 'eternal vigilance is the price of prohibition.' We shall, in His name, conquer our enemy. We invite all Christian women to join us by paying the dollar dues and signing the total abstinence pledge. We are the W. C. T. U."

Personals.

The open door, the official organ of the Tennessee W. C. T. U., contains a picture of Mrs. W. P. King, formerly a W. C. T. U. worker and leader in Georgia, in its current issue. Mrs. King is state director of the Tennessee W. C. T. U. health department. She held a similar position with the Georgia W. C. T. U. while living in Athens. She has numerous friends in Georgia to which she has added many new friends in Tennessee, and the same thing may be said of her distinguished husband, who is now the book editor of the Southern Methodist Publishing House in Nashville.

Georgia comrades of Mrs. Mary T. Jeffries Birmingham, state president of the Alabama W. C. T. U., regret her continued illness. Mrs. Lamar Smith, of Gadsden, vice president, is now acting president.

Georgia's own loved honorary president, Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, is ill at the Wesley Memorial hospital in Atlanta. Hundreds of warm friends wish her an early recovery. Her worth to the W. C. T. U. has been of inestimable value through a long term of years.

W. C. T. U. poems of Mrs. Annie Durham Methvin, of Decatur, Ga., W. C. T. U. poet laureate, continue to appear in state W. C. T. U. papers in all parts of the United States because of their merit.

Mrs. Clarence Wall Elected President Of Music Club

COLLEGE PARK, Ga., April 12.—Mrs. Clarence W. Wall was elected president of the College Park Music Club at the meeting held Wednesday afternoon. Elected to serve with her were: First vice president, Mrs. Frederic L. Beers; second vice president, Mrs. S. R. Young; third vice president, Miss Eloise Olds; recording secretary, Mrs. Edwin Seymour; corresponding secretary, Miss Lucile Mason; treasurer, Mrs. Kimsey Foster, and auditor, Mrs. Paul Farmer.

The haunting beauty and gorgeous splendor of old Russia was most vividly portrayed in the program presented by the club at the meeting, Mrs. W. W. Bateman, one of the outstanding musicians of the south and a most valued member of the club, being program chairman for the afternoon. Mrs. Bateman first presented Mrs. Frederic L. Beers, who gave a brief outline of the musical development of this interesting nation. Two piano selections were given by Mrs. Harry McCowen. Two songs, "None but the Loney Heart" and "Slumber Song" were rendered by Mrs. Robert E. Rosser, mezzo-soprano. Two violin selections by Miss Verdery Rosenbush were presented. Miss Rosenbush shows splendid technique and is a most charming performer. Her piano accompaniments were played by Miss Grace Nance. The importance of the Russian dance was portrayed by a peasant folk dance given in costume by little Miss Douglas Lyle, talented daughter of Mrs. Douglas Lyle and granddaughter of the club president, Mrs. D. C. Lyle. Little Miss Lyle is a pupil of Miss Sarah Sharpe and Mrs. Bookhout. The cycle of impressions of Russian people and their music was completed by the presentation of a choral setting adapted to the Fifth Symphony by Tschaikowsky "God of All Nature," showing the deeply religious feeling of this people. This chorus was sung by a group of College Park ladies, including Mesdames Paul Farmer, Crowder Hale, Clarence W. Wall, Douglas Lyle, Robert Rosser, Eva L. Thornton, L. M. Dewell, DeWitt Hunt, W. W. Bateman and Misses Mary Barton and Christine Trimble. Miss Avis Patterson served as accompanist for the various numbers on the program.

Preceding the program an important business session was held, with the president, Mrs. D. C. Lyle, presiding. Reports from Mrs. W. W. Bateman, the president's appointee, and Mrs. Clarence Wall, delegate, to the Georgia Federated Music Clubs convention held recently in Tifton, were made.

Druid Hills Dramatic Class To Present Plays

Friday evening, April 18, at 8 o'clock, the advanced dramatic art class of Druid Hills High school will present two plays under the direction of Mrs. D. B. Sinclair. The first play, "The Boy Who Discovered Easter," is a subtle and yet very emphatic exposition of nature, in life, in death, and in its resurrection. Those taking part are: Ruth Cox, Laura Causey, Jack Barker and Billy Greene.

Gilbert's old and yet ever new Grecian comedy, "Pygmalion and Galatea," will be presented, the play being based upon the Grecian legend of a sculptor who carved a statue, so exquisite in its workmanship that he allowed himself to become unhappy because he could not, also, bestow life. He prayed that the gods might crown his achievements by giving life to his statue Galatea. His hope is realized and complications follow in rapid succession.

The costumes and stage appointments are Grecian and the following girls move with ease and grace befitting the cultured Greeks: Misses Ruth Moore, Constance Shumaker, Ruth Fariss, Elaine Davidson, Marguerite Rhodes, Marjorie Spratt, McDougal Evans, Ruth Cox and Laura Causey. Other members of the dramatic art class assisting in the performances are: Jack Peebles, Gordon Stipe, Ambrose Pendergrast, Allan Pope, Leroy Watson and Jack Tilford. Evelyn Cox and Elaine Davidson will furnish musical accompaniments.

Friends of these young people and those interested in dramatic presentations of literary merit are urged to see the performances. A nominal fee of admission will be charged.

Military Society Masquerades In Clever Costumes At Barn Dance

FORT McPHERSON, Ga., April 12.—The barn dance at the Fort McPherson Officers' Club was a gala affair of Friday evening, the interior of the club being transformed into a barn under the direction of Mrs. Augustus B. Jones and Mrs. Harvard C. Moore, who acted as official hostesses. Lanterns, old style glass affairs, were suspended from the walls and were placed in a row upon the mantel, while the fireplace was filled with bags of oats and grain flanked by bales of hay. Milking pails and three-legged stoves and harness hanging from pegs were effectively used around the rooms. A wagon wheel occupied one end of the hall and horse collars were hung from nails. At midnight a old-fashion plate supper was served. The costumes were quaint little prints, overalls and "fatigue clothes," as the soldiers term their working outfits, with a sprinkling of the more colorful costumes. A pair of twins were represented by Mrs. Walter F. Macklin and her daughter, Miss Doris Macklin. Dressed exactly alike in red checked gingham collared in white with red socks and large red hair ribbons these piquant brunettes were greatly admired. Mrs. Margaret Burrel Bidelle was charming in an old fashion costume with shawl of black and black lace caught to her hair, and earrings and brooch of black jet. A quaint bouquet of roses and sweet peas with a trimming of lace completed her costume.

Miss Sally Pearson was a lovely little figure in a green gingham dress, socks and topped by a white bertuffled sunbonnet while Miss Dorothy Tebbetts wore a sprigged voile with her curls tied with a white satin ribbon and carried a white teddy bear. Mrs. Carl Seals' costumes are always well chosen and her ruffled white organdy, low heel black slippers and poke bonnet tied demurely beneath her chin with long green satin streamers was most effective. Major Seals, who called the figures of the square dance, wore overalls with a wide brimmed straw hat. Miss Lorainne Richardson chose a pink dress and wore her hair down her back and carried a bouquet of rosebuds and sweet peas. Mrs. John Oliver, of Mississippi chose a sport dress in white with short jacket of pink while Mrs. Harvard C. Moore wore a rose gingham with a huge straw hat of rose. Mrs. Gustav H. Franke wore a black and white checked gingham, with a straw hat and spectacles and was a prim figure of a New England school marm. Miss Mary Bach in blue overalls tucked in her boots, and red shirt with a straw hat was a clever figure, while Miss Majorie Ripley in blue checked gingham with muslin sunbonnet atop her curls was lovely. Miss Jackie Ensrud suggested Miami Beach in her gay print pajamas in green and pink with jacket and matching hat. Mrs. John R. Dinsmore made an attractive figure in blue checked gingham with white apron while Mrs. Thomas H. Ramsey wore an old-fashion blue mull with hair ribbon of blue. Lieutenant William Biddle wore blue overalls and Spencer Rockwell wore dark trousers with white coat and a big flower on his lapel. Captain Thomas H. Ramsey appeared in a Palm Beach suit with pongee shirt and stiff collar. During the evening several contests were played and amusing favors presented the guests.

Prior to the dance there were several dinner parties given by members of the garrison set. Colonel Henry H. Tebbetts and Mrs. Tebbetts entertained at their quarters in honor of Colonel W. F. Pearson and Mrs. Pearson and their daughter, Miss Sally Pearson. Covers were placed at the perfectly appointed table for a number of the military set.

Major Walter F. Macklin and Mrs. Macklin were hosts at supper at their quarters prior to the dance at the club. The affair was unique in detail with all the costumes of an old style inn carried out in the table appointments. Candles were placed in bottles, napkins were of paper and mess kits served as plates. Covers were placed for a number of the army set.

Captain John R. Dinsmore and Mrs. Dinsmore entertained at supper at their quarters the same evening in honor of their mother, Mrs. J. Haralson, Mrs. W. F. Neill and Mrs. John Oliver. Spring flowers were used throughout the rooms with the sunny dogwood blossom and pink azaleas making spots of beauty in tall jars and bowls. The table was covered with a Canton linen cloth and centered with a rose glass bowl filled with spring flowers and flanked by slender green tapers. The guests numbered 30 members of the garrison social circles.

Polo Game Today.

There will be a polo game played at the garrison this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock between the Corps Area team and the Post team. The Corps Area team will have Major Roland Gaugler at No. 1, Lieutenant William Biddle at No. 2, Major Gustav H. Franke at No. 3, and Major General Frank Ross McCoy at No. 4. The Post team will mount Lieutenant Thomas S. Timberman at No. 1, Captain James A. Donohue at No. 2, Captain Albert G. Wing at No. 3, and Major G. J. Tolson at No. 4.

Covers will be placed for General McCoy and Mrs. McCoy, Brigadier General Harold B. Fiske and Mrs. Fiske, Major Harry J. Maloney and Mrs. Maloney, Major Walter F. Macklin and Mrs. Macklin and the host and hostess.

Members of Junior Tallulah Circle Visit "Light in the Mountains"

Members of the Junior Tallulah circle of the Tallulah Falls school spent yesterday at the "Light in the Mountains," the school for under-privileged children, which is the object of organization for this group of young girls of the sophomore age at Washington seminary. Those motoring to Tallulah were: Misses Marion Smith, Lucia Smith, Charlotte Adams, Laura Troutman, Adelaide Fleming, Barbara Prater, Epsie Dallas, Caroline McCarley, Jane Thomas, Helen Parker, Frances Clarke, Joan Clarke, Jule McClatchey, Eleanor Terhune, Sarah Traynham, Mary Thiesen, Margaret McCarty, Deas Smith and Martha Hall, of Morristown, N. J. Accompanying the party as chaperones were Mrs. Percy Adams, Mrs. P. D. McCarley, Mrs. Milner, Mrs. J. Murchison Thomas, Mrs. Robert Parker and Mrs. Green Warren.

The girls were received at the school by Miss Anne Carrington Davis, principal, and Mrs. John K. Ottley and Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, president and vice president of the board of trustees. An additional welcome was given by every student of Tallulah, all of whom were delighted to receive a group of visitors in the school age. Luncheon was served in the long dining room of the Lucy Lester Willet house and a program of music by the Harmonica Club of the school was given during luncheon on the raised platform which is a feature of the dining hall. After lunch the students in groups escorted their guests through the crafts shops and work shops, the library, the dental clinic, the museum, the handsome auditorium, and the guest house with no special reference to the numerous classrooms, a familiar sight to both guests and hosts.

The boys had decked the school's famous mule, Frank Tallulah, in his gala colors and offered the young ladies a ride. Old Frank paid for a year's tuition of a mountain boy and is greatly valued. Besides his constant service Frank has to his credit the task of sledding down from the upper reaches of Cherokee mountain, all the great dark bowlders which constitute the main building material of the 11 units of Tallulah Falls school.

The officers of the Tallulah Falls Juniors were introduced and expressed pleasure in seeing the school and meeting their friends in its student body. The officers of the circle are: President, Miss Marion Smith; vice presidents, Miss Charlotte Adams and Miss Lucia Smith; secretary, Miss Laura Troutman; treasurer, Miss Ethelyn Johnson. The chaperones who were mothers of the juniors were also introduced and expressed interest in the "Light in the Mountains."

Mrs. Hobart, President General, Issues Message Today to D. A. R.

Mrs. L. F. Hobart, president general of D. A. R., issues the following message:

"Our hearts throb in adoration of spring. The amicable note of the bluebird—the bright gleam of the crocus announce its coming.

"April always reminds of the patriots who accomplished the independence of the American colonies. It revives our determination to retain that independence so dearly won. The passing of time does not require us to alter the doctrine of independence inherited from the heroes of '76.

"The 39th congress assembles in Constitution hall. This, interpreted, signifies that our deliberations are to be characterized by love of country. We journey to this paradise of nature from western slope, from eastern shores, from southern clime and northern boundary. That oneness of purpose substantiates national unification.

"Perhaps, in even greater measure, we are granted the peerless privilege of honoring the constitution of the United States in our approaching congress. The fact that the entire membership of our society has been a part in electing its representatives to participate in Continental Congress each recurring April demonstrates anew the principle of representative government and fair play existent in our republic.

"There is ever strict adherence to nationalism in our objectives. But does it not seem that the exigencies of the national situation plead with us to separate the unessential from the essential? At this congress and in the coming years let us number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

"The wisdom of cultivating integrity in the home, around the community, over the state, throughout the nation. The wisdom of gleaning truth from the experiences of the past and of applying simple, practical methods to our tasks in the interest of both present and future.

"Each congress implies exploration into new fields. We shall also be engaged in the consideration of former projects such as buildings and grounds, markers and monuments, museum and library, genealogical records and historical research, student loans and mountain schools, radio and magazines, tree planting and flower saving, conservation and thrift, home making and youth protection, cruiser building and indorsement of merchant marine, American and alien deportation, immigration restriction and manual distribution, adoption of national anthem and correct use of the flag, correspondence and safety of national ideals, support of military training, and advocacy of patriotic education. Thus we shall review our specific enterprises. To the thousands of new members who have entered our ranks this year I entreat you to enjoy the bounteous privileges accorded you through membership in our great national society.

"I invoke continuing concord for us all—both for those who have been associated with our patriotic endeavor since the inception of our society and for those who find this great joy in their first continental congress.

"For all your thoughtfulness and aid I can send no other message but thanks and thanks and ever thanks."

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 12.—At the April meeting of the Oglethorpe chapter, D. A. R., held on Thursday, April 3, at the Woman's Clubhouse, at which Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, Miss Blanche Gaffney and Mrs. Nell Frederick were hostesses, the literary feature of the meeting was the talk on "Skillful Gardeners," given by Mrs. James W. Callaway, following out a line of thought suggested by the year book, "Achievements of Southern Women." In her talk Mrs. Callaway told of Wormsloe at Savannah, Bonne Venture, Meadow Garden, at Augusta; Barnsley at Kingston, the Minus Garden at Clarksville, and other places of note, telling how the mistress of the home had planted love into each garden plot and ended with the exquisite poem "Not God in a Garden?"

Mrs. A. N. Murray, regent, presided, and Mrs. Halcombe Harper, recorded the minutes, and reports were heard from Mrs. Walter Woodall, delegate to the state conference in Newnan, and she also announced that Oglethorpe had won the $10 in gold offered by the state treasurer, Mrs. B. C. Ward, for first in the state to make the honor roll requirements.

Mrs. J. W. Shuessler, as the regent's alternate, gave a graphic description of the conference, giving many of the high points, and Mrs. A. N. Murray told of the compliment paid Mrs. Gaffney, state retiring regent, by J. A. Milspaugh, commander of the Sons of the Revolution, who was a distinguished guest for the conference. The regent told of the wire received from Miss Benning, who was unable to attend the conference; of the absence of Mrs. Julius Talmadge, past vice president general from Georgia, who was in mourning at this time and unable to be present; of the gift scholarship offered by Mrs. Gaffney; of the postponement of the publishing of the Oglethorpe chapter history, which will be published next year; of the Nancy Hart highway; of Georgia's lead in the patriotic education, seconded by Pennsylvania; of the stupendous amount of $30,495.42 expended by the Georgia D. A. R.; of the contribution for the Georgia book unit, and also of a contribution to the Georgia bell at Valley Forge; of the state regent and the advisory board to make up the honor roll requirements, these to include the Georgia bell, the Nancy Hart highway and the Valdosta loan fund; of Mrs. Van Landingham, of North Carolina, suggesting King's Mountain for a national park; of each chapter subscribing for the D. On the right is shown Miss Billie Matthews, of Hapeville, whose marriage to A. W. Goldschmid, of Memphis, Tenn., will be an event of April 20. In the lower picture is Mrs. Harry Winn Richardson, who before her marriage, April 5, was Miss Bertha Turner. Spanish Pupils Present Play.

"En Casa de Dana Paz," a play by Carolina Marcial Dorado, was presented before the Spanish Club yesterday afternoon by pupils of Senora De Millett, of the Spanish department of Washington seminary. Those taking part were Misses Mavis Gottheimer, Joan Clarke, Augusta King, Peggy Smith, Lili Furlong and Charlotte Beilfuss. Their quaint costumes, the Spanish guitar and dance, gave a distinctly realistic note which was still further emphasized by their ease and fluency in speaking the musical Spanish. Pupils of Miss Eugenie Dozier, of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, gave several artistic dances. Misses Katherine Alien and Kathleen Elkin gave a fan dance with the grace and rhythm of southern Spain, while Misses Mary Hurt, Ruth Williams, Margaret Morgan and Kathryn Echols presented a rollicking Mexican dance. Miss Eleanor McDonald accompanied both dances.

Charles F. Hoke, accompanied by Mrs. Hoke, sang "In Old Madrid," and "La Mariposa Envenenade." Mrs. J. C. Valleburona discussed present-day affairs in Chile and Mrs. J. E. Campbell related the custom in Spain of the queen's washing on Ash Wednesday the feet of 12 beggars. She also spoke most interestingly of the founding and building by the Spaniards of St. Augustine.

Mrs. Jeff Richardson exhibited some of her souvenirs from Havana, a fruit of the monkey tree and several coins of different denominations. Mrs. George Washington brought a bracelet of exquisite filagree, a rare old necklace with square cut cameo and a picture of a famous jai-a-lia player. This game so expectly played by the Basques, she informed her audience, originated with the Aztecs in Mexico and was taken to Spain in the days of the great conquisladores, there to become as distinctive and characteristic as the bull fight. The next meeting will be held Wednesday, April 23, at 3 o'clock in the Studio Arts building.

A "Beauty Shampoo" in 10 Minutes

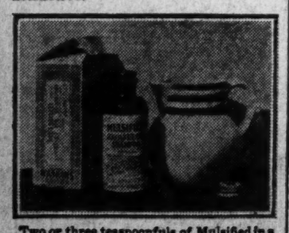

Quickly, Easily, at a few cents cost, you can have a Real "Beauty Shampoo" that will give Your Hair a Loveliness, quite unobtainable by Ordinary Washing.

YOU CAN SAVE TIME, expense and inconvenience, by adopting this simple method of "beauty shampooing" which gives truly professional results at home.

The beauty of your hair, its sparkle . . . its gloss and lustre . . . depends, almost entirely, upon the way you shampoo it.

A thin, oily film, or coating, is constantly forming on the hair. If allowed to remain, it catches the dust and dirt—hides the life and lustre—and the hair then becomes dull and unattractive.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a glass or pitcher with a little warm water added, makes an abundance of . . . soft, rich, creamy lather . . . which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing with it every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Only thorough shampooing will . . . remove this film . . . and let the sparkle, and rich, natural . . . color tones . . . of the hair show.

Ordinary washing fails to satisfactorily remove this film, because—it does not clean the hair properly.

Besides—the hair cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali, in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

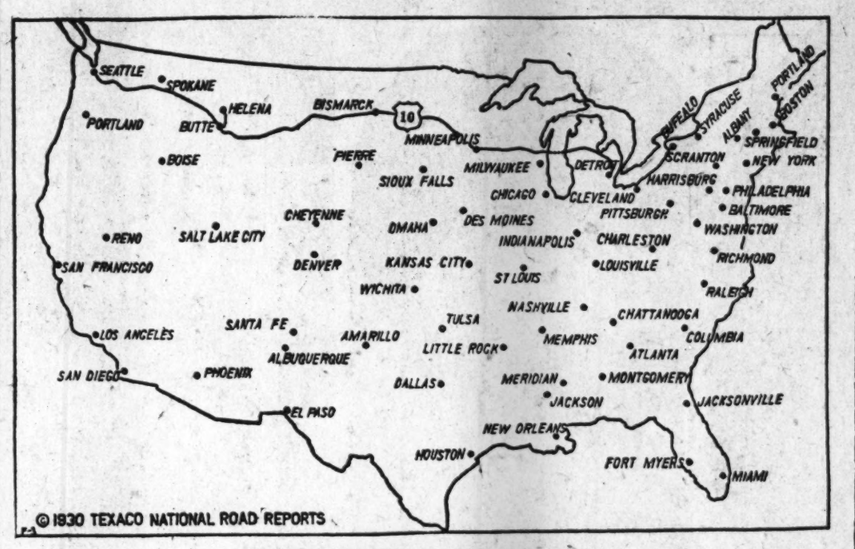

That is why women, by the thousands, who value beautiful hair, are using Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. It cleanses so thoroughly; is so mild and so pure, that it cannot possibly injure, no matter how often you use it.

You will notice the difference in the appearance of your hair the very first time you use Mulsified, for it will feel so delightfully clean, and be so soft, silky, and fresh-looking.

Try a Mulsified "Beauty Shampoo" and just see how quickly it is done. See how easy your hair is to manage, and how lovely and alluring it will look. See it sparkle—with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store, or toilet goods counter, . . . anywhere in the world.

Civilian and Military Horsemanship To Delight Horse Show Spectators

Interest grows apace in the horse show that will be the bright particular event of April 25 and 26 at Piedmont park, when the flower of civilian and military horsemanship will ride for the delectation of society and sportsmen.

Although the sale of tickets for this event opened only four days ago, the Young Matrons' Circle reports that a large number of boxes and many grandstand seats already have been sold. The circle, it will be remembered, handled the sale of tickets for last season's horse show and officials of the Horse Show Association were so delighted with results that they urged the young matrons to cooperate with them in a similar capacity this year. In return for their efforts the circle will receive a generous percentage of the gross receipts for Tallulah Falls school.

Box Holders for Show.

Among those who already have bought boxes are Hunt Chipley, president of the Atlanta Horse Show Association; John K. Ottley, former president of the association and a leading figure in horse show circles; General Frank McCoy, commander at the fourth corps area; General George Estes, commander of the post at Fort McPherson; Colonel Fitzhugh Lee, one of the most brilliant cavalry officers in the country and now actively in charge of the horse show as executive manager; General E. G. Lott, Colonel Duncan Major, Colonel Harry Tebbits, Judge Luther Rosser, R. H. Maddox, James L. Dickey, R. H. White, Jr., W. H. Kiser, Herbert Oliver, Walter Rich, Herbert Manson, DeWitt Young, Raymond Johns, Trammell Scott, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Acklin, Governor L. G. Hardman and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale. Mrs. Frederic Robinson and Mrs. Alec MacDougald will have a box together; another box party will include Mrs. Powdle Brown, Mrs. Arthur Lucas and Mrs. Tollman Williams.

Mrs. Bernard Neal is chairman of the box-seat sales for the Young Matrons' Circle and Mrs. A. A. Acklin has charge of the grandstand tickets. The boxes (each containing six seats) are $12 for each day; grandstand seats are $1 each.

Civilian entries will come from Augusta, Nashville, Chattanooga, Columbia, Birmingham, New Orleans and Thomasville. With so much competition looming it is not surprising that local riders are brushing up on their horsemanship. Not a trail or bridle path but is working overtime in anticipation of the show.

Military Contingent.

Military contingents from Fort McPherson, Fort Oglethorpe and Fort Benning will add much to the color of the show. One of the most brilliant contributions will be the spectacular exhibitions of the sixth United States cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe. The military units will feature some of the show world's most famous jumpers and several celebrated teams of polo ponies.

The trophies are unusually handsome and the cash prizes are an attraction in themselves. Herbert Oliver, chairman of trophies, plans to exhibit the cups in a prominent downtown window immediately upon their arrival late this week.

Atlanta Conservatory To Give Recital.

A recital will be given by the faculty and artist students of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music Monday evening, April 14, at 8:30 o'clock at the Studio Club, 1041-2 Forsyth street. Those taking part will be Miss Eugenia Dozier, head of the department of dancing; Miss Mary Lansing, head of the voice department; Miss Agnes Adams, teacher of violin; Miss Louisa Wicker Allensworth, soprano soloist; Miss Winifred Byrd Hopkins, prominent Atlanta soloist. Miss Mary Lansing is chairman of the program. Miss J. Clyde Withers and Miss Hazel Wood will be the accompanists. Admission to members will be free and to the public will be 50 cents.

Mrs. Ula L. Manning Is Honor Guest.

SMYRNA, Ga., April 12.—A social affair of Saturday afternoon was the delightful tea at which Mrs. Annie Dea Stewart and Mrs. Frank W. Manning entertained at the home of Mrs. Manning on Marietta road in honor of Mrs. Ula L. Manning, a recent bride, formerly Miss Nanette Sparks, of Russellville, Ala., who is the guest of Mrs. Parks Manning, of Smyrna.

The home was artistically decorated for the occasion with quantities of crab apple blossoms, the color motif of pink being artistically carried out. Throughout the dining room silver candlesticks holding burning pink tapers, and the handsomely appointed table was overlaid with a Spanish cutwork cloth and adorned in the center by a silver bowl filled with an attractive arrangement of apple blossoms. A silver service graced either end of the table, encircled by silver candlesticks holding the slender burning tapers tied with tulle. The mints and other delicacies carried out the chosen color motif.

Mrs. A. L. Oslin, Jr., and Mrs. Pat M. Edwards poured tea. Others assisting in entertaining were Misses Judith Rice, Elizabeth Griffin, Mary Green, Mrs. O. G. Carpenter, Mrs. Warren C. Cantrell, of Carrollton, and Mrs. C. B. Davis, mother of Mrs. Frank Manning.

Mrs. Mann Elected President Of Service Star Legion in Dalton

Mrs. W. E. Mann, of Dalton, Ga., was elected president of the Service Star Legion of the World War, Georgia division, at the annual meeting of the organization held last Wednesday and Thursday in the historic town of Dalton, with the Whitfield County chapter as hostess. Other officers elected were: First vice president, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Decatur; second vice president, Mrs. Stewart D. Brown, Royston; third vice president, Mrs. Charles L. Moore, Milledgeville; fourth vice president, Mrs. T. R. Owsley, Fort Valley; fifth vice president, Mrs. J. T. Johnson, West Point; recording secretary, Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, Atlanta; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. P. Smith, Dalton; treasurer, Mrs. Clark Edwards, Jr., Elberton; historian, Mrs. Marcus W. Beck, Atlanta; auditor, Mrs. T. R. McKenzie, Montezuma; registrar, Mrs. W. H. George, Vienna; parliamentarian, Mrs. Howard McCall, Atlanta; Gold Star division, Mrs. James Stanley Moore, Atlanta.

This above slate was presented by the nominating committee and unanimously elected. The newly elected officers were installed by Mrs. Marcus W. Beck, national officer and president emeritus for life of Atlanta chapter.

Mrs. L. P. Rosser, retiring state president, presided over the business sessions of the meeting and Mrs. Crisp L. Bradley, president of the Whitfield County chapter, acted as the official hostess.

An executive board meeting was held at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Clarence H. Fraker, one of the state vice presidents, followed by a reception to the delegates, members and guests. The inspirational meetings were held in front of a large service flag of white with a red border. In the center were 16 gold stars for the Whitfield county boys who made the supreme sacrifice. Banked at each end and circled around them were 700 blue stars, one for each soldier of Whitfield county who returned from the World War disabled.

Special guests of the convention were three Gold Star mothers who will make the trip to the battlefields of France in July as guests of the government.

The meeting Thursday morning was opened with the exemplification of the ritual by the Dalton chapter, after which Mrs. Crisp L. Bradley, president of that chapter, welcomed the convention.

Mrs. Rosser's Report.

Mrs. Charles Hollingsworth, state chairman of the Gold Star division and an active member of the hostess chapter, introduced the state president, Mrs. L. P. Rosser, who expressed pleasure of the officers and delegates for the privilege of meeting with such an active loyal chapter in such an historic place. She gave a resume of the work under her regime, one of the most outstanding things accomplished being the establishment of a scholarship for the child of disabled veterans at the George W. Williams home for children in Nacoochee valley. Another work accomplished was the establishment of a definite fund for emergency relief, to be handled by the state chairman of relief. She concluded her address by saying: "No organization stands higher in the minds of the people than the Service Star Legion, for its ideals and high purposes. We are living in a world full of mysteries, problems and perplexities and things that try our very souls. Let us keep in mind that simple goodness is the greatest thing in life, and stick to the ideals of our organization, working along the lines of education and child welfare, ever alert to put down anything detriments to our country and disrespectful to our flag; always lending a helping hand to the sick and needy ex-service man and his family, bearing love and charity to all in our hearts, and never forgetting those who laid down their lives for us."

Mrs. W. F. Melton, past state president, read a poem as a tribute to the more than 700 boys represented by the stars on the Whitfield county flag.

Interesting reports were read by the delegates from different chapters, showing a great increase in activities and much worth-while work accomplished. The chairman of standing committees also made very splendid reports.

The report of the chairman of relief, Mrs. Howard A. Payne, of Elberton, showed that the needs of the ex-service man and his family is not on the decrease, as constant calls come for help and aid.

The report of the chairman of education, Mrs. Frank Allcorn, of Atlanta, told of the co-operations of the Service Star Legion with the state board of education in the recent drive for reducing illiteracy in the state; of the joy and pleasure the little girl at Nacoochee is to the directors of the school, and of the progress she is making.

Mrs. B. A. Tyler, of Dalton, chairman of vigilance, reported a number of medals given in schools for good citizenship.

Mrs. Lewis Morrison, of Decatur, chairman of memorial days, reported chapter as regularly observing memorial days, and co-operating with other patriotic organizations in the observance of their memorial days.

A pause in the business was made at noon, and an impressive memorial service in charge of Miss Carrie Green, of Dalton, was held in memory of the members who had died. While the convention stood at attention, a white flower was placed in a silver loving cup as each name was called, then one was placed for the possible unknown one, and one in memory of the beloved founder and leader of the organization, the late Mrs. Samuel D. Jones. This was followed by a prayer, after which Sydney Davies, a bugler, sounded taps. Mrs. C. L. Hamilton gave an appropriate reading from Olice Shreiner, followed by a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. H. P. Manley at the piano.

Mrs. Rosser Honored.

At 1 o'clock luncheon was served by the Dalton chapter, during the course of which several distinguished guests were introduced, and the motion made and carried that the name of the retiring president, Mrs. L. P. Rosser, be placed on the patrons' and founders' roll of the national organization. After luncheon reports were resumed.

The state historian, Mrs. Marcus W. Beck, read most interestingly the history, telling of the new chapters formed and the outstanding work of the organization.

Resolutions were passed on the recent death of the late Samuel D. Jones, husband of the beloved founder and president of the Service Star Legion, and friend of all Service Star Legion women and ex-service men.

Resolutions were sent to the Red Cross headquarters asking return of Mrs. D. M. Robinson as director of Red Cross work at Hospital No. 48 when it reopens in July.

An outstanding example of a devoted Service Star mother, was that of Mrs. Irby, mother of the president, Mrs. Crisp L. Bradley, who, when introduced, told of having made 15 trips to Atlanta, personally looking over 85,000 cards of Georgia boys, picking out all Bartow county and Whitfield county boys who were enlisted in the World War, and of having had their records straightened and their names enrolled in their respective county courthouses, that in the future no one should have to hunt their record or doubt their patriotism.

Realizing the colossal work Mrs. Irby had accomplished for Bartow and Whitfield counties, Adjutant General Parker has had the records checked and now the lists are available by counties. The Service Star Legion historian, Mrs. Marcus Beck, of Atlanta, will urge every county to avail themselves of these records and verify them and have corrections made.

"Atlanta Day" Declared for April 17 At Martha Berry School in Rome

Thursday, April 17, will be Atlanta Day at the Berry school, and a number of men and women will leave by motor at 8:30 o'clock to spend the day at the school, the occasion being the ground-breaking for the first building in the country to be dedicated to American mothers. A great educator has said that this will be the beginning of a mothers' building on the campus of every girls' school of importance in the United States. Taking the highways to Marietta, Cartersville and Rome the drive will be entirely over a concrete road, about 70 miles. The guests will register at the first building inside the "gates of the school," and the program for the day, including the luncheon, will be given them there.

All reservations must be made not later than Tuesday morning, April 15. Those wishing to join this party will communicate with Mrs. Frank Inman, Hemlock 0228, or Mrs. Dan Harris, Hemlock 0155, or Mrs. Henry Scott, Walnut 6999. It is the hope of Martha Berry Circle that many men and women will lay aside their duties and recreations and show their interest in this way in what this wonderful woman, Miss Martha Berry, is doing for the state of Georgia and the southland.

The Old China—Its Changing Aspect Is Typified by the New Freedom of Its Women

Drawn by Cyrus L. Baldridge

Daughters of China's Revolution

By Edgar Snow

IF BY chance you are ever in Shanghai on a Sunday take heed of what any one asks you to do—unless it is to go to that rambling old baronial edifice which was once the mansion of a Scottish taipan, but which for longer than people remember has been the Majestic hotel. For years nonsense and sentiment have been whispered down its thickly carpeted corridors. In the cool paths of its lush gardens that in summer are drenched with the scent of oleanders, romance has walked, while under a yellow China moon love, for a fortunate few, has been something very real and tender.

But the truth of the matter appears to be that the Majestic is one of the few fine things that ever happened in this city of ugly sin and sinful ugliness—and of the two evils people say the dearth of beauty is much more difficult to bear. And so that is perhaps why every one admires the mellow loveliness of the Majestic. That—and its Sunday tea dances, which are really the only reward worth traveling to this end of the earth to enjoy.

And out there on the waxy expanse of the ballroom floor, weaving artless patterns between artfully arranged intervals of light and shadow, dancing to western music played on western reed and brass and string, New Lady China glides with the superb grace of a tranquil swan on ripple-less water. New Lady China, who has learned to use her feet. New Lady China, who has ceased to envy her western sister and has begun to emulate her.

Dancing, of course, is but one of the manifestations of this interesting new creature. But there is nothing which offers surer, more tangible evidence that the Chinese woman of today has emancipated herself from the strict code of conduct that fettered her honorable ancestors.

When one sees this modern Chinese girl unashamed and publicly embraced by a partner who is frequently a foreigner, following with ease the astonishing steps of the latest imported fox-trot, one begins to realize the distance that separates her from her mother. Consider the widely different circumstances under which these two women grew out of adolesence. . . .

When the mother was born her father's friend probably offered him condolence by assuring him that it was a calamity likely to occur in any gods-fearing Chinese family. Weeping at the misfortune, his wife humbly begged her husband's forgiveness, while with joss and paper prayers she supplicated heaven that the next arrival might be a boy child.

She betrothed when she was very young. She had nothing to say about it; neither had her husband. The marriage was arranged quietly by their parents—what could children know of such matters? And love? Ah, but love was something for the poets to think about—the worthless fellows, And if, when she went to the bridal chamber, she had any schooling beyond the mere marital and household affairs she was the exception, even among daughters of the rich. The mother has bound feet. So that all men might know her in later life for a Chinese and not a barbarian or a Manchu they were broken when she was a baby, the toes turned back and bandaged against the arches. Nevertheless, with surprising agility she totters today on the funny stumps; with beauty, some say, for the tiny, mincing step of lily feet was the ideal toward which every gentle lady once aspired.

Her hair she wears in the old style, stretched back tightly so that no wrinkles appear in her forehead, smoothed down with the bark of slippery elm and caught in a little whorl at the nape of her neck, where a jade hairpin finally concludes the simple masterpiece. But alas, as a result of this stern coiffure the years have left her with little hair. Baldness among Chinese women is as common as obesity among the bishops of Anatole France.

She wears the modern skirt, but peeping from beneath it one sees the ends of wide silken trousers modestly covering her ankles, as old custom decreed. She is still as slender as a girl, and because exercise in her life has never meant much more than the lifting of a porcelain tea pot, her shoulders are only a little less narrow than her chest. Certainly here is a fragile, utterly feminine bit of femininity.

Yet she is no fool, this woman. She has reared a family, given sons as well as her modern daughter to her husband, and she knows how to keep their loyalty despite conflicting opinions on many matters. That the old order is doomed she understands, and she resents it—but is that not ever the privilege of age? She has to be clever to keep harmony in her home, which nowadays is forever the scene of compromise between senility and youth. By her children her ideas are regarded as archaic. But they remember the virtue of filial piety and are gentle to her, and kind.

Now observe this mother's dancing daughter. What a different era has opened up for this eager young lady! Since her birth—20 years or more ago, she has had almost every opportunity that her mother was denied.

She has freedom of speech and—perhaps more important—freedom of feet. Exercising the first privilege, she talks with authority on subjects of which her mother knows nothing, dismissing art, science, religion, birth control or what you care to discuss with an epigram and a sigh.

In all probability she is a graduate of a modern finishing school, of which there are a great number in Shanghai and other urban centers. She may speak English—understandable English—with the natural linguistic gift of her race. And at present she may be either planning a trip abroad or contemplating entering a western university to prepare for a career. Although she is of marriageable age—may be engaged, indeed, to a man of her choice—the fact that the marriage has not yet taken place does not disturb her in the least. She is full of self-confidence.

As for the emancipation of her feet—what new conquests this has made attainable! She walks with firm, strong steps that seem to symbolize her newly acquired independence—which she accepts as a right, not a concession. Before she danced she learned to run. In school she played basketball, hockey, hand-ball, tennis—all the outdoor games western girls know. And she played them well.

As the music ceases and our modern young woman returns to the table, note the poise of her, the lithe, healthy grace of her. Incredibly narrow is her waist, for the Chinese girl inherits the figure that western women endure a punitive diet to achieve. But broad are her shoulders; exercise has strengthened them. And her arms and legs no longer are "bamboo shoots" which must be hidden from eyes, but prideful limbs, sinewy, shapely, strong. If her short skirt shocks the older people a little—why, so does her bobbed hair, and what of it? the sang vivre of Oriental feminity. Her prototypes are legion. It is she and her kind who have set up a new standard for young women of the vast middle class—the bourgeois, if you like—in China.

The modern girl is most noticeable in the treaty ports. In thousands she exists in Shanghai, Tientsin, Peiping, Tsingtao, Canton, Foochow, Amoy, Nanking, Hankow—wherever foreign influence has been most impressive. But she is common throughout all the provinces today; her characteristics are recognized as dominant in the new woman of China.

Movies, radio, gramaphone, modern literature, returned students and the "equality of sexes" slogan of the Kuomintang have proved too devastating a combination for the nearly impregnable conservatism of the Chinese people. Nothing can stop the progress of this new little lady. Looking at her in that very same Majestic one afternoon, a friend once remarked to me:

"There, it seems quite obvious to me, is where the real revolution has taken place. There is the most definite proof that even in China the old order changeth."

The modernization movement began soon after the fall of the Ching Dynasty, in 1911, but not until 1926, at the opening of the Nationalist Revolution, did it begin to assume its present radical trend. When the Nationalists inaugurated their campaign they did everything possible to enlist the aid and interest of women. For the first time they were whole-heartedly urged to participate in the making of new China.

Many of them joined the Kuomintang—the political party found by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, which engineered the revolution and today rules the country. And during the stirring days of the Nationalists' "Northern Expedition" these enthusiastic young patriots—many of them girls in their 'teens—underwent experiences which brought them to the full realization of the joy and power of a life of freedom and action.

As nurses, clerks, propagandists, teachers, they served their party. There were even some who, side by side with southern youth, marched as soldiers against militarism. Two famous women's battalions which were formed in Canton and Hankow during the revolution still exist as the "Dare to Die" reserve corps.

At the close of the unification campaign the thousands of young women who had helped to establish the new regime demanded recognition for their effort. Today the feminine influence in the Kuomintang is affirmed by their presence in large numbers in all the government offices, where they act in many official capacities—as directors and vice directors of bureaus, department heads and secretaries. Women even have been appointed as judges, and Miss (Dr.) Soumey Tcheng recently was chosen as China's minister to France. Besides those employed as executives, there are hundreds of clerks and stenographers.

The central executive committee, the party hierarchy which holds the final veto power and shapes the policies of the national government, has four women members. The oldest of them, Mrs. Sun Yat-sen (Soong Ching-ling), is the widow of China's new patriot-deity, the so-called "Father of the Republic." She is a graduate of Wesleyan college, Macon, Ga., Her popularity with the Chinese masses perhaps is second only to that of her late husband. And just as the deified Sun Yat-sen is worshiped by thousands of impressionable Chinese boys, his widow has become the model for the young women.

This is not altogether satisfactory to the older people, when they remember that, in order to marry her, Sun "scrapped" the broken-footed bride of his youth; for divorce, while theoretically a simple matter in China, in the past was so frowned upon by public opinion that it was literally impossible. Sun and his second bride, Soong Ching-ling, had to run the gauntlet of public distaste, but both of them have emerged today with their fame undimmed.

What Sun Yet-sen had done with impunity, thought hundreds of his followers, they also would do. Dissatisfied with similar bargains which their parents had made for them, acolytes of the "late leader" have followed his example. Divorce has become common; among the radicals it has become even popular. "Lotus wives" are being abandoned for more youthful mates with free feet and modern ideas. The divorcing has not all been done by men, either; there are cases, under the new laws, of women ridding themselves of "unfaithful" husbands—incongruous as this may sound in a nation where concubines have been the male prerogative for centuries.

Romantic marriages were frequent during the Nationalist Revolution. It was inevitable that susceptible young men and women, thrown in daily contact as workers in the Kuomintang campaign, should fall in love; and there were many who went forth free, yellow and 21 and came back with marital ties to which their parents could give nothing but chagrined aquiescence.

Among those who followed the precedent set by Sun Yat-sen was Chiang Kai-shek, the youthful military leader of the allied nationalist armies, who is president of the Nanking government. Now many assert the "Ningpo Napoleon," as Chiang facetiously is called, merely seized an opportunity to weld himself more closely to the family of the Kuomintang godhead when in his second marriage he annexed Soong Mei-ling, sister-in-law of Sun Yat-sen. But this woman who now reigns as the First Lady of New China is the most striking example of the westernized Chinese girl who is making history here today.

President Chiang Kai-shek and His Wife

Because of the circumstances under which she was married, the new Madame Chiang has had to face the odium of disapproval from conservative circles which still regard divorce as a thing of evil imported from across the seas. At present tongues still wag and the mossbacks still gossip, but this does not seem to disconcert Soong Mei-ling. She is too absorbed with the problems of her own generation—the youth that is building national character for Chinese women. Besides her official duties—she is another member of the central executive committee—she is busily engaged in creating a new esprit de femme. One of the most hopeful indications of the existence among intelligent Chinese women of a growing consciousness of responsibility in rejuvenating their country, is found in women's organizations which Madame Chiang has helped bring into being throughout China.

Mme. Sun Yat-sen, Widow of China's New Deity—and a graduate of Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia

Through her efforts a Soldier's Relief Association, first established at the capital, has become a national institution, embracing branches in all important cities. Originally organized along lines somewhat similar to the American Women's Auxiliary Corps, which functioned during the World War, this Chinese Women's S. R. A. has expanded to include such undertakings as free schools for war orphans, hospitals, schools for the training of nurses and primary teachers and the erection of model homes for workmen.

Some months ago, wishing to write an article about the work of this association, I asked for the necessary information. Although I am certain that I shall fall from grace if she sees this—for she abhors personal publicity—I cannot refrain from quoting a few lines from Madame Chiang's letter, which is before me now. Written in English, which, being a graduate of Wellesley college, she speaks and writes perfectly, it seems to me to suggest a sharper picture of the mental background of a modern Chinese woman than anything I could say. The fact that she typed the letter herself also is typical of the self-sufficiency of her new countrywomen.

"We sent telegrams," she writes, "to every province, asking the leading women of each place to form organizations similar to the S. R. A., which we had begun in Nanking. In each case the result proved most gratifying, many branch associations having been formed. We feel, therefore, that apart from the actual good realized by the work of the branch associations, the appeal made by the head office to women all over the country has brought us into closer co-operation and is a step toward awakening the interest of our countrywomen in the affairs of China."

And, as revealing the thinking processes of this First Lady, note this paragraph:

"Somewhere I have read that a woman is first of all a creature of emotion and that her emotion must be awakened before her reasoning functions. Sounds a bit Nietzscheesque! Be that as it may, I have discovered that to arouse interest among ourselves the first step is to awaken the heart. This sounds like sob stuff and I dislike the tremolo chord, but I think it is understood what I am trying to say After all, humanity—sympathy with people in pain and distress—can hold together a group of women who otherwise, because of differences in training and outlook on life, have little in common. I have found this clearly illustrated by the women of our association, some of whom are old-fashioned wives of high officials of the government, others of whom are modern wives of returned students."

Membership in the association is made up mostly of married women, which in itself is a fact of significance. Under the old system, when a woman married she went into exile, having, outside her own family, no contracts with the world. Nowadays the life of the Chinese matron is of broader social importance. She has her clubs, her political affiliations, her charitable enterprises—and, of course, her machang and tea parties—just as the modern western wife.

A most interesting new class of femininity in China correspond to our own "career woman" at home. Generally products of western education (received either in China or abroad), they are found in all the professions and seem to prefer to remain unmarried, finding that there are still too many conventions which wives must observe and which would hinder them in carrying on their work. There are hundreds of women doctors, lawyers, scientists, educators, writers and even a few engineers and architects. In Tientsin I visited a private hospital housing more than 200 patients which is run by a woman surgeon who has a dozen male doctors on her staff. In Shanghai the famous Bethel hospital is run by Dr. Mary Stone and her sister.

They have entered the field of journalism, too. The editor of the most popular paper in North China is a young woman who succeeded her husband after he had been executed for subversive writing directed against the reign of Chang Tso-lin. At the nation's capital the head of the United Press Bureau is a 25-year-old slip of a girl who received her education at the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

In the elementary schools women have almost replaced male teachers, while a generation ago they were regarded as curiosities. The president of the large Gin-ling college at Nanking is Dr. Lu, a cultured and charming woman who received her Ph. D. from an American university only a few years ago. And in the private schools there are dozens of female principals.

Women are coming into their own in business, too. Wing On's, Sun Sun's and Sincere's, the three largest department stores in Shanghai, employ hundreds of

World's Largest Fortune

$1,500,000,000 Estate of Abdul, Called "the Damned," Will Bring Life Back to Tragic Eyes of Circassian Beauties Who Have Wandered About Like Lost Souls Since Despot Died

List of Names of Those to Share in Vast Wealth Reads Like Characters From Arabian Nights Entertainment—Followed Their Master, Who Preferred Willowy Blondes, Into Exile

The Sultan sent word by his chief eunuch to the harem that all who wished to join him in exile should make ready to follow him at once.

... was a veritable bedlam into which the messenger walked, for the women were running about and screaming like a pack of wild animals.

BY PADRAIC KING.

OUT of Istanboul, most ancient of Turkish communities, where intrigue walks hand in hand with the witchery of the east, comes a story as picturesque as any in the Arabian Nights entertainment.

It is the romance of the world's greatest fortune.

After a five years' legal battle, according to recent news dispatches, the nine surviving widows and 13 children of Abdul Hamid II, the last sultan of the Ottoman Empire, are to receive $50,000,000 from his $1,500,000,000 estate.

It was some 21 years ago, April, 1909, to be exact, after reigning a third of a century as an all powerful Oriental despot, that the ill-fated sultan, who was known as Abdul the Damned, lost his throne and was cast into a Turkish prison, where he was to languish until the day of his death, February 11, 1918.

And while the tyrant had been gathered unto his Islamic gods, his spell for evil continued to manifest itself from beyond the grave. When all that was mortal of Abdul Hamid was entombed in the mausoleum of his grandfather, the Sultan Mahmud, the children and harem favorites, who had accompanied him into his prison exile, were turned adrift upon a war-maddened world. Tragic, indeed, was to be the fate of the women of the sultan—wives, concubines and slaves—who now for the first time found themselves face to face with a new life, the hard, uncompromising life of the twentieth century. They were children of the ancient glories and traditions of the star and crescent. All had lived in Oriental luxury and idleness. Even as companions of the sultan, during his nine years' imprisonment, they had enjoyed a life of comparative ease and pleasure.

Rude Awakening.

But the dream of the voluptuaries was now at an end, and rude was the awakening of the harem favorites. Death, through the poison cup—coffee flavored with aconite—spared many of the aged and unbeautiful from the terrors of the alien world, while not a few of the youthful charmers found their way into the underworld of the capitals of Europe.

Some of the women of the harem, the most courageous of the lot, struggled grimly with poverty and hardships, yet never despairing that the day would come when they would share part of the huge fortune left by their lord and master.

And for those of the household of the once Imperial Turkey, who weren't sucked under in the whirlpool of hopelessness, the day of rejoicing and happiness is at hand. The news out of Athens, Constantinople and London is that Greece is prepared to pay $50,000,000 to the legal heirs of Abdul Hamid II.

The names of those who are to share in this huge fortune read like a list of characters from the adventures of Haroun-al-Raschid. They are: Prince Selim, Prince Ahmed and Princess Zelie and their mothers, Bedrifelek, Abdul's favorite wife.

Prince Abdul Kadir and Princess Naimee, the children of his second favorite, Bidar, who is dead.

Princess Naile, Prince Nourreddin, Princess Aichee, Prince Abid, Princess Refie, Princess Chadie and Prince Ardurrahim.

Fatima, Behidje, Mouchifika, Nadjie, Saziguer, Emsalinour and Peiveste, the sultan's other wives and their respective mothers, and Prince Bourhanneddin and his mother, the tenth of Abdul's consorts.

Abdul, in the course of his long reign over the Ottoman Empire, acquired by "gifts" and other means from his "devoted subjects" immense wealth and great estates.

When he was deposed by the young Turks in 1909, his private fortune, which was then estimated at $50,000,000, and his estates, which brought him a revenue of about $18,000,000 a year, was confiscated.

That property included: Lands in Thessaly, Greece; almost half the province of Salonica, a large portion of Macedonia; extensive holdings in Syria, Mesopotamia, Palestine and Cyprus, the island of Tassos, where an Anglo-German syndicate is developing the zinc deposits, and the Mosul oil fields.

Aside from these holdings, an inventory taken shortly after his ousting as ruler of Turkey brought to light the sum of $450,000 in gold. This money was cached in two safes, which had been cemented in secret walls of the Yildiz palace. In 11 burlap sacks, in another secret recess, the sum of $2,200,000 was found, as well as $9,000,000 in gilt-edged British securities. On deposit with the Ottoman bank in Constantinople Abdul had $250,000, while in the banks of London he had stored away for emergency purposes $5,405,000.

He was not only a billionaire, but the greatest grafter that ever flashed across the world's political horizon.

When it came to filling his strong box with gold, and keeping it filled, Abdul Hamid stooped at nothing. He was the original of the "get the money" boys, being "outgammoned," as he once complained, "only by the tricky bankers of London's Lombard street." He forced the promoters of the Hedjaz railway to disgorge the sum of $3,500,000 for merely affixing his signature to a concession. He also put in his pocket $1,000,000 of the funds which had been gathered for the relief of the Turkish soldiers in the Greek war of 1897. These were but minor samples of his grafting propensities.

Post-war treaties compelled Turkey to hand over to Greece certain territories which were once the sultan's private property. The Mosul oil fields were dealt with by apportionment to companies which included the Royal Dutch Shell, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, as well as the French government.

The treaty of Lausanne of 1913, however, provided that the property of Turkish nationals was to be respected by the various countries which took over parts of the Ottoman Empire, and it is in partial settlement of these claims that the heirs of Abdul are to receive the sum of $50,000,0000.

Oil.

The wives and children of the last sultan of Turkey have always protested that the confiscation of the ruler's property was illegal, and in their efforts to establish their contention they enlisted the aid of British and American bankers.

And as oil in almost unbelievable amounts was involved in the controversy, it was not difficult to interest the financiers of New York and London in he woes and troubles of the heirs of Abdul.

First the Anglo-Hellenic Finance Corporation was formed, and then the Valideh Trust, Limited. Then for some reason, not yet explained, the American bankers withdrew from these corporations, but the British held tight, for, after all, oil was oil. As a result Aegean Trust, Limited, of Westminsten London, was formed, taking over the interests of the New York financial group.

And it is this British financial organization which has brought about the settlement between Greece and the heirs of the sultan. Its task, however, has been difficult. It was only after securing the good offices of a French jurist of world-wide repute that the differences between the heirs were composed and a common demand made for recognition.

For five years the negotiations have been in progress. Immense sums have been expended in searching for records of the sultan's properties and a collection of 50,000 title deeds has been secured. In addition the trust has had to find a monthly sum of about $5,000 to enable some of the imperial heirs to live.

Men and women reared in the Oriental luxury and splendor of the Yildiz Kiosk, the sultan's palace in Constantinople, and waited upon by slaves to whom their slightest wish was law, have been hard put to it to find enough to eat.

Once the settlement is made with Greece, the claims in respect of the properties in Palestine, Syria, Iraq and the Mosul oil fields will become the object of legal consideration. The property in Iraq alone, consisting as it does of oil fields, has an estimated value of $1,000,000,000.

The arrangement between the sultan's heirs and the Aegean Trust, Limited, of London, according to well established reports, is that the latter shall receive 35 per cent of the value of all properties recovered. This means that a group of London bankers will eventually dominate the richest oil fields in the world.

With the favorites of the harem of the late Turkish sultan once more in the news, there has been a revival of the memories of the life once followed by these poor creatures, during the days when Abdul Hamid ruled the Ottoman Empire.

All of the wives of the Turkish despot were slaves. In fact, nearly all the women of Abdul's harem, nearly 400 in number, were Circassian slaves, many of whom were the most beautiful in the world. Their chief beauty is in their eyes and hair.

Abdul Hamid chose he women of his harem purely upon the word of his courtiers. He never saw them until one of his pashas had bought and paid for her at his command, and ushered her into his royal presence. There was a standing order that whenever a member of the imperial household saw a queenly bit of femininity, he was to lose no time nor spare any money in effecting a deal for her addition to the harem. Thus each member of the sultan's household, as he went about the streets of Constantinople, kept his eye peeled for beautiful women. The sultan, unlike most Turks, did not like fat women. He insisted on his beauties being of the willowy and lissome type, and rather tall. He had no use whatever for women with large feet. Brunettes held for him but small appeal. He was passionately fond of blond girls, often paying huge prices for them.

Not Cosmopolitan in Taste.

The many stories that Abdul's harem included women of all nation swere without foundation, for he had no use for foreign beauties. American and French women were especially repugnant to him. He really admired but the one type, the Circassian slave.

Harem life, as it existed under the rule of Abdul Hamid, was as degrading as it was boring. The beauties were versed in those accomplishments that were only the veneer of education. They were taught French and music, but few knew enough to think.

In fact, they were not permitted to think. They had no cares, no responsibilities. From morning until night they had nothing to do, save preening themselves like peacock. They spent all of their time in perfumed baths and at their toilets. Eating sweets and smoking cigarettes also helped them to pass away the boring hours.

To prevent jealous outbursts on the part of his harem beauties, Abdul Hamid quartered his women in different kiosks, or small individual houses. He never paid them visits, but invited, rather, commanded them to call upon him. Such commands were awaited with eagerness by the many women inmates of the harem.

When he wished to enjoy the society of one of his four legal wives, or of his 400 others, he dispatched the chief eunuch to bid the honored one to make herself as beautiful as possible, because she was to attend upon his imperial majesty. That this chief eunuch must have served his master faithfully almost goes without saying, for when this functionary died his estate totaled $2,000,000.

Abdul Hamid did not let his harem favorites want for anything. He was extremely generous to his Circassian beauties. If they displeased him, or age was beginning to take toll of their beauty, he did not bundle them up in a sack and dump them into the Bosphorus. He just simply married them to one of his pashas. And the pashas never rebelled, for the sultan never gave away one of his women without a bountiful gift of cash.

If Abdul Hamid tired of one of the women, and he did not marry her off, she would receive no more summons to the royal kiosk. But she was not expelled from the harem, she just remained on, enjoying luxury until she died. And when the time came for a harem beauty to depart this life, she was buried, as was then the custom in Turkey, not in a casket, but on a mattress. The face that once pleased the sulton was covered with silk, hidden from the gaze of all other men in death, as in life.

Without a doubt Abdul Hamid II was one of the world's wickedest men, and the most abject of cowards. He had all the cruelty of a Nero, without the courage. He was extremely suspicious of every one with whom he came in contact, for he lived in mortal fear of assassination. He always went about armed, carrying two pistols, which he was ready to use on the slightest pretext. He killed his gardener, in almost cold-blooded fashion. While strolling through the imperial gardens, Abdul Hamid came upon his workman, who was on his knees planting some flowers. As soon as the gardener realized who was behind him he rose quickly to salute his sovereign. The sultan, mistaking the movement for an attempt on his life, whipped out his revolver and shot the man dead.

Ordered to Abdicate.

When on the night of his abdication, April 24, 1909, he was peremptorily ordered to abdicate his throne in favor of his brother, Reshad, Mahomet V., and told that his mad rule had come to an end, he whined and begged for mercy. He begged his captors that he be permitted to live in one of his beautiful palaces. His request was curtly refused. He pleaded that his life be spared, and that every precaution be taken to guard him from an assassin's bullet. Without much ceremony he was dispatched from the Yildiz palace to the Villa Allatini in Salonica, and there he remained until the fall of 1912. He was not to be returned to Constantinople and kept a prisoner in a ramshackle palace for the next six years. And here he died, February, February 11, 1918.

On the night he was being made ready for the trip to Salonica, he fell to the floor in a wild convulsion. When he recovered consciousness, he sent word by his chief eunuch to the harem that all who wished to join him in exile should make ready to follow him at once. It was a veritable bedlam into which the messenger walked, for the women were running about and screaming like a pack of wild animals. As soon as the official explained the object of his call, silent weeping replaced the shouting and screaming.

In the wake of the big black, three sultanas, six concubines, and a retinue in all of 27 persons, none of whom were especially young or beautiful. But the children of these harem favorites were to blossom into charming young womanhood during the next nine years—years of long exile.

And when the gates of Yildiz palace swung open to permit Abdul Hamid and the women to depart from the scenes of their former glories for a prison in Salonica, the street mobs openly jeered and scoffed at their one-time ruler. After the exit of the sultan from his palace, some 300 women ruefully filed through the gates to freedom. But their freedom was not long-lived for most of the harem beauties became poor degraded creatures of the streets. And almost similar was to be the fate of many of the girls, who accompanied their mothers into exile with the sultan, as a result of which they are today only 22 legal heirs to the $1,500,000,000 estate of Abdul Hamid II.

Twelve years have passed since the last of Turkey's sultans have died, yet this lapse of time has not diminished one whit the hatred and contempt of the Turkish people for the man who plundered his country, sent hundreds of thousands of his subjects to death on cruel and bloody battlefield, and ruined the womanhood of not only his own country, but of Armenia.

BUDDIE AND HIS FRIENDS

BY ROBERT L. DICKEY

THE BAD MAN

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

—By Kobold Knight—

The Vivid Story of a Night in the Land of Cactus, Coyotes, and Kidnapers, and of Handsome Budd Peterson, Who Risked More Than His Own for the Beautiful Mistress of the Bar-X Ranches.

Crack. The old Colt in his right hand jerked aloft and the near horseman toppled ludicrously out of his saddle to the rubdly bed of the guilty.

THIS was the real west, a land of cactus and coyotes, of alternating tracts of chaparral and the dry, sun withered mesquite grass, of buzards and broiling sun—and blasphemy. The tired earth lay like a panting dog under one's pinto hoofs, heaving under the heat haze. Budd Peterson smelt it, a familiar, homely smell—like the scent of some faithful old hound—and, for all the bad whisky fumes in his nostrils, recognized it as peculiarly and particularly his, and loved it.

Somewhere in the past, the hazy, unwholesome past, lay Buxton City—and a shattered ambition. A little straggly town of blistering tin and warping, unpainted plank; a saloon where game stakes had been higher, that afternoon, than they had been within living memory—for Budd had played like a Croesus, and lost. Ahead, in the gathering sunset, was Belle Whitley—and the reckoning. Budd faced it grim lipped, rat trap jawed; never the man to dodge his medicine.

Solaced with strong waters, he swayed slightly in his saddle, riding loose reined and trusting to the pony to keep to the narrow trail—a surer progress than he could have accomplished with his own two chap incumbered legs on the tumultuously heaving ground. A child of these wastes, Budd had been bred to the saddle, and found in it welcome security in such emergencies as the present. He even attempted a snatch of camp yodel to cheer himself, but it persisted in sounding like a dirge to the death of his lifelong hopes—and he desisted.

Fiftten straight miles separated Buxton City from the headquarters of the wealthy Bar-X ranches, whose lady owner he served, and it took Budd all of four hours—for no man gallops who rides to certain doom. The sun had dipped behind the hills, leaving the flats to a rosy aftermath of brief twilight, when at length he ambled through the outer corrals fringing Old Man Whitley's stronghold, a pretty, well-kept home set on a spur of the ranges. Budd grabbed his hat from his head in order to enjoy to the full the cool of the evening air about his perspiring forehead, walked his pony up to the gate, swung to the ground, and, testing his balance and finding it satisfactory, approached the house.

Charley Keaton, the ranch foreman, looked up from a saddle he mended as Budd neared.

"'Lo, Budd," he greeted.

Budd grunted. It was no secret on any of the Bax-X divisions that he had never liked this Easterner, Keaton, who, common rumor had it, might be Belle's second husband. For the late Old Man Whitley's daughter, who now owned the country around for nine miles in any direction, and more in some, had been widowed within a year of marrying Jameson, the New Yorker, and it was unseemly that a woman should reign over the cattle pastures without a consort.

Budd had never liked the way Keaton looked at one and smiled. The thin, wide lips moved, that was all; the unsatisfactory, pale blue eyes remained unchanged. Budd always felt awkward—with Keaton; was a little conscious of his own inferiority in manner and speech, in the presence of this more polished wanderer from distant states. The consciousness annoyed Budd, who had all an active cowman's contempt of subtlety and strategy and finesse.

'What do you want, Budd?" Keaton asked now.

"Want to see Miss Belle," said Budd, gruffly. "I sold them beeves, down in Buxton—and I want to tell her about em."

Keaton laid aside his bradawl and straightened. Next to the massive, rough hewn westerner he was the merest stripling. He looked up into that grim, sour countenance and smiled irritatingly.

"I'm foreman here, I guess you know, Budd," he remarked smoothly. "Belle's busy. What is it?" The pale eyes seemed to be inspecting Budd's working face with an especial keenness. Keaton sniffed, rather more eloquently than politely, and grinned.

Budd scowled and fixed his own bloodshot orbs fiercely on the other's. Keaton's familiar use of Belle's name had angered him almost unreasonably.

"See here, friend—" he began, venomously, but a patter of footsteps on the planks behind the foreman brought interruption.

"Hallo, Buddy!"

As if by magic Budd Peterson's scowl changed to a broad grin, and he brushed past Keaton rudely to greet Belle's son and heir, who had recognized his voice from somewhere in the house.

"Evenin', Jimmy! Shake. How's things?"

The tiny hand was held out manfully and Budd bent double to achieve the necessary reduction of altitude and engulfed the member in his own paw. Aged five, was Jameson's son, and fair, as his dad had been; a little riot of curls set like a halo above warm hazel eyes that were Belle's own.

"Where's yo' mammy, Jimmy? Inside? Nip along an' tell her Budd wants a minute——"

"Don't you bother, Jimmy," Keaton's voice interrupted, and the child looked inquiringly from one to the other.

Budd's eyes blazed at the foreman.

"You shut up!" he advised, ominously.

"Are you talking to me, Budd Peterson?" A dangerous glint crept into the pale blue eyes and a hand stole gently toward a hip. But Budd had not lived a lifetime in Arizona for nothing. His own hand was on his own hip first.

"I'm talkin' to yew!" he snapped. "An' I said 'Shut up!' Nip along, Jimmy—an' fetch yo' mam."

Jimmy pattered affrighted into the house, and the two men, glaring at each other, heard him calling for his mother.

"I guess you're drunk, Budd," said Keaton, turning negligently away.

"I kin still shoot straight," the cowman murmured—and broke into whistling a tune that had no beginning and no end other than an abrupt cessation as Belle stepped out onto the patio.

She stood framed in the doorway for a moment, tall and formed like a nymph, her dark hair cascading in ripples about her warm, brown skin. Belle, as she had always looked to Budd Peterson—the embodiment of perfect womanhood; as many men had seen her and been inspired to love her. Lamarche, the famous painter, had seen her so, once, and lived as Old Man Whitley's guest until he had finished a portrait of his adoration. It had been lost, that portrait; burned in the fire which destroyed the homestead while Jameson and Belle were on their honeymoon in Florida.

Budd awkwardly removed his hat and bobbed. Belle came across the courtyard veranda towards them.

Budd was uncomfortably aware that he breathed heavily.

"Evenin', mam. Yeah, I jes' wanted to say I've—I've decided to cash in an' quit."

She looked at him in astonishment, her pretty lips parted, a slim elf by comparison with Budd's huge bulk and unconcealed strength. Keaton, lounging carelessly against a pillar, seemed to give her a sudden clew to the situation.

"What's happened?" she demanded.

"I guess Budd's been on the hootch," Keaton growled.

"You guess right," Budd muttered, doggedly. He hung his head. "I've been a fool, Miss Belle."

Belle surveyed him with an attempt at disapproval. It was difficult, for Budd and she had been boy and girl together, a scant five years separating them. Even as a boy he had been willful, uncontrollable, though always lovable. It was difficult now to regard him as anything but the same wild, boyish personality.

"As long as you do your work," she said, disdainfully, "your private misdemeanors are no business of mine." Budd flinched, but she went on. "Did you sell the cattle O. K.?"

"Yes," Budd answered. He was aware that behind him Charley Keaton listened with both ears, and he would have given something, just then, to be able to make his confession to Belle alone. But he squared his shoulders and added, sullenly: "I went on the gamble, mam. I drew that two hundred cash you wanted for house money—but I done bu'st that too, mam." (The "mam" had come only of late years. Belle had never quite accustomed herself to it.)

"More fool you!" she snapped, while Budd could almost feel the foreman's triumphant grin behind him. "You'll have to sell some of your own beeves and pay me back, Budd—that's all."

"I'm sorry, mam, but I can't. I gambled them away, too. I got nothing left—'cept me name and the clo's on me back."

Belle gasped, but something in the stricken face before he stayed the flow of admonishment on her lips.

"Yes," Budd went on, remorselessly, "I guess I cleaned myself plumb out—horses, beeves, an' everything I got 'cept the few sticks of furniture in my shack. And since I want to quit right now, I'll be obliged to you, mam, if you'll have the bailiffs from Buxton sell that lot for your two hundred dollars."

Belle was speechless for a moment, and then——

"But, Budd, why?" she pleaded.

Peterson's lips moved, as if they wanted to tell her, but no sound came forth. They twitched—that was all. She saw the pain in his eyes and let him be. He shambled off towards the gate. She and Keaton heard him mount his pony and clatter away into the gathering dusk, towards his own little homestead four miles farther south.

Keaton was watching her shrewdly, noting the rapid rise and fall of her bosom with a glint in his pale eyes that was almost an obscenity.

"Budd deserves jail for that," he said, quietly.

She nodded.

"But he won't get it," she remarked, quite decidedly.

"You'll be bound to get that two hundred out of him, Mrs. Jameson," he said. "You can't keep a gang like ours in order unless you show them that you won't stand nonsense."

"I suppose not," she murmured, doubtfully. "But it must have been some mighty temptation made Budd do a thing like that. I wish I knew what."

"It's theft," the foreman rejoined. "Theft of two hundred dollars, and with your permission, mam, I'm getting the bailiffs in from Buxton early tomorrow morning."

"O, we can wait," she fenced, but Keaton had had wide experience of women and knew just when to apply pressure. Lucky chance was getting Budd Peterson out of the way just when it best suited Charley Keaton that Budd should be out of the way, and Keaton was determined to avail himself to the full of his good luck. A whole year he had waited; the year he had served on the Bax-X.

"No, Mrs. Jameson, we can't wait," he contradicted with a show of severity. "Either you clear Budd Peterson off this ranch, slick, or—I guess it's up to me to hand in my checks. I can't run this show for you with men like him knocking 'round. Stealing's a crime, and we must put it down!"

"I suppose so," she said wearily, and Keaton forced himself to conceal a too marked pleasure. She turned and walked back into the house. The foreman strode briskly to the nearest gang hut and yelled out an order for a pony to be brought to him at dawn. It was as well that Budd Peterson should be early out of the way.

Meanwhile that dejected gentleman skirted the cluster of cottonwoods four miles away, under a red moon incredibly big, and headed towards his shack for the last time. Budd's lips twisted sideways as he picked his way along the narrow trail, for an intense bitterness had come over him.

It was a big come down—from divisional boss on the best ranch of the Bar-X to the lot of a wandering hobo, touting around the foremen of other ranches until he found a job as an ordinary cattle hand. But it was all part of his gamble; part of his loser's end. He must take it like a man. And for the personal hardship it would entail he cared less than nothing.

Other doubts tortured him. He had been too impulsive. He had the impression, now, that he had made his stake over early in the day. It meant, now, that he would have to leave her with that highfalutin' sugar tongued foreman to steer the ranch, and possibly—. Budd groaned aloud and picturesquely cursed an innocent rattler that uncoiled on the path in front of the pony and slithered for safety into the sage.

He was mounting the rise to his shack when he saw a wisp of smoke, faint in the moonlight, rising up into the star spangled heaven from the cottonwoods. He pulled up and looked again. None of the boys from Belle's were on his division, that he knew about. Who camped in among the trees, and why there, instead of in the open.

Rustlers? It was always the first thought of ranchers in those days, and Budd was a rancher first—other things only afterwards. But almost at once he dispelled the thought of cattle thieves. They knew better than to give the game away with a campfire smoke. They came when the night was dark and were well away with the beeves before sleeping hands could be roused.

Budd was curious. He walked his horse on to the stable behind his lonely, three roomed cabin, quickly off saddled and left the pinto to feed himself. In a few moments he was deep in the cottonwoods. Before long he caught a glint of flame red in the darkness ahead of him. He advanced cautiously, his hand ready to his hip.

Two horses were tethered between him and the fire. One of them scenting his approach, whinnied a warning, and the two men squatting beyond the fire started to their feet.

"That you, Charley?" one of them demanded eagerly.

Budd strode fearlessly into the circle of light.

"Evenin'," he greeted carelessly, while he took stock of them. He noted only that they were a curious pair, and obviously not cattle rustlers. Reassured that he was alone, the taller of the two gave affable response.

"Evenin', stranger. Where have yew lit from?"

"I was jes goin' to ask you all that question," said Budd. "I'm the divisional boss round this a ways—leastways I was, until today—an' I reckon you're trespassin'. What's your business, friends?"

They exchanged a glance, and Peterson, not unaware of it, saw the peculiar but unmistakable stamp of vice on both faces. Whatever they were up to he was sure, in that instant, that it was no good. The "Charley," too, had made him think. Had they meant Keaton? Were they expecting to meet Belle's foreman? But Budd was wise in the ways of the west, and knew when not to ask questions.

"We're prospectin'," the spokesman answered, with a smile that was meant to be ingratiating. "And I reckon we didn't know we was trespassin', boss. We'll be away in the mornin'. Will that suit?' '

"Sure," Budd granted laconically, while his eyes took in their equipment and informed him that whatever they might be, they were certainly liars also. No bona fide prospector traversed Arizona with a grub pack that looked to have been made up in a San Francisco delicatessen store. But outwardly Budd gave no sign of his observations, not caring to provoke a bullet in the back as he departed.

The smaller of the two, a wizened, monkey-faced indivdual, with a curious pallor that hinted of drugs, contorted his countenance into what he meant to be a friendly smile.

"Did I hear you say you lost your job, boss?" he inquired.

"You did," said Budd, but hardly encouragingly, and as the two exchanged another clandestine glance Budd was not unaware of the taller man's warning frown to his companion.

"Bad luck," consoled the inquirer.

"I'll get another," said Budd. "Well, good night, friends. So long as you're off tomorrow—but we don't allow free prospectin' on the Bar-X, see."

There were mutual reassurances, and Budd turned to go, though he was hardly quite comfortable in mind until a good 20 paces separated them again. He had recognized them as typical town bred trash, and knew that he ran grave risk of biting the dust with a six shooter bullet in his spine—and lying here under the cottonwoods until the vultures found him. He breathed a great sigh as he emerged safely into the clean air of the open. It had evidently suited them to let him be. Budd removed his hand from his pistol butt, and ran up to his cabin.

In the rough living room he struck a match and lighted the tin lamp. He guessed his friends of the cottonwoods would be watching his movements, and it was just as well that they should see the light and believe him to be in the shack. The little window looked out over the wood.

But Budd did not waste time. Leaving the shack by the kitchen door he re-entered the stable, and in hardly any time at all his pinto was saddled and being led quietly by a spur of the rise into the moonlight beyond. In the shelter of a hollow Budd mounted and urged his horse over the pastures toward the back of the wood. He was convinced in his own mind that the "Charley" of the "prosperous" was none other than Charley Keaton, and what concerned Charley Keaton concerned also Belle. And Belle's concerns, illogically and without any authority, were peculiarly Budd's—had been for many years.

Twice Budd circled the wood, keeping well out of sight and peeping every now and then over the crest of some rocky divide, but no sign saw he of the two men. At last, unable to contain his patience longer, he took his courage in both hands and walked his mount straight for the wood. There he made a discovery that reduced him once again that night to profanity. The fire had evidently been doused within a few minutes of his meeting the men. The men themselves were gone!

Budd struck matches and found the hoof marks. They followed a direction towards ranch headquarters—and Belle! With a dry, inarticulate cry in his throat Budd urged on his horse, and, once clear of trees, rode like a man possessed!

A hand crept out of the darkness in the bedroom and closed firmly about young Jimmy's mouth; another followed, slid under his waist, and lifted him bodily out of the bed. There was the quiet click of the door closing—and then silence. Faint in the distance, some minutes later, the hoof beats of horses cantering over the flats.

Perhaps it was his mother's arm, stretched out towards the cot by her bedside, and finding, instead of young Jim's warm young body—nothing; perhaps some mother instinct stirred her to wakefulness— whatever it may have been, Belle awoke with a strange sense of foreboding oppressing her. She jumped out of bed and lighted the lamp.

She glanced at the cot, prompted by some nameless intuition to reassure herself—and then she dashed towards it, her eyes wide, her whole being a tremble. A sheet of paper lay where Jimmy's head had reposed on the soft, chicken down pillow. She stared at it.

> If you want to see your son alive again, fork up ten thousand bucks. Draw the money from the bank and we'll tell you how to make the payment. Otherwise he's a gonner. We give you three days.

Belle stared at the crudely inscribed document and then rushed, shrieking, from the room. Keaton was the first man to meet her—he slept in the nearest cabin—and in other circumstances Belle might have wondered at the promptitude with which he appeared. But Belle was too distracted to do more than cry out her fears, quite unaware of the man's eyes as they ogled her lissom, night attired limbs.

"Jimmy's been—kidnapped!" she shouted, clutching him.

"Kidnapped?" he echoed, with a show of incredulity. She dragged him by main force across the patio and into the bedroom; with a violently shaking hand thrust the fiendishly conceived warning into his. Keaton was a good actor; his face graved as he read the missive.

"O, do something!" Belle cried. "Rouse the boys! Send some one into Buxton City for the sheriff! Jimmy—my little Jim!"

He soothed her, suavely, and with a very ostentatious concern.

"The worst thing you could do," he said. "These guys mean it!"

"O, but for God's sake, Charley——"

"Now then, Belle," he interrupted, familiarly. "It's rough on you, but you've got to take this quietly, or Jimmy——" He made an eloquent gesture and she shuddered. "Best thing is to wait until the morning. If these hoboes mean business the only hope you've got of seeing Jimmy again is to pay up—and smile about it. There, there, little girl, no need to carry on so! I'm riding into Buxton as soon as it gets light, and you can trust me to move heaven if need be—if it's for you!"

He dragged her to a chair and with easy compulsion made her sit down. Belle was too demented to resent being pawed; sobbed weakly and for merciful tears was spared a sight of his eager, triumphant face.

"Now, let's get this straight," he said. "Gosh, I can hardly believe it! Right under our noses. When did you first notice Jim was gone?"

And two miles out in the sage, a man riding hell for leather across gully and hillock, cursed the darkness and the cactuses and the chaparral. He went by sound entirely. Reining up within a mile of Old Man Whitley's homestead, he heard the clatter of hooves—two horses—out there to the left. They were galloping away from the ranch, and he was able, by sound, to get a rough direction—no more. Now in the dim light of the waning moon he had lost them again.

Budd rode in widening circles—an old trick and a tedious one—and his lathering pinto gave signs of collapse. With a curse he pulled up, slid from the saddle, ran a little way off and listened. No other sound than the obliterating panting of his horse came to him.

"Hell!" muttered Budd again, and glanced eagerly towards the east. To his intense relief he observed the sky already to be graying. Within a quarter of an hour he was able to distinguish objects in the distance—it seemed hours to the impatient cow man. The sky lightened more, and far off, right under the promised sunrise, Budd fancied he saw a little gray dust cloud against the sky. He mounted again, swerved his pony and cantered on.

The dawn came and Budd was able to make out in the little twirl of dust far ahead two specks that were mounted men—his friends of the night before. He was reassured that they had been up to no good by the pace that they made. And they had come from Belle's homestead. That was enough for Budd Peterson.

"Git along!" he urged. "You ain't lost wind yet, old paint horse! Up-along, boy! Sh'ft!"

The sun had risen when he observed the fugitives swerve down a gulch to the left without pausing to look for pursuers. It was Budd's chance. A twist of his wrist and his own laboring horse bore at a tangent to his former course across the pastures—a short cut to the end of the gully. Budd rode hard, not sparing his horse. He arrived by the brink just as the two horsemen came into view 'round a bend in the old watercourse. Budd slid from his pony, crept behind a cactus, and lay prone—his eyes set over the sights of his six-shooter.

They had ridden to within 15 yards of where he lay above them, when Budd saw Jimmy clasped roughly in front of the far rider, and evidently too scared to be wailing or unconscious. For a moment, as the great cow man comprehended the situation, he trembled with rage and the air about him was blue with unprintable mutterings. And then——

Crack! The old Colt in his right hand jerked aloft and the near horseman toppled ludicrously out of his saddle to the rubbly bed of the gully. The other gave one terrified glance upwards; saw the huge uprisen form of the divisional boss looming like some Nemesis against the sky, ducked and with a shout set spurs to his horse.

In the fraction of a second the Colt was leveled again. It spat, and the horse, hardly yet urged to speed, crumpled forward on its knees. The rider and young Jimmy rolled harmlessly forward in a ball. A slithering down the steep sides of the gulch as of an avalanche, and Budd Peterson was bythe minute Jim; had him safely under an arm. The kidnaper—it was the monkey countenanced individual—scrambled to his feet and stood trembling, too well informed of local custom to risk a getaway.

"Stand there!" snapped Budd, quiet but ominous. "And keep your hands skied!" He bent his huge head downwards. "You all O. K., Jimmy?" he asked tenderly.

"Sure, Buddy." It was a weak but manly little whisper, and it reassured the cow man. He laid Jimmy aside; sat him down on a ledge. When he turned to the waiting kidnaper Budd's eyes were as hard as hell's flint.

"Did Charley Keaton put you up to this, scum?" he spat out.

The little man quaked visibly, rolled his eyes and his teeth chattered, but no articulate sound came forth. Budd advanced, suddenly swung a left arm through space, a fist on the end of it like a young ham. The white faced man collapsed almost theatrically and lay groaning.

"You'll speak," said Budd, setting his jaw, "or I'll plug you so full of holes the wind'll make you whistle! Now, then— which do you want?"

"I'll talk, boss," came quiveringly from the ground. "Yeah, Long Charley put me and Bill on this joint. You'll let me go if I tell you all, will ya?" The man's obvious terror was almost ludicrous, but no humor showed in Budd's face.

"Long Charley?" he snapped. "That'll be Charley Keaton, will it? Say, who is that guy?"

"Long Charley? He's wanted for murder down in Frisco. Charley Spiers is his real name. Me an' Bill and him worked in the same gang—before he had to vamoose."

"That all?"

"That's all, boss—and it's God's truth. Can I go now, boss? That's all I know. Charley was goin' halves with me and Bill —and he reckoned he was goin' to get the girl, too."

"Get up!" Budd ordered savagely. The kidnaper rose unsteadily to his feet. "What girl was Charley goin' to git, friend?" he inquired, almost smoothly.

"That Jane back at the ranch—who fired you yesterday. Can I go now, boss?' '

"Sure," said Budd, "in a minute. Meantime I'll opine you'd better get a notion into your head that ladies is to be spoken of respectful. Here's to make you remember it. And with that Budd's fist moved again—and this time the gangster did not groan. Instead he lay very still where he had fallen.

"You can go when you wake up," said Budd.

The revolver cracked for the third time, and a wounded horse found its peace. Budd gathered up Jim and scrambled up the bank. In two hours' time the homestead was within call. He reined up and slid to the ground, helping the youngster down after him.

"Kin you walk f'um here, Jim-boy?"

"Sure, Buddy."

"Well, so'long, sonny. Shake. Maybe you won't be seeing me again. Tell your mam I'm quittin'—now. S'long."

"So long, Buddy. But aren't you comin' back tomorrow or the next day?" the child asked.

Budd solemnly shook his head.

"No mo'," he said. "I got a bit of news for the sheriff—and then I'm quit. Happy days, mannie!"

Always a man, Jim held his tears until a hundred yards were between them, and Budd Peterson lost in the tangle of gray scrub bordering the trail towards his shack by the cottonwoods.

Budd saw the bailiff's posse from Buxton City mount the rise as he approached his cabin. They arrived almost simultaneously.

Carsten, the bailiff, was sympathetic.

"Sorry, Budd, but I reckon we got to take 'most everything you got—to clear two hundred dollars. What possessed you to go loose so bad yesterday, boy?"

"Nothin'," said Budd, tersely, and the bailiff asked no more. "You're welcome," the cowman added. "Go ahead. You kin take all that's my property. But there's one little bit here that's not my property, an' I guess I'll hang around until you've done, if you don't mind.

Budd disappeared into an inner room of his shack. A little room, bare of everything but a chair and, on the wall, a certain portrait of a girl, tall and formed like a nymph, with dark hair cascading in ripples about a warm, brown skin. To those initiated in such matters it bore in every brush stroke of it, that portrait, the signature of Lamarche, the famous French painter. It was worth probably ten times as much as all the rest of Budd Peterson's possessions thrown together. But to Budd himself it was even more precious. For it represented his lifelong ambition—the thing he had gambled for and the hope he had lost.

A horse clattered up the steep and Budd heard a woman's voice—her voice. The door flung open and Belle stood there. Budd had placed the chair in front of the picture and sat there—fingering his six shooter. Belle stared from the lost portrait to the man; from the man back to the portrait—of herself. The light of a great wonder kindled in her eyes.

"Budd," she said, very gently—almost breathlessly. But he interrupted her. Rising, he slid his pistol back into its holster, removed his hat. He stood towering down over her, his face working painfully.

"I guess I kin deliver your property back to you now, mam," he said, gruffly. "I pinched it—that night of the fire, years past. But I've took good care of it and—here it is, mam."

She stood, her bosom heaving, too amazed to speak. Budd lurched towards the door.

"And I'd like to say," he murmured, "that maybe I'm not so bad as you think, Miss Belle. It was for you I done that big fool gamble yesterday. Yes, I'll tell you—now that I'm quittin'. I've always kind of —wanted you—Belle. And hoped. An' I knew I couldn't get you while I was a poor boss of a division. So I been savin' up for one big, mighty gamble."

Her eyes had misted over. She came towards him.

"Budd," she whispered, "don't go, Jimmy wants you—and—I do, too.

The sheriff, blundering into the room a minute later, found the woman enveloped in the cow man's arms, and hurriedly blundered out again—and sat himself down on an upturned crate to think things over. Later he returned to Buxton City, but his wagon contained no chattels other than a shackled man labeled "For Transit to the Frisco Police."

Women Now Are Beginning to Get the Attitude of Men and Are Striving to Play Their Be st

By Shepard G. Barclay

WITH a man "the game's the thing" practically always. With a woman, the game is generally secondary, a means of bringing friends together for social intercourse. That's as true of one game as it is of another, and the outstanding exceptions on both sides of the fence do not alter the generality.

The woman bridge player who concentrates her attention on getting the best possible result out of each deal, relegating everything else to a subordinate position, is in the minority. The man who does not is almost unfindable. He plays to win, without regard to whether there is a prize or anything else at stake. She, of course, would rather win than lose, but whether she plays her best or not is of slight moment so long as the company and the conversation are pleasant.

Every bridger has met the woman who says "I just play for pleasure." Nobody ever heard a man say that. He may enjoy the game even when he loses, but not unless he has the satisfaction of knowing he has done his best to win. Almost without exception the man studies any game he plays and tries to learn how to play it better; when he learns a "new wrinkle," he watches eagerly for a chance to apply it. Many women don't care whether they ever learn any more about the game. Some really get a peculiar sort of thrill from willfully disregarding certain things they have learned about the proper thing to do in a certain circumstance. But that makes little difference to them so long as they "enjoy the game." And the male bystanders cannot understand how they enjoy it while playing it in that don't-care fashion.

There is an entirely different type of woman player, however, as keen a competitor as any man. Some of these are inveterate students and apply the last ounce of their brain power to every problem encountered at the bridge table. In recent years their number has been increasing, and at a steadily growing rate. For each convert becomes something of a missionary. The example of her consistent winning is contagious and causes her sisters to take notice.

The advent of contract bridge has accelerated the movement. The importance of bidding the full strength of a hand—because you can count toward game only the number of tricks bid—is impelling many to learn how to value a hand with accuracy. And it is also causing them to make a serious study of the play—for bidding the correct number of tricks is futile if the player fails to take them and is "set."

As time goes on, there will doubtless be more and more women who realize that the greatest enjoyment of the game comes from the beautifully adroit bids and plays made by a skillful partnership, but it would be hoping the absurd to look for the day when there will not be any more of those who miss the real joy of the game because they think they "just play for pleasure."

You Know Him

Though sometimes he makes the most awful mistakes,
He feels he'd have won if he'd just got the breaks;
A lapse by his partner he always can see
And figure at once what the right play should be;
The thought that he's better, no rival can kill—
When we win it's luck, but when he does it's skill.
How well do you know him? To comprehend clearer,
Perhaps it will help if you look in your mirror.

Partial Scores

Whether partial scores toward game count or not depends on the form of the game being played. L. C. Griffith brings the question up again, reporting that his side made two no trump tricks on one deal, which in auction counts 20 points. On the next deal he made three spade tricks, worth 27 more, and the opponents refused to allow game because 30 points were not scored in one deal.

If they were playing rubbers—the regular game—his side, of course, scores a game. If the game was progressive, game is not scored unless made in one hand, when it is worth half the value of a rubber bonus, or 125 points. If they were pivoting—each player of four taking a turn with each other one as partner—it depends on whether they were pivoting at the end of each deal, each game or each rubber. In the latter two cases, his side would have game; in the case of pivoting after each deal, game is scored only when made in one deal.

But in no case can points left over from one game—whether partial points by the losing side or surplus points by the winning side—be carried over into the next game; each one starts with both sides having no score toward game, just as yesterday's runs cannot help to win today's baseball game.

An Accident

"I had a surprisingly good hand," says P. Paul Standertson. "Aces of hearts, diamonds and clubs, king of diamonds and a string of nine spades to the queen, jack, ten. It being contract, I gradually bid up to five spades after starting with three to give my partner a chance to bid one more if she had either ace or king of spades. Then she started to 'think aloud' and mumbled hesitatingly: 'Shall I show him that I have ace and king of spades? No, I better not!' And then she said loudly, 'I pass.' I do not call it a story; it's an accident."

Contracted

Contract in the most contracted form yet is covered in two diminutive pamphlets which have just appeared. One of these is by Mary Swain Wagner, author of "Auction Bridge Rhyme and Reason," who treats the new game in similar verse style in "Pros and Cons of Contract Bridge," an ingeniously light treatment of a heavy subject. The other is "Contract at a Glance," by Godfrey B. Moore. "At a glance" is indeed correct; he has compressed his chosen facts into eight pages, for "him who runs."

A Law a Week

Shuffling—After the players are seated at the beginning of a rubber—or of a round, in the case of progressive or pivot—the player on the dealer's left shuffles the pack which the dealer has chosen. All players have the right to shuffle, dealer having the right to shuffle last. During each deal the still pack is shuffled by dealer's partner, who then places it face down at his right—at the left of the next dealer. The pack must be shuffled thoroughly in view of all the players, but not so as to expose the face of any card. If any provision of this law be violated any player, before the next deal starts, may demand a new shuffle.

Straightaway, direct bidders would open with one spade. North would bid three no trumps. South, now knowing North must have good heart support and also shortness of spades which would be an asset at a heart make, bids four hearts. North, after this, is sure that South must have either the ace and king of spades or the ace of hearts and either the ace of spades or the king and queen of spades, because his original bid guaranteed two quick tricks. He therefore leaps to a small slam bid of six hearts. South should leave the bid there unless he "feels strong," in which event he may venture seven spades. That many tricks are, of course, in the hand by means of a simple double-ruff, but the bid would be risky.

In the Vanderbilt system the bidding would be the same, for South, without three quick tricks, does not even consider a conventional one-club strength-showing opener.

Users of the absolute demand method would pass the South hand because it lacks 2 1-2 quick tricks, excepting those who consider 2 enough if each major contains one. After the pass, North opens with a forcing bid of two, the suit named depending on the particular version of the system being employed. Some would name the higher ranking of the three suits, some the higher ranking of the two stronger suits, some the lower ranking by preference. After any of these calls, South would bid three spades—one higher than necessary to overcall, which is a forcing overcall. North then bids one of his other suits. South his hearts and North then has two choices. Either he can bid his third suit and let South bid the slam, or he can bid the slam himself. Whether they reach small slam or grand slam is a close question practically depending on how they feel at the moment or what they think of their opponents.

Users of the partial demand system who require 2 1-2 quick tricks to open would bid the hand as given. With those who open on 2 quick tricks, North would hop to three of one of his suits—a partial demand raise—whereupon South shows his hearts, and the course then is as in the other method, leading to the slam bid.

What is the bidding of the following hands of a partnership, considering that opponents constantly pass? (Answer next week.)

Those who consider a worthless doubleton no menace to a no trump would bid one no trump as dealer, North would call two hearts and South two no trumps, ending the auction. Players who prefer a sound four-card suit bid when a worthless doubleton is present would bid one diamond, North one heart and South one no trump.

West would lead the jack of spades, South's ace winning. Declarer, counting his certain tricks, would realize he needed only four heart tricks to get game. When six hearts are outstanding they are divided four in one hand and two in the other twice as often as they are evenly split. So to protect himself against this break he would deliberately throw away the first heart trick, making game certain. If he played his three high hearts at once he would not get game. Try it!

Each of these problems exemplifies certain fundamental principles of bidding and play on which the authorities agree.

Russia's Battle of the Soil

STUBBY candles flicker on the windowsills, lighting a squirming mass of travelers packed in a third-class coach. The train lurches through the switch lights of a Moscow railway terminal and clatters out upon the quiet prairies. A cloud of cigaret smoke hangs in blue fog over the men and women sprawled on the hard benches. Gray, billowy sacks of baggage are heaped in the aisle. A bearded peasant in a long, coarse shirt tied at the waist with a piece of rope eats a fish that he holds in his square dirty fingers and his h nds. An old ma wearing straw sandals, his legs wrapped in rags, sleeps on an upper bench. Tin teapots leashed to wooden handbags flash in the uncertain light. A wide-faced, angular girl wrapped in a black shawl watches a soldier pull off his thick boots. It is like a dim inferno peopled with clumsy souls bundled in sheepskin coats and bound on an endless journey. They are peasants going back to their homes.

As the train slips farther across the level plain and the vast ocean of dark steppes swallows the booming, paradoxical Moscow with its growling factories, Byzantine temples, feudal walls and busts of Lenin—it is then that the real Russia climbs over the horizon. And the real Russia is a colossal tidal wave of soil comprising one-sixth of the earth's land, a country of farms and sordid, sullen villages where 120,000,000 people—35 per cent of the nation's population—live, as they have lived for generations, in a manner not unlike the peasants of medieval Europe.

Across the stretches of this gigantic stage a stirring drama is racing to a climax. It is a drama no less thrilling and more far-reaching than the hectic one enacted at Petrograd in October, 1917, when communism came to the workers of the country. For the revolution has at last reached the myriad tribes of the Russians who live close to the soil. The millions of peasants—70 per cent of them illiterate, most of them ignorant of the fundamentals of their government and all of them individuals greedy for property— are brought face to face with a collectivism that seeks to unite their small farms, implements and all their private property into a vast community where all wealth is held in common.

For months the black night of the wind-whipped plains has been cut by deep gashes of flame, the silence broken by the crack of rifles and fleshy thud of bodies falling. There have been plots and counter-plots. For war has come to the steppes. The principles of communism have militantly invaded that ancient domain of individualism, the farm. Soviet grain elevators are fired by irate kulaks frantic with rage at their dispossession, and soviet agents are shot from ambush in a vain attempt to discourage the government in its vigorous campaign to socialize the land.

There are retaliations by the state; often offenders are sent through a brief trial to face a firing squad. But all this bloodshed is trivial in the light of the stupendous social and economic upheaval that is uprooting the peasantry, rocking the land and dispatching the bulk of the Russian people on the road to communism.

From the headquarters of the central committee of the communist party come sweeping decrees, outlining plans and policies for establishing communism on the farms of Russia. Two amazing resolutions, fundamentally contradictory in tone, one issued the fifth of last January, and the second on March 15, sketch the crisis with terse formality. From the simple words of these legal documents stalk the communists' hopes for their collectivized farms project, the great accomplishment in this line since last autumn, and their just fears of failure in the vital undertaking.

The startling edict of the first of the year called for the complete collectivization of the lower Volga region by next fall and 100 per cent communism of all Russian farms by harvest time in 1931. This was an ambitious schedule, as it supersed the five-year plan then in effect, which had for its goal only a 20 per cent collectivization of land by 1933. The ukase was followed by two months of hectic activity by communist organizers, who met with marked success and reported the number of socialized farms doubled in 20 days. When this phenomenal accomplishment was at its height the second puzzling order was issued by the central committee.

It began with a recitation of the tremendous gains in collectivism and claimed that 55 per cent of all farms were communized and that 90 per cent of these were already supplied with seed grain for the year's crop. Then it fell into a sterner mood. Agents engaged in recruiting farms for group-owned projects were ordered to be more moderate in their methods of securing enlistments, and the use of force to coerce membership was forbidden as a criminal offense (indicating that force had been employed in the successful campaign). There was a warning against over-confidence and an admonition not to attempt the establishment of collectives in a region where they would be economically unsound.

The second decree was distinctly a wet blanket on the flame fanned to fury by the first.

The enigma of this plea for moderation at the very moment great results were being achieved suggests several explanations. One is that it represents an admission by the communist party that collectivization of land is impracticable and opens a way for a retreat to petty capitalism; a second is that the success of the organizers has brought on an expansion of the projects so rapidly that time is needed to consolidate the gains and make them secure; and a third interpretation is that Stalin sees the imminent and unquestioned victory of collectivized farms and the total abolition of private operation after the next harvest, and has requested a period of quiet to stop the activities of the enemies of the scheme until it has been proved a success and criticism will be without force. Behind these momentous developments lay the fundamental factors of the soviet agrarian situation and the dramatic story of its present crisis.

Since Lenin first cried his pledge of "Peace, Bread and Land," and the war-depressed, hungry proletariat flocked to his red banner without knowing or caring for the details of the plan that promised them the things they direly needed, the problem of the peasant has hung like a sword of Damocles above the head of the communist party. In the stress of the revolution they had to act quickly. Peace was obtained with Germany in a fashion compatible with the reds' theory of pacifism. But to furnish both bread and land and still keep strict and immediate faith with the precepts of Marxianism was impossible. A program was adopted to attain these ends that compromised the doctrines of communism for the sake of expediency and built up a situation that ever since has threatened the life of pure collectivism in its stronghold.

Though the leaders of Russia intended that the scheme of land distribution should be directed toward communism, it daily took on more aspects of capitalism. And the government vacillated and avoided meeting the ominous issue. For if industry was to be put on a productive and communistic basis, the worker had to be fed while he was being brought under the spell of the new patriotism. The new economic policy of 1921, which permitted the renting of land along with private trading, gave fresh impetus to capitalism on the steppes, and the kulak emerged as an arch capitalist in a theoretically socialized state.

Among the 25,000,000 farmsteads held by the peasants, some grew large and prospered, others dwindled. The people fell into strata defined by their wealth. The government stood for 11 years, restraining where it could this movement toward capitalism, but refraining from drastic action for fear of jeopardizing the nation's food supply.

The small landholder with a farm of 15 to 30 acres, though essentially an individualist, is the material from which the communes are being made. His equipment is usually primitive and inefficient. As an independent producer he seldom was able to raise more produce than was required to feed himself and family and often he had to rely upon employment on a neighboring kulak's land for money with which to purchase boots and clothes. This made him an unreliable source of supply for surplus grain to feed the cities.

Peasants of this type were encouraged by the government to join together in quasi-communistic units called ortels. In this loose organization cows, horses, plows and land are community-owned, but houses, pigs and poultry remain private property. In such organizations they could often get together sufficient equipment to produce a crop that allowed a surplus for sale over the needs of the group. These units formed an excellent nucleus for the wholly socialized communes.

But the kulak, a rampant individualist with valuable property in his possession, resists the government at every turn and fights the establishment of collectivization as bitterly as he dares. By cunning and frequently fraudulent connivance he has avoided or violated narrow limitations of the soviet land laws and acquired substantial holdings that occasionally amount to 1,000 acres.

All a farmer's income amounting to over $50 a year is taxed 25 per cent. So the kulak either pays a tremendous tax or becomes a proficient tax dodger. These heavy penalties on his wealth discourage a high standard of living, as exceptionally comfortable quarters might indicate concealed assets to the ever-diligent tax collector. As a result, his life is little better than that of the poorer serf.

The kulak disobeys a sacred commandment of communism by employing other men, from whose labor he profits, and for this offense he suffers disfranchisement. But because the state cannot obtain sufficient grain from the small landholders and ortels to be independent of the kulak's supply, much that he does contrary to law is overlooked. It is only when he holds his grain for speculation or refuses to sell it to the soviet grain trust at a figure sometimes as low as a sixteenth of the world market price that he comes into serious conflict with the government.

Wars between the recalcitrant farmer and the soviet grain collectors became more widespread and savage each year, culminating in the general sanguinary harvest hostilities of 1929. For last autumn the government had reason to be more relentless than usual in its demands for the kulak's grain at his own price. There was a food shortage, and surplus supplies were low, due to the deliberate refusal of peasants to put in a crop larger than that required for their personal use because of the poor prices at which they were forced to sell. And, too, since the five-year collectivization plan, which had for its goal 36,000 communized farms by the fall of 1929, reported 57,000, the red government felt confident that the day of its dependence upon the kulak for food was nearing an end and they could deal with him in a peremptory fashion.

The kulak, incensed, used all his ingenuity and power to oppose the government. His resistance took a variety of forms, ranging from employing bandits to lead mobs against governmental officials to passive resistance by refusing to plant crops that would afford a surplus for sale. The "Pravda," official organ of the communist party, reported village officials' homes burned, agents shot from ambush, soviet grain stores fired and attacks on police. At Novo-Sibirsk there were bloody riots, and at Pskov, the town in which Nicholas II signed away the vast empire of the Romanoffs, the peasants entered the city, stormed the local governmental buildings and set them afire.

But the kulak's campaign of violence was less devastating than his economic assaults. In 1929 the peasants in the Coubas region were scheduled to sow 500,000 acres, but put in only 65,000. And the kulak struck still another blow at the food supply by instigating a general killing and selling of farm animals. Confiscatory taxes on the increase of privately owned livestock made it almost as profitable to kill and sell the animals as to hold them for breeding purposes.

So the kulak began an orgy of slaughter and induced the small farmer to join in it by advising him that only tractors would be used on the coming communes, and that it would be wiser to kill his draft horses and have the personal benefit of their hides.

The reprisals of the government were swift and sure whenever they could secure evidence against offending kulaks. One day last fall the Moscow press reported 39 executions of rebellious kulaks, and throughout the autumn almost every day brought firing squads. They confiscated the land of those kulaks who had hidden grain, burned it or killed cattle.

The kulaks' resistance brought the soviets' grain policy to a crisis. It was evident that the kulaks, after the bitter struggle of the autumn, would put in only enough grain to meet their own needs for the coming year, and that the establishment of collectivized farms therefore had to be speeded. The government was forced to meet the problem of the land, for continued dependence upon the kulak would only increase his power.

So, spurred on by the unexpected success of the five-year plan and pressed by the urgency of the situation, the decree of the first of the year was issued, with the result announced in the resolutions of March 15 that over half of Russia's farms were communized and the kulak no longer a vital factor in supplying the nation's food.

The commune that is the goal of the soviets differs from the ortel and the semi-communistic practices that existed among the peasants of the czarist villages. It functions on a pure communistic theory and in its ideal form is on a vast scale. A model commune now being worked out by the Moscow Agricultural academy is to be a new city of 50,000 persons, cultivating 500,000 acres of land. All property, land, livestock, home and farm implements, are to be owned in common. There will be canneries, dairies and repair shops.

All the residents will be fed from community kitchens, eating in communal mess halls, and baths will be taken in community bathhouses.

The communes already organized and those now being brought together are not, of course, specially constructed cities, but a union of a score of villages. Where a single village exists as an ortel, it forms an excellent nucleus for the larger unit. All the privately held land and all the property of ortels in the district are merged. The land, homes, pigs, livestock, horses and all other personal property is turned over to the group to be owned in common.

The immediate ability of the freshly organized communes to supply the nation with a normal amount of grain for the coming year is problematical, despite optimistic predictions from the Kremlin. The economic value of these organizations lies in working at one sweep land that once was divided into several small farms. But the growth of the communes has outrun the number of tractors available, so that two-thirds of the new collectivized farms must be worked by the old methods of horses and oxen. And even this animal power is not up to standard, due to the extensive slaughtering of livestock. Since the vigorous war on him, the kulak cannot be counted on to supply the deficit. The leaders have gambled the food supply of the country upon the prompt success of their plan.

HOW DID "MIND YOUR P'S AND Q'S" ORIGINATE?

"Mind your P's and Q's," meaning "be careful" or "watch your step," is of unknown origin, but there is reason for supposing that it originated in the printing shop. In small roman type p and q are similar in appearance and easily confused. It is believed that "Mind your P's and Q's" was an admonition frequently given by printers to their apprentices who were just learning type-setting and who had difficulty in distinguishing between the two tailed letters in the font of type. Possibly the expression was used for similar reasons to admonish children just learning the alphabet. Two elaborate theories on this subject should be mentioned here, although neither deserves much consideration from the standpoint of etymology. The first is that "mind your P's and Q's" arose from an old custom of bookkeeping in alehouses and inns. The number of pints and quarts of beer or ale for which the customers owed was chalked up behind the door and was indicated by strokes opposite the letters P and Q, which stood for Pints and Quarts respectively. At the end of the week, after the customers received their wages, they were required to mind their P's and Q's, namely, pay for the pints and quarts they had drunk during the week, before they could obtain any more. According to the other story, which is equally absurd, the common expression originated in France during the reign of Louis XIV. When persons were presented at court they wore huge wigs and curtsied very formally. The bow consisted of a difficult step and a low bend of the body. In making the step and bow there was danger that the courtiers would slip and derange their wigs. Therefore the master of ceremonies would admonish them, "Gardez vos pieds et queues," which translated means to mind your feet and wigs. But "pied," the French word for foot is pronounced like the letter p, and "queue" meaning wig, is pronounced like q. Hence it is said, the expression was corrupted into "mind your p's and q's."

What Has Happened to Justice?

The Green Bicycle Case, An Astounding Triumph For a Defense Lawyer

BY PETER LEVINS.

IN RECENT years Americans have heard quite a lot about British justice. Some of us may have formed the idea that the law as administered in the United Kingdam is practically infallible. Of course, this is not so at all. For all its superiority to the slow-moving American system, British justice does not always get its man. And just to show you how even John Bull can fall down sometimes, we will tell the story of the famous Green Bicycle case, in which the late Sir Edward Marshall Hall, perhaps the most successful defender in British history, scored one of his greatest triumphs.

In this case the crown piled up a most extraordinary array of circumstantial evidence against the accused man. When the defendant went on trial, eevrything seemed against him. He had been the last person seen with the victim, had destroyed evidence linking him with the victim and the crime, and had altogether behaved like a person with a consciousness of guilt. He was, in fact as good as hanged when he went on trial.

And yet, in spite of all this, he beat the case—he and Sir Edward, working together, overturned all the carefully-laid plans of the prosecution, and the strange murder of young Bella Wright went unsolved and unexpiated.

The body of Bella Wright, a pretty working girl, was discovered, apparently very shortly after the crime, at 9:50 p. m., Saturday, July 5, 1919. She lay dead beside her bicycle in a country lane near Little Stretton in Leicestershire. She had been shot through the head.

The circumstance, however, was not noticed immediately. Those first on the scene saw a pool of blood by her head, but the impression was that she had fallen from her wheel and struck her head. Then a police officer found something rather extraordinary—he saw on a gate nearby the marks of the bloody feet of a large bird. He followed the tracks and found the dead body of a raven. The bird had presumably died from gorging the dead girl's blood.

There Were Two Holes in Her Head.

The officer washed the blood from the young woman's face and now saw that there was a small hole in her left cheek and a large hole on the right side of her head.

Seventeen and a half feet from the girl's head he found a bullet, half-buried in the road.

A murder . . .

The police learned that Miss Wright had left her uncle's home at Gaulby, about two and a half miles from Little Stretton, in the company of a man riding a green bicycle. In Leicester the officers found a bicycle repair man who stated that he had fixed a green bicycle for a man who had called for it the morning of the fifth and left saying he was going for a run into the country.

Further inquiries in the neighborhood uncovered two more witnesses. Two little girls said that at about 5:30 p. m., a man riding a green bicycle had tried to get into conversation with them in a road that led to the lane where Bella had been slain. The two girls said they had been frightened by the man's manner.

Naturally, the police decided that the man with the green bicycle was a person to be questioned closely about this tragedy.

But he did not come forward.

The authorities circulated handbills asking for information concerning this suspect, aged 35 to 40, height 5 feet 7 to 9 inches, dressed in a light rainproof coat and "said to have a squeaking voice." The description, furthermore, stated that he had been riding "a gent's B. S. A. bicycle with a green enamel frame."

No more information came to the police concerning this man.

Almost seven months passed, and then one of those chance accidents that so often play such an important part in murder investigations revived public interest in the case and put the name of one person in every newspaper in the kingdom. By the merest turn of circumstance the owner of the green bicycle was identified.

It was in February, 1920, that the towrope of a barge, passing down a canal near Leicester, caught on to something on the canal bottom and raised it for a few moments above the surface.

It was part of the frame of a green bicycle.

When the police heard about this they went to work and soon recovered the greater part of the bicycle frame. The maker's name on the outside had been erased, but there was a secret mark, which the owner had not known about and which identiifed the machine.

The bicycle had been sold to one Ronald Vivian Light, former war veteran, who was now a mathematics instructor at a Cheltenham school. He was immediately arrested and charged with the murder.

The accused man began lying at once. He said he had never owned a green bicycle. Later he admitted he had owned such a machine, but insisted that he had sold it long ago.

Naturally, these denials prejudiced the police as soon as he was identified, not only by the two girls he had accosted at 5:30 on the afternoon of the murder but by the man who had repaired the bicycle.

"My word!" murmured Light after the repair man had identified him, "that man had me spotted!"

Next, a revolver holster was fished up out of the canal. It contained live and blank cartridges of the same old-fashioned type as the bullet that had been found a few feet from the body. The holster was almost conclusively proven to have belonged to Light.

SEEMED TO HAVE ALL BUT CONFESSION.

In view of all these circumstances few persons doubted that the authorities had the right man. Indeed, the police seemed to have everything but a confession. When Marshall Hall was briefed for the defense the general feeling was that even he, for all his triumphs in defending criminal cases, would fail to save Light.

Hall found himself opposed in the trial by some of the most brilliant prosecutors in the empire—the attorney general himself, Sir Gordon Hewart, assisted by Henry Maddocks, K. C., M. P., and Norman Birkett. The proceedings took place before Mr. Justice Horridge at Leicester, on the Midland circuit. Hall's assistant was A. Wightman Powers.

All in all, the trial gave every evidence of being a battle of giants.

The crown came into court with complete proof that Ronald Light was, on July 5, 1919, the owner of the green bicycle and the holster, and that he had at one time owned a revolver in which the bullet found on the road coul dhave been used. The attorney general, cold and thorough, piled up the evidence relentlessly until it seemed insurmountable. He told of the girl meeting the man on the green bicycle just outside her uncle's house in Gaulby and of the man saying:

"Bella, I thought you had gone the other way."

He laid particular emphasis on the word "Bella."

"Their departure was at about a quarter past 9 o'clock in the evening," he continued. "About thirty-five minutes later the body was found. Who was the man in whose company Miss Wright was last seen alive? Who was the man with the green bicycle? The evidence that I shall put before you will go to show that the man was Ronald Light, and his was the hand that killed the girl."

One thing was lacking—evidence of motive. Sir Gordon stated, however, that it was not necessary to prove motive if the other evidence was conclusive. He supposed that the prisoner had made certain overtures to the girl and been rebuffed, that in anger or in desire of concealing that which had been attempted, he had drawn his revolver and shot her.

Hall tossed his first bombshell soon after the crown witnesses began to testify. While the two schoolgirls were on the stand he announced quietly that these would be the only witnesses-to-fact that he would cross-examine and that there would be no cross-examination as to identity or ownership. This meant that the defense planned to admit that Light had owned the bicycle and the holster.

In questioning the two girls, Hall was able to weaken their evidence considerably. One of them even admitted that the police had suggested the date to them when they were first questioned. Hall managed to create in the jury's mind the impression that these girls might easily have been mistaken about the date.

The defense counsel did cross-examine one other witness as to fact, despite his announcement. When Miss Wright's uncle testified that he had heard the man on the green bicycle say, "Bella, I thought you had gone the other way," Hall suggested that the word had been "Hello," and not "Bella." The witness would not admit this, though he testified his niece had told him that the man with the green bicycle was a perfect stranger to her.

Then a physician and a gunsmith testified for the prosecution, and it was in his cross-examination of these witnesses that Marshall Hall scored his most telling points.

The physician produced a piece of the murder victim's own skin, preserved in formalin, with the hole made by the bullet plainly visible. His opinion was that the bullet had been fired at a range of from five to seven feet. Hall suggested that a .45 bullet fired at that short distance would make a much larger exit hole; in fact, he put it to the witness whether the girl's head would not have been almost blown off. The doctor wouldn't agree to that.

"Then how do you get out of this dilemma?" inquired Hall. "A bullet going in an upward direction, as the wounds have shown, at high velocity found six yards away from the body?"

"My theory," said the witness, "is that the woman was shot whilst lying on the road

DROP-SCENES FROM THE DRAMA

—By STEPHEN LEACOCK—

IT IS a great pleasure to all theater-goers to realize how far the drama of today has progressed beyond the rough crude old plays of 20 years ago. As one great critic has recently put it, "The drama of today is delicate, is restrained; it avoids harsh effects and glaring episodes; it moves in a softened atmosphere of reflection, rather than in the noisy tumult of action; it no longer tries to force our laughter and to compel our tears. Its appeal is rather in retrospect, so that we come away from the performance hushed, thoughtful—and perhaps better than we went in."

• • • •

Quite so.

There's no doubt of it.

Let us try a few typical scenes and passages just to prove how absolutely superior the new drama is. Here is the essential part of an old-fashioned heroic play which we will call "Love's Agony."

Hubert and Gwennyth are standing on the castellated battlement of the Jacobean Manor House. All about them is the flooding glory of the evening sun. They are lovers, they both know it; love burns fiercely in their hearts, but they must not give way to it; everything is against them; everything separates them. Hubert is a Jacobite; Gwennyth a Hanoverian. Hubert's grandfather killed Gwennyth's uncle; Gwennyth's great-grandfather stabbed Hubert's sister's husband's grandfather. If Hubert is found where he is, it means death for high treason.

When you get a start like that—battlements, sunset, danger, death—there is no trouble in putting over the old-time love scene.

Hubert: (stepping out from behind the angle of the wall) Gwennyth!

Gwennyth: Hubert! (She turns deadly pale, then a flood of crimson suffuses her face, then again a deadly pallor invades it.)

And they proceed to hold a dialogue like this,—

Gwennyth, come to me!

Nay, Hubert, flee! Fly!

Gwennyth!

Fly! flee! your life is in danger!

What do I care for life, Gwennyth! (He rushes to her and seizes her in his arms.)

Gwennyth: (struggling in vain) Hubert, unhand me! Loose me! I pray!

I love you!

• • • •

Hubert and Gwennyth twirl round the battlements in a sort of athletic catch-as-catch can. Hubert's conversation is like a series of short barks,—"Wow! Wow!" Gwennyth, though she loves him, tries in vain to tear herself from Hubert's embrance.

And just at that moment the postern door over the battlement opens. There steps forth the tall, soldierly figure of Gwennyth's father, the Earl Marshall of England and constable of the Tower. Behind him are armed men. In his hands he holds a sealed paper. He speaks:

"Hubert Trevelyan! I find you at last!"

Hubert holds Gwennyth a moment in his embrace; he looks despairingly at the armed men. Then with a loud cry of "Never, never alive," he turns, and in the gathering twilight (it has come fast, as usual) he leaps over the lofty battlements and is gone.

Gwennyth, vainly calls: "Hubert." Then she turns to her father, fiercely. "What have you done! What have you dared to do! You have killed him—"

The old earl, tottering and reaching out his arms—"My child! My unhappy child"—and he holds forth the paper. "What I brought to him was a royal pardon!"

General fainting and collapse—the audience gasps.

Then the old earl, evidently a man of action, pulls himself together.

Quick! Descend below! What ho! Lights. (It has grown into stage night in the last two minutes) Ho! There—run—fetch a physician! Ho!

And almost in no time they bring up Hubert's body, from the moat below, and they lay it on the stones of the battlements, and Gwennyth with one loud cry of "dead!" falls over it in a swoon or a swoop or whatever they called it.

And the Earl says, "Dead!" and the armed men and the others repeat, "Dead!" And for three minutes Hubert Trevelyan is good and dead.

But the physician, the gray-haired physician, has bent over Hubert and put his ear to Hubert's stomach. He raises his hand. "Not dead!" he says. "He may yet live."

• • • •

And the old Earl breaks out again, "What! Not dead! Ho! Quick, a cordial! Fetch a bucketful," and so on.

• • • •

And then, in a clatter of excitement and torchlight, Hubert revives slightly (one minute) stands up feebly (two minutes) walks firmly (three minutes) and, in fact, in four minutes and a half the whole play ends in a glow of happiness.

But compare all this rough emphatic brutal stuff with the chastened drama of today.

• • • •

These are still Hubert and Gwennyth, presumably great-great-grandchildren or something of the ones above. And they are still lovers. But, of course, there are none of those fierce dividing differences between them; in fact, there isn't anything particular left in the world that can keep lovers apart in that way. True, Hubert is a vegetarian and Gwennyth believes in eating meat. Gwennyth never takes anything to drink, except a cocktail, whereas Hubert doesn't refuse a whisky-and-soda. Hubert's people came from Pittsburgh; Gwennyth's father made a lot of money in cattle in Minnesota.

In other words, they are just ordinary young people. There's no particular reason why they shouldn't get married. On the other hand, why should they? In short, as far as there is a plot in the play, it turns out that—why get married? That's where the play gets its awfully perplexing and attractive title—"Inducement."

Any modern title, to be a success, must mean absolutely nothing, and yet seem to mean a lot.

All the first parts of the play—you can't call them acts, they are just divisions—are meant to show Hubert's past life and Gwennyth's past life; not for any fierce melodramatic crisis, but just to show, apparently, as in all modern art that he did live, and so did she. You see him in the opening of the play buying a dog; the dog never comes in again—no one expects it will—he is just buying a dog. And you see Gwennyth in a sumptuous motor car with her father, who is, here also, an earl, in a sort of way, because his name is Earl Axleman, of Minnesota. All this symbolizes that Hubert is a young man of indecisive, vacuous tastes, and Gwennyth a rich girl who will one day inherit cattle. And then you come to the climax that corresponds to the battlement scene of the play of that year ago—

Act, 6, Division 8, Portion 3, Hubert's sitting room in the Battlement Apartments, New York.

Hubert is seated alone before the grate. The time is 2:30 a. m., which means that he is expecting visitors.

Hubert sits there. Occasionally he gets up and moves over to the table and back, once even to the window.

This means that he is "analyzing himself;" it says so in the four-page digest of the play on the play-bill. Once he picks up a cigarette, lights it, and then, after hardly smoking it at all, throws it into the grate. This, of course, if it is well acted gives the up-to-date audience a tremendous thrill. It shows how utterly perplexed Hubert is. Presently he puts his head in his hands and holds it there for seven minutes. This keeps the audience spellbound. They can feel him think. Of course, they all know that what's coming and so they all know what Hubert is thinking about. If the up-to-date audience didn't have the idea of the play before hand, they'd be lost.

• • • •

The door opens.

In comes Gwennyth—theater wrap and evening clothes—just walks right in. Women never knock in an up-to-date play.

Gwennyth pulls off her gloves. "I thought you might be here!"

Hubert answers. "I'm often at home at night."

• • • •

Then there's a piece of brilliant dialogue like this:

"Cigarette?"

"Thanks."

"Match?"

"Thanks."

"Cocktail?"

"Got any loose? Yes."

They then both drink a cocktail, a thing which always fascinates an audience that hasn't had a cocktail for two hours and a half.

Gwennyth yawns, stretching out her arms. "Let's elope."

"Do you want to?"

"Yes."

"Suppose you go down to the railway station and wait for me. I've something to do."

Gwennyth says, "I think I will,"—and disappears, closing the door behind her.

Hubert says, Good n—" and then he stops. You see, it's terribly subtle. He says one half of good night and then breaks off. The audience knows the point before hand. It's part of that reflection stuff.

You tell by sounds in the hall that Gwennyth has gone, or is going.

• • • •

Hubert sits and sits. So does the audience.

• • • •

Then there is a knock, a real knock this time, at the outside door, and in comes, dressed in evening clothes, Earl Axelman, Gwennyth's father.

He looks about him. "Where's Gwennyth," he says.

Hubert motions towards the door.

"Gone," he says.

"Where?"

"To the railway station."

"Young man, says the father, not angrily—there is no danger in up-to-date stuff—"Are you going to elope with my daughter?"

"I was just wondering," Hubert says—and the curtain falls.

And the audience, having gotten an earful of that reflective, retroactive stuff, move gently out.

Rules of Code Duello

Atlanta Unearths Book Giving Regulations Which Controlled in Southern Affairs of Honor From the Time of the Insult to the Actual Duel.

READING as engrossing in its amazing strangeness in this day and time as an Arabian Night's tale, is to be found in a remarkable book recently located by Atlantan, in which the rules and regulations for the code duello are laid down.

The remarkable little volume is now the property of C. O. Bickelhaupt, vice president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, who, although he has been a resident of Atlanta and the south for only about five years, has already secured many rare and unusual volumes pertaining to the Civil War period and to the customs of the Old South.

The book is entitled "THE CODE OF HONOR; Or Rules for the Government of Principals and Seconds in Duelling," and was written by John Lyde Wilson, and printed by one James Phinney, "in the rear of 48 Broad St.," in Charleston, S. C., in 1858.

In view of what happens nowadays to such of our citizens who take pot shots, or otherwise attempt to harm each other, the reading of this book, with its calm outlining of the various proper steps leading up to and including an effort to take the life of a fellow man, because, perhaps, of merely an utterance that was not fancied, brings a very clear realization of the danger of "loose talk" in those days of only a little more than a half century ago.

That resentment over the practice of duelling was already stirring as early as 1858 is shown by the somewhat apologetic prefix to the book, in which the author at one place declares:

"If a man be smote on one cheek in public, and he turns the other, which is also smitten, and he suffers no resistance, but blesses him that so despitefully used him, I am aware that he is in the exercise of great Christian forbearance, highly recommended and enjoined by many very good men, but utterly repugnant to those feelings which nature and education have implanted in the human character."

So interesting is this book that its prefix and the chapters referring to duelling in the south, are reproduced.

TO THE PUBLIC

"The man who adds in any way to the sum of human happiness is strictly in the discharge of a moral duty. When Howard visited the victims of crime and licentiousness, to reform their habits and ameliorate their condition, the question was never asked whether he had been guilty of like excesses or not? The only question the philanthropist would propound, should be, has the deed been done in the true spirit of Christian benevolence? Those who know me, can well attest the motive which has caused the publication of the following sheets, to which they for a long time urged me in vain. Those who do not know me, have no right to impute a wrong motive; and if they do, I had rather be the object, than the authors of condemnation. To publish a CODE OF HONOR, to govern in cases of individual combat, might seem to imply, that the publisher was an advocate of duelling, and wished to introduce it as the proper mode of deciding all personal difficulties and misunderstandings. Such implication would do me great injustice. But if the question be directly put to me, whether there are not cases where duels are right and proper, I would unhesitatingly answer, there are. If an oppressed nation has a right to appeal to arms in defence of its liberty and the happiness of its people, there can be no argument used in support of such appeal, which will not apply with equal force to individuals. How many cases are there, that might be enumerated, where there is no tribunal to do justice to an oppressed and deeply wronged individual? If he be subjected to a tame submission to insult and disgrace, where no power can shield him from its effects, then indeed it would seem, that the first law of nature, self-preservation, points out the only remedy for his wrongs. The history of all animated nature exhibits a determined resistance to encroachments upon natural rights—nay, I might add, inanimate nature, for it also exhibits a continual warfare for supremacy. Plants of the same kind, as well as trees, do not stop their vigorous growth because they overshadow their kind; but, on the contrary, flourish with greater vigor as the more weak and delicate decline and die. Those of different species are at perpetual warfare. The sweetest rose tree will sicken and waste on the near approach of the noxious bramble, and the most promising fields of wheat yield a miserable harvest if choked up with tares and thistles. The elements themselves war together, and the angels of heaven have met in fierce encounter. The principle of self-preservation is coextensive with creation; and when by education we make character and moral worth a part of ourselves, we guard these possessions with more watchful zeal than life itself, and would go farther for their protection. When one finds himself avoided in society, his friends shunning his approach, his substance wasting, his wife and children in want around him, and traces all his misfortunes and misery to the slanderous tongue of the calumniator, who, by secret whisper or artful inuendo, has sapped and undermined his reputation, he must be more or less than man to submit in silence.

"The indiscriminate and frequent appeal to arms, to settle trivial disputes and misunderstandings, cannot be too severely censured and deprecated. I am no advocate for such duelling. But in cases where the laws of the country give no redress for injuries received, where public opinion not only authorizes, but enjoins resistance, it is needless and a waste of time to denounce the practice. It will be presisted in as long as a manly independence, and a lofty personal pride in all that dignifies and ennobles the human character, shall continue to exist. If a man be smote on one cheek in public, and he turns the other, which is also smitten, and he offers no resistance, but blesses him that so despitefully used him, I am aware that he is in the exercise of great Christian forbearance, highly recommended and enjoined by many very good men, but utterly repugnant to those feelings which nature and education have implanted in the human character. If it was possible to enact laws so severe and impossible to be evaded, as to enforce such rule of behavior; all that is honorable in the community would quit the country and inhabit the wilderness with the Indians. If such a course of conduct was infused by education into the minds of our youth, and it became praiseworthy and honorable to a man to submit to insult and in-

..., then indeed the forbearance might ...rne without disgrace. Those, therefore, ...no condemn all who do not denounce duel...ing in every case, should establish schools ...here a passive submission to force would ... the exercise of a commendable virtue. I ...ave not the least doubt, that if I had been ...ucated in such a school, and lived in such ...ociety, I would have proved a very good ...ember of it. But I much doubt, if a semi...ary of learning was established, where this ...hristian forbearance was inculcated and en...rced, whether there would be many ...holars.

"I would not wish to be understood to say, ...at I do not desire to see duelling to cease ... exist entirely, in society. But my plan for ...ing it away, is essentially different from ...e one which teaches a passive forbearance ... insult and indignity. I would inculcate ... the rising generation a spirit of lofty ...ndependence; I would have them taught ...hat nothing was more derogatory to the ...onor of a gentleman, than to wound the ...eelings of anyone, however humble. That if ...rong be done to another, it was more an ...ct of heroism and bravery to repair the ...njury, than to persist in error, and enter ...nto mortal combat with the injured party. ...his would be an aggravation of that which was already odious, and would put him without the pale of all decent society and honorable men. I would strongly inculcate the propriety of being tender of the feelings, as well as the failings, of those around him. I would teach immutable integrity, and uniform urbanity of manners. Scrupulously to guard individual honor, by a high personal self-respect, and the practice of every commendable virtue. Once let such a system of education be universal, and we should seldom hear, if ever, of any more duelling.

"The severest penal enactments cannot restrain the practice of duelling, and their extreme severity in this state, the more effectually shields the offenders. The teaching and preaching of our eloquent clergy, may do some service, but is wholly inadequate to suppress it. Under these circumstances, the following rules are given to the public, and if I can save the life of one useful member of society, I will be compensated. I have restored to the bosoms of many, their sons, by my timely interference, who are ignorant of the misery I have averted from them. I believe that nine duels out of ten, if not ninety-nine out of a hundred, originate in the want of experience in the seconds. A book of authority, to which they can refer in matters where they are uninformed, will therefore be a desideratum. How far this code will be that book, the public will decide. "THE AUTHOR."

RULES for PRINCIPALS AND SECONDS IN DUELLING

CHAPTER I.
THE PERSON INSULTED, BEFORE CHALLENGE SENT

"1. Whenver you believe that you are insulted, if the insult be in public and by words or behavior, never resent it there, if you have self-command enough to avoid noticing it. If resented there, you offer an indignity to the company, which you should not.

"2. If the insult be by blows or any personal indignity, it may be resented at the moment, for the insult to the company did not originate with you. But although resented at the moment, you are bound still to have satisfaction, and must therefore make the demand.

"3. When you believe yourself agrieved, be silent on the subject, speak to no one about the matter, and see your friend, who is to act for you, as soon as possible.

"4. Never send a challenge in the first instance, for that precludes all negotiation. Let your note be in the language of a gentleman, and let the subject matter of complaint be truly and fairly set forth, cautiously avoiding attributing to the adverse party any improper motive.

"5. When your second is in full possession of the facts, leave the whole matter to his judgment, and avoid any consultation with him unless he seeks it. He has the custody of your honor, and by obeying him you cannot be compromitted.

"6. Let the time of demand upon your adversary after the insult, be right to double that time in replying to you, unless you give him some good reason for your delay. Each party is entitled to reasonable time, to make the necessary domestic arrangements, by will or otherwise, before fighting.

"7. To a written communication you are entitled to a written reply, and it is the business of your friend to require it."

SECOND'S DUTY BEFORE CHALLENGE IS SENT.

"1. Whenever you are applied to by a friend to act as his second, before you agree to do so, state distinctly to your principal that you will be governed only by your own judgment—that he will not be consulted after you are in full possession of the facts, unless it becomes necessary to make or accept the amende honorable, or send a challenge. You are supposed to be cool and collected, and your friend's feelings are more or less irritated.

"2. Use every effort to soothe and tranquilize your principal; do not see things in the same aggravated light in which he views them; extenuate the conduct of his adversary whenever you see clearly an opportunity to do so, without doing violence to your friend's irritated mind. Endeavor to pursuade him that there must have been some misunderstanding in the matter. Check him if he uses opprobious epithet towards his adversary, and never permit improper or insulting words in the note you carry.

"3. To the note you carry in writing to the party complained of, you are entitled to a written answer, which will be directed to your principal and will be delivered to you by his adversary's friend. If this be not written in the style of a gentleman, refuse to receive it, and assign your reason for such refusal. If there be a question made as to the character of the note, require the second presenting it to you, who considers it respectful, to endorse upon it these words: 'I consider the note of my friend respectful, and would not have been the bearer of it, if I believed otherwise.'

"4. If the party called on, refuses to receive the note you bear, you are entitled to demand a reason for such refusal. If he refuses to give you any reason, and persists in such refusal, he treats, not only your friend, but yourself, with indignity, and you must then make yourself the actor, by sending a respectful note, requiring a proper explanation of the course he has pursued towards you and your friend; and if he still adheres to his determination, you are to challenge or post him.

"5. If the person to whom you deliver the note of your friend, declines meeting him on the ground of inequality, you are bound to tender yourself in his stead, by a note directed to him from yourself; and if he refuses to meet you, you are to post him.

"6. In all cases of the substitution of the second for the principal, the seconds should interpose and adjust the matter, if the party substituting avows he does not make the quarrel of his principal his own. The true reason for substitution, is the supposed insult of imputing to you the like inequality which if charged upon your friend, and when the contrary is declared, there should be no fight, for individuals may well differ in their estimate of an individual's character and standing in society. In case of substitution and a satisfactory arrangement, you are and the bullet went through her head into the ground."

Hall opened his eyes wide and asked him to explain this theory more fully. The physician said that the bullet must have passed into the soft ground at the side of the road, struck the hard ground underneath, and rebounded into the road.

"But," persisted the defense counsel, "if a bullet was fired without any further resistance than the girl's head, it would be absurd to suppose that it would be found only six yards away?"

The witness agreed. Sir Edward, commanding and majestic, smiled.

In cross-examining the gunsmith, Hall asked the witness to look through a microscope and to note a mark that the defense attorney, something of an expert with guns himself, had found upon the bullet. The gunsmith agreed that this mark showed the bullet to have passed through a rifled barrel. This fact would enormously increase the range of the weapon.

THE FAMOUS LAWYER FENCES ABOUT A BIT.

Hall threw a meaning look at the jury and inquired, "This bullet could be fired from a rifle as well as a revolver?"

"Yes," replied the witness. Again Sir Edward smiled.

The famous advocate fenced about a bit and then asked this question:

"Supposing the shot to have been fired some distance away, and that in its flight it came in contact with a fence, tree, or something else, and then struck some one on the roadway, would you expect to find that bullet within a few feet of where the person was shot?"

"Yes," said the witness, "it is possible."

More fencing. Then Sir Edward shot out a direct question: "Have you ever seen a human being who has been shot at a distance of within five yards with a service revolver?"

"No, sir."

"I suggest that the effect of such a bullet on the skull of a human being is almost to blow the side of the head off."

"It depends on the velocity, sir," said the witness.

"Of course it does!" exclaimed Hall, triumphantly.

Thus he created the impression in the jury's mind that this killing might, after all, have been an accident, that the bullet might have been fired a long distance off, and from a rifle. Hall would never admit that the bullet found in the road had been the bullet that killed Miss Wright.

It was up to Light himself now to continue the battle against the crown's case. Nothing had yet been given out as to whether he would take the stand in his own defense. He still had a great deal of very damning evidence to overcome. Early in the trial he wrote his head counsel the following note:

"Will you please ask me to tell the jury in my own words exactly why I did not come forward? I shall say I was dreadfully worried, and for some days was quite dazed at such an unexpected blow, and could not think clearly. When I began to think, I could not make up my mind to come forward, and hesitated for days.

"I could not give the police any information whatever as to how the girl met her death. If the police and papers had only stated the known facts and asked the cyclist to come forward, I should have done so, but they jumped to wrong conclusions, and I was frightened when I saw I was wanted for murder.

"Let me do this in my own words."

It was on the afternoon of the second day, when the case for the crown had closed, that Sir Edward, speaking in his quietest tones, said:

"I desire to call the prisoner."

The courtroom gasped and all eyes followed the defendant as he walked to the witness box. He was a well-dressed, well-setup man with a clear-cut, intelligent face—altogether pleasant looking. The audience found their sympathies veering in his favor almost before he opened his mouth. Certainly he did not look like the sort of person who would commit a cold-blooded murder.

Light soon dispelled all doubts as to the nature of the defense and as to his own capacity as a witness in his own behalf. Almost immediately, merely by admitting that all his previous statements had been lies, he destroyed the unfavorable impression his denials had created. Indeed, as Edward Marjoribanks states in "For the Defense," his intensely interesting biography of Hall, Light admitted so much that it was difficult to see how the prosecution could detain him very long for cross-examination.

He admitted ownership of the bicycle and holster, but said that he had left the revolver itself behind him in France at a casualty clearing station when he was sent home for shellshock.

He admitted that he had met Bella Wright at about 8 o'clock on July 5, but he said he had never seen her before that. She had trouble with the front wheel of her bicycle, he said, and she asked him for a spanner. They cycled together until they reached her uncle's house at Gaulby.

"She told me she was only going in for 10 minutes and I took this for an invitation to wait, but I decided not to wait," he said. "I decided to go on home to Leicester."

Then, he went on, he was delayed by a puncture in his tire. He mended it and, as he knew he would be late for supper anyhow, he thought of the girl. He decided to take a short cut and see how far the girl had got. As it turned out he had to go all the way back to Gaulby before he met her again in front of her uncle's house.

"Hello," he said, according to his story. "You've been a long time. I thought you had gone the other way."

He denied that he had said "Bella." He said he never knew her name until he saw it in the newspapers.

He accompanied her, he said, until they came to a fork in the road. "I must say good-by to you here," she said, pointing to the left.

"But," said Light, pointing to the right, "that is the shortest way to Leicester."

"I don't live there," she said.

Then they parted.

"I never saw her again," he stated.

He admitted he had made a mistake in not telling the police. One thing had led to another, he said, and finally, to keep out of the affair altogether and to spare his invalid mother, he had disposed of the bicycle, the holster, and the very clothes he had worn on the night of the tragedy.

On the third and last day of the trial—in the United States the trial would probably have taken ten days at least—he had to undergo cross-examination at the hands of the cleverest cross-examiners in the empire.

But his story remained unshaken. The prosecution simply could not place him by the girl's side at the moment of her death.

When at the close of the cross-examination, Mr. Justice Horridge asked him questions as to his concealments and falsehoods, Light said in his high-pitched voice—

"I did not make up my mind deliberately not to come forward. I was so astounded at this unexpected thing that I kept on hesitating and in the end I drifting into doing nothing at all. I had drifted into the policy of concealment, and I had to go on with it."

The people in the courtroom nodded their heads. It seemed quit natural to them. The tide had turned. They were rooting for the prisoner.

In his address to the jury, Hall said that his defense was two-fold—first, the impossibility, or extreme improbability, of the bullet found on the roadside being fired from near by, whether it was the cause of the girl's death or not; and second, the complete absence of a motive.

"In your deliberations," he said, "you have got to satisfy yourselves that the girl was murdered. Even the attorney-general has not put forward a definite theory for the crime."

He asserted that the motive suggested by the attorney-general would not bear examination, for there had been no sign of any struggle nor of any molestation of the young woman. "Is it suggested that the man, having been rebuked by word of mouth, shot her?" he asked. "A man of that class would have done what he wanted first and shot her afterward."

Then he dropped his voice and murmured: "I am glad that there is not a tittle of evidence on this point, because the name of this poor girl remains unsullied by the evidence."

Why did Light go back to meet the girl when he had once left her? The great defender, who was the most consummate actor in his profession, became eloquent on the subject of sex attraction, one of the mightiest forces in the world. He also became emotional over Light's wish to spare his mother's feelings, and over Light's war-shattered nerves.

"You must not forget," he told the patriotic jurymen, "that he is a man who has undergone the awful ordeal of shell shock, an ordeal which reduces the strongest men to human wrecks, and leaves them bereft of human strength."

The judge in his summing up pointed out that the prosecution had produced no evidence of motive and urged the jury to give the case their special care and scrutiny because of this. As for the way the accused man had behaved after the fatal night, he asked this question:

"Do you think it is credible or possible that an innocent man should have behaved in the way he did? The question you have to decide is whether that deception could have been practiced by an innocent man, or whether it points the finger at the guilty man."

The jury retired at 4:35 p. m. and after three hours and seven minutes the judge recalled them and asked if there was any prospect of an agreement. The foreman asked for another 15 minutes. Three minutes later the jury filed in.

Light clung to the rail of the dock, quite unnerved. When the foreman said, "Not guilty," the defendant collapsed.

THE SPECTATORS CHEER WILDLY.

As for the spectators, they cheered wildly. Outside the courthouse were thousands of others and they took up the cheers for the war veteran who had escaped the noose. It was a very popular verdict—and a great victory for Sir Edward Marshall Hall. He had performed miracles before, but no more amazing miracle than this rescue of Ronald Light.

The case has remained a mystery, both as to the identity of the killer and the manner in which the girl was slain. Marjoribanks in his life of Sir Edward states that several ingenious guesses were made, the most attractive of them being in a short story by H. Trueman Humphries in the Strand magazine. Humphries made the dead raven the key to the mystery, holding that a hunter had shot the raven and that the same bullet had killed Miss Wright.

Who ever heard of a raven dying of overgorging or apoplexy, Humphries asked. Was it not more likely that the bird had been shot and had bled internally? Was there not a sheep trough near in which a boy with a rook rifle might have lain and drawn a bead on the raven as the bird sat on the gate?

That would account for the fact that the bullet had been ascending when it struck the girl, he held, and also account for the fact that it had been almost spent when it passed through her head.

But all this is but speculation. The fact remains that British justice failed.

girls as clerks. Each of them has women buyers who make annual trips abroad.

The vice president of a large Chinese insurance company is one of those "butterfly" creatures frequently seen dancing at the Majestic. The brains behind the success of Liao Kai Fook's, Shanghai's most celebrated silk store, is a woman, and recently in Shanghai a new taxi company announced that its cars would be driven by experienced Chinese chaufeurettes.

Women even have gone in for banditry and kidnaping. For complicity in armed robberies three women were executed at the Shanghai garrison during the last six months. The notorious Bias Bay pirates, from whose lair near Hongkong shipping has been preyed upon for the last half dozen years, acknowledge as their leader a daring girl who recently wrote her biography for a Cantonese paper. Stories of the exploits of an equally astonishing young woman who heads a kind of Robin Hood bandit aggregation in war-torn Honan, have lately filled the Chinese press. Several times she has spurned official overtures offering her a responsible post in reward for her renunciation of bandit life.

The theater, which for centuries banned women participants, is undergoing a revolution with their restoration to the stage. Formerly all female roles were enacted by men. Today women are women in the drama—and the audience seems to like the innovation.

Upon all this new activity the irate elders, of whom there are just as many (or more) than elsewhere in the world, look with frowning disapprobation. Young America may be surprised to know that much the same recriminations as are heaped upon it are now being directed at the modern Chinese girl. As a matter of fact, the most current criticism one hears from the reactionaries concerns the Americanization of their women.

"What we resent," a dignified pater once told me, "is the desertion of the old virtues of Chinese womanhood for the cheap, the bizarre, the superficial accourtrements of the west; the type of girl who bobs her hair, smokes cigarettes, cuts off half her skirt and imitates mannerisms which she has picked up from the latest flapper 'movie.'"

But, oddly enough, it is the young men, often those who are the most modern and westernized, who are the severest critics of New Lady China. While editor of an English-language journal that circulates largely among western-educated Chinese I accidentally opened up an interesting forum by publishing an editorial on the question.

My attitude was that much undeserved criticism has been leveled at the modern girl. I even felt it was conceivable that despite all her alleged shortcomings she somehow would pull her race through another generation. This opinion did not find concurrence among our male readers. I began to receive essays and articles which roundly scored the modern girl's tendency to imitate the west, maintaining that she was even more ornamental than the "porcelain woman" of yesterday. The peroration of these animadvertents was delivered, I think, by a young businessman who wrote:

"She (the modern girl) bobs her hair, puts on foreign style shoes and dresses and carries foreign handbags. From head to foot everything on her either is of foreign make or domestic imitation of foreign goods. To be sure, she is afraid of no man, and goes out with them to dancing halls and cinema houses to have a good time. She stays out late at night and enjoys as much freedom as her brothers. While in daily pursuance of excitement she looks upon home life as dreary and tiresome and domestic affairs as trivial and unworthy. Thus she neither goes into the kitchen nor makes her own clothes, as her older sister did.

"She defies the orders of her parents and laughs at the teachings of the old female virtues. She attends school not for the sake of education but for bettering her chances in selecting a husband. At school her curriculum is learning new dance steps and imported love songs.

"We find such modern girls everywhere, constantly increasing in numbers. The young man who has not yet married looks upon them with suspicion and terror, and remains at the cross roads to muse whether he should continue to lead a single but carefree life or bear the unnecessary burden of selecting a good-for-nothing wife. And if you ask me what the modern Chinese girl has brought us, why, I should say, 'a bad matrimonial bargain and, thanks to the west, the ability to blow smoke through her nose!'"

O tempora! O mores! O sad, embittered young man! In you I seem to hear the echoes of 100,000 voices from afar.

But the woman's side of the question did not go unchampioned. Our gentler readers did not wait for some errant knight of words to come along—not they! They wrote their own defense, sent telling thrusts at the unsympathetic male. One young woman, in her concluding sentence, paraphrased the above:

"And if you ask me what the modern girl has given to China, why I should say, 'More than the modern boy deserves and, thanks to her native intelligence, the wit to defend herself against all critics!'"

Granting which, quite obviously nothing more need be added, unless it is to remind you that if you have anything to say about traditional "Old Lady China" you had better hurry, for this spirited young woman is fast making her non est!

Detective Hanvey Explaine His Reasons for Having Suspected Terry Mooney in the Murder of Wylie Thornton

"I MEAN just what I said, Anice. The only danger Terry is in, provided I'm right, is that you maybe won't marry him."

She tossed her head defiantly.

"I'd marry him if he were in prison."

"That's a safe promise, because he ain't gonna be in prison. The point is, will you marry him if he ain't there?"

"You know I will. O, Jim——"

"You siddown, Terry, and go on with your writing. This is more talking than I've done in ten years and my throat is getty rusty."

Terry Mooney dropped into his chair. He was trembling violently as his fingers fumbled nervelessly with the keyboard. Anice hovered protectively near him, appearing queerly matronly in spite of her radiant youth. Jim's voice fell soothingly up their ears—as unemotional as it had been through his summary of the case.

"What started me thinking," he said, softly, "was the thing which really resulted in Wylie Thornton's death. Had it ever occurred to you, Marty, that it wasn't the proposed elopement, and it wasn't the double cross of Weldon, that really killed Thornton? It was the publication of the story in the Evening Record!"

"Why, yes . . ." Marty was almost too excited for speech. "I never thought . . ."

"You see," continued Jim, "nobody knew Thornton was leaving town except the theater management, and they were pledged to keep it secret. Naturally, the last thing in the world Thornton wanted was for everybody to know what he was planning . . . especially his wife and Carey Weldon. He didn't want them to know until after he had gone.

"Now it happens that in this town there lives a nifty kid by the name of Terry Mooney. He ain't got much of a past, but the future looks like one long wow. He wants to make good in the theater and has started off pretty by getting engaged to a pip of a young actress named Anice Garet. Partly because he's nuts about her, and partly because he's studying the stage, he hangs around the stock company all the time and gets friendly with everybody . . . but mostly with Anice. In fact, Terry hangs around so much that they don't pay no more attention to him than they would to a stagehand.

"He's at the theater as per usual Saturday morning when they're rehearsing the new show which is to open Monday night. He happens to hear a conversation between the manager of the theater and Wylie Thornton in which most likely the manager is begging Thornton come back to the company in case his show flops in New York. Have you got all that down, Mooney?"

"Yes. . . ." Terry lifted a pallid face from the machine.

"Right so far?"

"Yes."

"Fine. Now here's this lad hearing the biggest piece of news that has broken in the town since the last riot. He can tell by the way them two are talking that the whole thing is a secret—and don't ever forget that Mooney also has ambition to be a great reporter . . . and he starts right then.

"He knows good and well that if he asks permission to print that story they'll refuse and then his hands will be tied. But if he just prints it without asking nobody . . . then they can't figure that he put anything over. So he slips away, beats it to the office, and writes a whale of a yarn. It gets spread all over the first page . . . and, believe me, ladies and gents, it starts plenty. But of all the folks in town who go crazy when they see that story—the one who goes craziest is Mister Wylie Thornton.

"See what it means to him? He knows Major Manning will read it and maybe investigate Doris—which is just what happens. He realizes that Carey Weldon will learn about the clearest, cleanest case of double-crossing he ever heard of. He knows that if John Norris was in earnest about wanting to kill him he'll pick that very night to do it. And from all I can tell, he ain't so awful easy in his mind about his wife. In other words, Thornton is plenty sore against that story and whoever wrote it.

"When he comes in from the theater his wife springs the story on him and it knocks him for a goal. They have an awful quarrel in the hotel and another one when she follows him to the theater. He's about ready to chew nails then . . . and at that opportune time in walks Lovely Holmes, kind of mad himself at what he thinks is a double cross . . . and Lovely demands his money or else.

"Thornton is crazy mad and tells Holmes where to go. Tries to throw Lovely out of the dressing room and gets a good bust on the jaw. Then, while he's listening to the birdies sing, Lovely helps himself to the four hundred dollars Thornton owes him, and also—by his own admission—swipes Carey Weldon's certified check. And then, folks, after Lovely has gone and Thornton has picked himself up off the floor . . . who should come breezing into that dressing room but the very man who caused all the trouble!'

Jim shifted his position, lighted a fresh cigar, and continued his story.

"Yes, sir, Terry comes waltzing in, all hopped to a million over the swell publicity he's given the departing actor."

"How did you know that?" asked Gallagher.

"Easy enough, Marty. On the very night Thornton was killed, when you were trying to find out what happened, you yourself asked Terry if he had been around the theater earlier that evening. He said yes, he had. He said he had been there to see Anice Garet—but hadn't seen her. I reckon you forgot that, didn't you?"

"Yes . . . I sure did."

"In the past Terry had given Thornton lots of free publicity and Thornton always liked it. Naturally, the kid is awful keen on the wonderful first page sendoff and comes in pridefully to exhibit it to Thornton. He thinks Thornton is gonna do everything but kiss him. Am I right son?"

"Yes. . . ." Terry's voice was dry.

"Naturally, Terry hasn't the faintest idea what he has started by printing that story, but he finds out pretty soon. He's the lad who has busted all of Thornton's fresh eggs. Don't forget that even the beating Thornton had just received from Lovely Holmes would never have happened if Terry hadn't printed that story.

"Being plenty sore—like a pet boil—Thornton starts raving. And please remember that he is better than six feet tall and weighs more than two hundred pounds. Mooney weighs . . . how much, kid?"

"One hundred and twenty-eight."

"See how much physical difference there is, Marty? Also don't forget that Thornton isn't merely angry. He's murderous." Jim turned his moon-like countenance toward the pallid face of the young man. "And suppose you go from there, son. Give us the straight story of just exactly what happened in that dressing room."

Mooney's eyes burned into the sleepy ones of the portly detective. He moistened his lips and started to speak. The words came haltingly at first, but he gathered confidence as he talked and his story carried the ring of truth.

"I'll try to tell it all," he said, slowly. "There are some parts of it that aren't awfully clear to me—just a sort of nightmare. But everything Hanvey has said is right—up to that point. Thornton cursed me. His cheeks were blazing and he said—well, there was mighty little that he didn't say, and few things that he failed to threaten.

"He walked across the room so that he stood between me and the door, and he said he was going to beat me to death for the trouble I had caused. He kept coming closer to me, and all of a sudden I tried to duck and run out of the room. He grabbed me around the throat and started choking me. I fought the best I could, but I felt myself getting weaker and weaker. It isn't easy to describe—but I knew that he was going to kill me. It seemed that the more he choked me the more furious he got.

"I kicked him. I guess my foot must have landed on his shin or his knee, because it seemed to hurt a lot. He let me go suddenly and I sort of fell against the trunk. He was staring at me like a crazy man, and he said, 'I'll kill you for that.' He came at me again, and I looked around for a weapon with which to protect myself. Anything—a club or an iron bar—anything. And right there was the revolver. I didn't think about what I was doing. I guess, Mr. Hanvey, that I didn't think about anything except saving my own life. Anyway, I raised the gun and pulled the trigger. And then . . ."

Terry paused and shook his head as though to dispel the grisly memory.

"It was queer. There wasn't a sound—just a sort of a little crack like a cheap air rifle would make. And I remember that Thornton stopped short and a funny look came over his face and then he started to sag. . . . . I didn't know he was dead. I didn't really know what had happened. I ran out of the dressing room and up the corridor. I didn't see anybody. I left the theater through the scene door—not for any particular reason, but because it was the nearest exit. And that's the truth, Mr. Hanvey—the whole truth, just as I remember it."

Jim nodded approvingly. "And just about the clearest, cleanest case of self defense I ever heard of, son. What say, Marty?"

"Surest thing you know," Gallagher agreed. "But why the devil didn't the kid come and give himself up? He'd have been sitting pretty."

"He still is," insisted Hanvey. "But suppose you tell us what happened after you ran out of the theater, Terry."

Anice was standing beside the young man, her arm about his neck. He reached up and patted her hand and then continued his narrative.

"I—I don't know whether either of you can understand what I felt like just then. It's easy enough to look back on a thing like that and to figure what was the best thing to do, but at that time I was so terrified that I just acted on instinct. If I could make you understand——"

"Don't wory, kid," interjected Marty. "We will."

"Almost before I realized what had happened I was out on the street. I started walking. I was dizzy and felt kind of sick. My throat was still sore where he had tried to choke me. I didn't think he was dead . . . because I couldn't get over the fact that the gun hadn't made any noise; but I did know that I had shot him.

"I don't know how far I walked, but gradually I started feeling a little more normal and I tried to think. I didn't know what to do. I wanted to give myself up, but I didn't know whether that would be best or not. I wanted to talk it over with some one who could give sane and friendly advice. And so I went to the only friends I have in the city—the boys on the newspaper. Of course, most of my friends work on the evening paper, but I have a few buddies on the morning edition. Anyway, I went up there."

Jim Hanvey grinned.

"Keep going, son. You know, I always wondered how you happened to be in that office at that particular time. I knew you were off at five in the afternoon, and it seemed funny that you were hanging around there at that hour. It makes things clearer to me. Now suppose you go ahead."

"I will." Terry was talking more easily. He spoke earnestly, as though desperately anxious to convince his audience. "I went into the Morning Record office expecting to find the usual conditions prevailing. But, instead of that, I walked into a bedlam. It seemed like everybody had gone crazy. They were yelling to copy boys and copy readers; calling for the city editor and the managing editor, and just shooting their first extra into the street. Then I discovered what it was all about. I remember one of the other reporters told me—something like this: 'Somebody just bumped off Wylie Thornton,' he said, 'and the town's gone nuts. Looks like Major Manning or John Norris did the job, and, believe me, either one of them will go for a ride if they can pin it on him.' I—I think those are almost his exact words, Mr. Hanvey—almost the exact way he told it to me.

"My brain worked fast enough then. I had come up there to tell that I had shot Thornton. This was the first I knew of his being dead. That scared me all over again. But what scared me worse was this: If the two most prominent men in the city—Major David Manning and John Norris—were in real danger; if with all their wealth and political influence there was a chance that they could be convicted . . . then it struck me that I would get the electric chair. Can't you see how I figured? I was just a kid. I had no friends and no influence. I had no evidence to support my word. O, I know now I should have told, but right then I was frightened into keeping my mouth shut. I guess the temptation was too great, anyway . . . because don't forget that I knew if they were suspecting Manning and Norris, they certainly did not suspect me.

"You may or may not believe this—but it is the truth: I made up my mind to keep my mouth shut unless either Manning or Norris—or some other innocent man—was convicted. Then I was going to tell. But I thought that they couldn't convict either man. Of course I didn't then know about all the circumstantial evidence against them.

"I kept my mouth shut. I suppose it was a mistake, but I think the average man would have done just the same thing."

"He would," seconded Marty.

"Then the city editor saw me in the office and sent me out with Ken Johnston because he knew I was familiar with the theater and the company. They were talking about convicting big men like Norris and Manning. And as the case went on I got more and more scared, because it seemed that it would look doubly bad for me because I hadn't told my story when the thing first happened. But honest, Jim——" and Terry's voice trembled with passionate earnestness—"honest, I would have told if they had convicted any one else.'

Jim chuckled. "I knew you would, son. And when you write your story for the paper, I want you to be sure and say that you surrendered voluntarily to me and Marty Gallagher and that it was you who gave us the whole story. And you can also quote us both as saying that we know it was self-defense and that there ain't a chance in the world for you to be convicted.

What about it, Marty?"

Gallagher's big voice boomed heartily through the room.

"Absolutely," he roared.

Then . . . and not until then . . . Anice Garet broke down. Terry took her in his arms and the two detectives turned away.

Gallagher spoke softly.

"Jim," he said generously, "you're a marvel. But tell me—where the devil did you get your hunch?"

Hanvey shook his head.

"Just luck, Marty . . . and a little knowledge of human nature. When those kids get themselves untangled I'll explain if you want.

"I'll say I want." Marty peeped over his shoulder. "My gosh! Jim—ain't love a grand thing? Just look at them two."

"I ain't got the heart, Marty. Happiness like theirs makes me lonely. . . . ."

Anice and Terry had forgotten the two men, who discreetly looked the other way. She pressed close against him and her voice was pathetically gentle.

"Why didn't you tell me, boy?"

"I couldn't. I was afraid to tell any one. It seemed . . . when I didn't confess at first . . . that my hands were tied. But if they had convicted anybody, Anice, I swear I meant to tell."

Gallagher whirled.

"You did tell!" he thundered. "Get that in your ivory dome, will you, kid? You told me and Jim and you told us voluntarily. You savvy?"

"I do, even if he doesn't," smiled Anice.

Is Their Story. Begin it in this Magazine next Sunday.

"And I'll stick to that story forever and ever—Amen.' '

"You'd better. If Terry don't, I'll break his neck. And now—if you kids will come out of that clinch for a minute, Jim has promised to tell us what it takes to be so durned clever."

"I ain't clever," murmured Hanvey, "just lucky."

"Horsefeathers! Now, let's have it."

"It was slow work, Marty . . . and there was lots of times I thought I must be wrong. I tried to get all the dope and then to make myself think as Wylie Thornton would have thought—or anyway, as I imagined he would have thought.

"I tried to figure out who I would hate worst if I had planned what he did and then run into such a break, and it seemed I'd just about want to kill the guy who printed that story and started the mess just when my plans was working good.

"Now, we'll go back to the night Wylie Thornton was killed. Just after we talked with Major Manning, and before Anice brought Mary Thornton down from the hotel, you, Marty, asked Terry if he had been hanging around the theater earlier in the evening. The kid answered yes, and volunteered the information that he had dropped in for the purpose of seeing Anice Garet. He said he didn't find her, and therefore left the theater. Later we learned from Ken Johnston and others that Mooney was nuts about her, and when I got a flash of the little lady herself, it struck me as awful queer that he was so goofy about a girl like Anice . . . and that he should beat it without seeing her when, according to his own story, he had come to the theater for that express purpose. I thought a lot about that later when things began to adjust themselves in this fat bean of mine.

"Then another thought occurred to me; If Mooney had been to the theater to see Anice and had left because she wasn't there—why didn't he come back later? Why did he go to the Record office instead? He was off duty and it was his custom to hang around the theater anyway. Seemed like to me there might be some particular reason why he didn't want to come back to the theater.

"Later, Mooney drifted into the office just to. I knew it wasn't Norris', because the story had been clipped out of his. It wasn't Thornton's, because that one had been left in the room at the hotel."

"But my gosh, Jim—couldn't Thornton have bought that newspaper while he was walking from the hotel to the theater?"

Hanvey smiled slightly.

"No, Marty—he could not."

"What makes you think that?"

"I don't think it. I know it. You see, when they were spraying extras onto the streets. The excitement got him—and he was plenty scared—so much so that he decided to keep his mouth shut, for a while anyway.

"Then I went over the things we found in the dressing room. Most of the stuff we found belonged there, Marty, and didn't mean a thing. But there was one article that didn't belong in that room and it puzzled me. It was the stub of a thick pencil which contained a heavy lead. Just a stump, mind you. Would Thornton carry that sort of thing? Obviously not. For one thing, the penciled addresses in his address book proved that he wouldn't. When he did use a pencil it was the thin leaded kind that average folks use. You see, I was never interested in that little book for the addresses it contained—but I was interested in the pencil.

"I kept an eye on Terry. Like all real newspapermen, he almost never carried a long pencil. Always two or three stubs in the side pocket of his coat. Pretty hard for one of those stubs to drop out—unless, of course, some one was trying to attack him and he was ducking and dodging. Not positive, Marty—but a likely theory and it bore out the self-defense idea.

"I investigated further and discovered that the Record not only uses the very type of pencil we found in Thornton's dressing room, but I learned that there isn't another firm in this entire district—even the other newspaper—which uses those pencils. They are made in quantities especially for the Record.

"Don't you ever think that it didn't take lots of time and work to check up on that, either. And even the pencil thing wasn't enough—it only helped my theory. The real clew, Marty—the real important clew—was the newspaper we found in Wylie Thornton's dressing room. You thought I was cuckoo to pay so much attention to that newspaper, but it meant a lot to me."

"How?" asked Gallagher, as Hanvey paused.

"I wanted to know who it had belonged Marty, the thing that struck me between the eyes when I looked at that paper in Thornton's dressing room was that it was not the regular home edition of the Evening Record which is sold on the streets. It was a suburban edition. The suburban edition comes from the presses before the home edition, is bundled up in the plant, and sent to the outlying districts by auto truck and street car. Not a copy of that particular edition is ever sold on the streets of this town, and the only possible way one could have reached Wylie Thornton's dressing room was by the hand of some employe of the Evening Record.

"Now, obviously, Marty, the person who would most naturally have grabbed that sheet hot off the press was the young reporter who was tickled pink with his own exclusive story and wanted to feast his eyes on the first page spread. And that was why I was so interested in that particular newspaper, Marty. I wanted to be doggone sure that there wasn't another suburban edition anywhere around." The big detective smiled at Terry.

"How about it, son—am I getting it straight?"

"You're absolutely right, Jim. And there were times when I was sure you suspected me. I wanted to tell you . . . then I'd get scared all over again."

"That was natural. But there ain't nothing to be scared of any more, because that story you're gonna write telling the world that you did it is due to wind up with me and Marty saying that we can testify it was self-defense. Ain't it so, Marty?"

"It ain't nothing else, Jim."

"And I've got one more suggestion before I get out of this burg."

"What's that?" asked Terry.

"I want you to round this story off real regular with an announcement of the impending marriage of Mister Terry Mooney and Miss Anice Garet, nuptials to be celebrated immediately or maybe sooner than that. You might also announce that Marty Gallagher, famous sleuth, is to be the best man."

Anice smiled up at Hanvey.

"And what will you be, Jim?"

"Maid of honor," he answered promptly. "What say, Terry—does that go into the story?"

The boy looked down at Anice and she met his gaze shyly.

"How about it?" he asked.

"Well . . ." her cheeks were crimson, "I don't see that we have the right to refuse Jim anything he asks."

For the first time in weeks the enormous Mr. Hanvey exhibited symptoms of animation.

"Attaboy!" said he. "And you two kids can take it from me that the entire police force will be standing by to make sure that for once at least the course of true love runs good and smooth."

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

"I HEAR a lot o' unmarried females sayin' they wouldn't be no man's slave or put up with no man's bossy ways, an' they remind me o' little boys that whistle in the dark.

"They kid themselves into thinkin' the love o' liberty keeps 'em single an' they pretend to feel sorry for married women; but I never see 'em wearin' smiles o' gladness or bustin' forth in songs o' joy.

"Take Sallie, for instance. She's a man-hatin' freedom-lover, but she looks like she hates everything else, too. Bein' free don't mean nothin' to her but bein' lonesome an' feelin' like nobody don't want her around.

"I don't claim marriage is all bliss, an' lots o' times I think it would be better if a body could have all the benefits o' matrimony without no man around; but it's a sight o' comfort to know somebody is goin' to worry about you an' keep expenses paid when you get sick.

"Bein' free is awful nice when you're young an' spry an' your folks can help out in case o' trouble, but it's different when you're gettin' wrinkled an' scared o' losin' your job an' ain't got nothin' laid by for hard times.

"Any kind o' man that treats you decent an' pays the bills is better 'n no man at all when old age is creepin' on.

"Bein' free o' matrimony ain't as satisfyin' as bein' free o' worry, an' takin' sass from a husband ain't as bad as takin' sass from a man that fires you if you talk back."

Latest issue of The Copy Desk Flash Monthly Bulletin of The Newspaper Institute of America containing Articles of value to writers and including a directory of more than 500 magazine and newspaper markets for manuscripts of all kinds. See our coupon offer.

GREAT successes in the literary world have frequently been scored by writers whose natural talents are by no means of the highest order. In writing—as in life—the race is not always to the swift.

Good judgment, adaptability, skill at sizing up the literary markets—these qualities often carry a man farther than great gifts aimlessly directed. Knowing what to write is as valuable an asset as knowing how to write.

Mrs. Cherry Bomer Smith, 2315 Cherry St., Vicksburg, Miss.: "I have enjoyed the course very much indeed and wish to report that I just sold a feature article for $40.00 to the Hearst newspapers' Sunday Supplement—the American Weekly Magazine."

Hit or miss writing generally misses. If you want to write for publication, don't start by trying to write the great American play or novel. Direct your efforts at the checks for $25, $50 and $100 that are readily paid for material that takes little time to write—short stories, humorous contributions, timely articles, poems, recipes, etc.—things that can easily be turned out in spare time.

That is why every student-member of the Newspaper Institute of America receives each month a little bulletin called The Copy Desk Flash. It flashes the latest news from the "literary front"—puts our students in touch with profitable markets they never heard of before. Not surprising, therefore, to find that many N. I. A. men and women actually begin to sell their productions before they finish the course.

Mr. A. L. Emerton, Jackson Street, Hanover, Pa.: "My first big thrill came last month. An acceptance slip! The check that followed was not large, but I got a real kick out of it just the same, for it proved that I can write printable stuff."

What Is N. I. A. Instruction?

N. I. A. students succeed because N. I. A. instruction is absolutely contemporary—as timely as the latest edition of this morning's paper.

For years, pedants and professors groped about for some method which would teach people to write. And all while, the newspapers of America were turning out successful authors, playwrights and scenarists by the hundred.

That's why N. I. A. training is newspaper training—planned by newspaper men—conducted by newspaper men. And producing newspaper results.

Learn to write by writing—writing—writing . . .

Week by week, you receive actual assignments—just as if you were right at work on a great metropolitan daily. Your writing is individually corrected and constructively criticized by the seasoned editors at the Institute Copy Desk. Under such guidance, at once stimulating and sympathetic, you find yourself rapidly developing toward literary maturity. Your style becomes smoother—more vivid—more original. Gradually you acquire a sense of structure into which your ideas fit with precision. You are learning to write by writing—acquiring the same background to which nearly all well-known writers of short stories, novels and magazine articles attribute their success.

HOW YOU START

One of the most interesting experiences comes at the very beginning—a unique Writing Aptitude Test which tells whether you possess the fundamental qualities necessary to successful writing; acute observation, dramatic instinct, creative imagination, etc. It gives you a standard by which to measure yourself—insures you against wasting your time and money. If you have ever felt the urge to write, you owe it to yourself to send for this free test. Newspaper Institute of America, 1776 Broadway, New York.

Rules of Code Duello Make Strange Reading

then to inform your friend of all the facts, whose duty it will be to post in person.

"7. If the party, to whom you present a note, employ a son, father or brother, as a second, you may decline acting with either, on the ground of consanguinity.

"8. If a minor wishes you to take a note to an adult, decline doing so, on the ground of his minority. But if the adult complained of, had made a companion of the minor in society, you may bear the note.

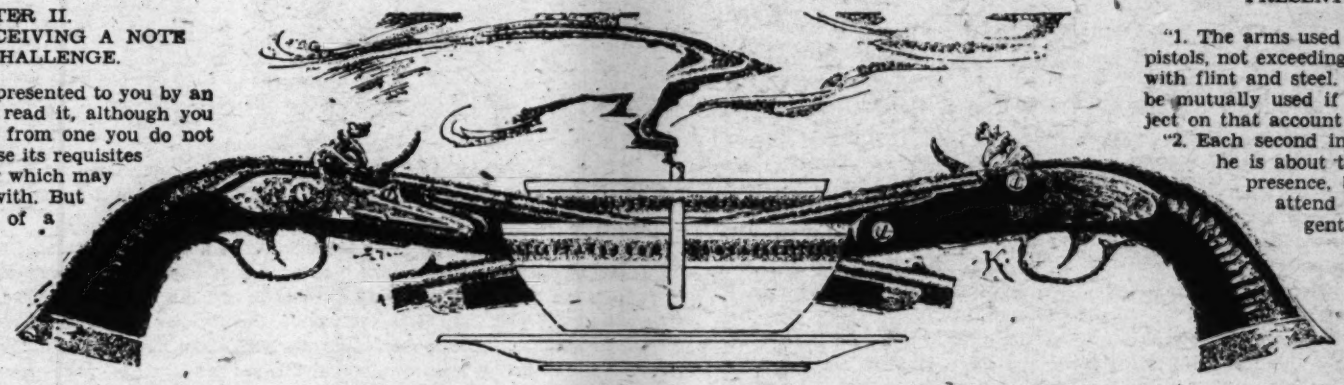

"9. When an accommodation is tendered, never require too much; and if the party offering the amende honorable, wishes to give a reason for his conduct in the matter, do not, unless offensive to your friend, refuse to receive it; by so doing you may heal the breach more effectually.

"10. If a stranger wishes you to bear a note for him, be well satisfied before you do so, that he is on an equality with you; and in presenting the note state to the party the relationship you stand towards him, and what you know and believe about him; for strangers are entitled to redress for wrongs, as well as others, and the rules of honor and hospitality should protect him."

* * * *

CHAPTER II.
THE PARTY RECEIVING A NOTE BEFORE CHALLENGE.

"1. When a note is presented to you by an equal, receive it, and read it, although you may suppose it to be from one you do not intend to meet, because its requisites may be of a character which may readily be compiled with. But if the requirements of a note cannot be acceded to, return it, through the medium of your friend, to the person who handed it to you, with your reason for returning it.

"2. If the note received be in abusive terms, object to its reception, and return it for that reason; but if it be respectful, return an answer of the same character, in which respond correctly and openly to all interrogatories fairly propounded, and who has advised the answer; direct it to the opposite party, and let it be delivered to his friend.

"3. You may refuse to receive a note, from a minor, (if you have not made an associate of him); one that has been posted; one that has been publicly disgraced without resenting it; one whose ooccupation is unlawful; a man in his detage and a lunatic. There may be other cases, but the character of those enumerated will lead to a correct decision upon those omitted.

"If you receive a note from a stranger, you have a right to a reasonable time to ascertain his standing in society, unless he is fully vouched for by his friend.

"4. If a party delays calling on you for a week or more, after the supposed insult, and assigns no cause for the delay, if you require it, you may double the time before you respond to him; for the wrong cannot be considered aggravated; if borne patiently for some days, and the time may have been used in preparation and practice."

SECOND'S DUTY OF THE PARTY RECEIVING A NOTE BEFORE CHALLENGE SENT.

"1. When consulted by your friend, who has received a note requiring explanation, inform him distinctly that he must be governed wholly by you in the progress of the dispute. If he refuses, decline to act on that ground.

"2. Use your utmost efforts to allay all excitement which your principal may labor under; search diligently into the origin of the misunderstanding; for gentlemen seldom insult each other, unless they labor under some misapprehension or mistake; and when you have discovered the original ground or error, follow each movement to the time of sending the note, and harmony will be restored.

"3. When your principal refuses to do what you require of him, decline further acting on that ground, and inform the opposing second of your withdrawal from the negotiation.

CHAPTER III.
DUTY OF CHALLENGEE AND HIS SECOND BEFORE FIGHTING.

"1. After all efforts for a reconciliation are over, the party aggrieved sends a challenge to his adversary, which is delivered to his second.

"2. Upon the acceptance of the challenge, the seconds make the necessary arrangements for the meeting, in which each party is entitled to a perfect equality. The old notion that the party challenged, was authorized to name the time, place, distance and weapon, has been long since exploded; nor would a man of chivalric honor use such a right, if he possessed it. The time must be as soon as practicable, the place such as had ordinarily been used where the parties are, the distance usual, and the weapons that which is most generally used, which, in this state, is the pistol.

"3. If the challengee insist upon what is not usual in time, place, distance and weapon, do not yield the point, and tender in writing what is usual in each, and if he refuses to give satisfaction, then your friend may post him.

"4. If your friend be determined to fight and not post, you have the right to withdraw. But if you continue to act, and have the right to tender a still more deadly distance and weapon, and he must accept.

"5. The usual distance is from ten to twenty paces, as may be agreed on; and the seconds in measuring the ground, usually step three feet.

"6. After all the arrangements are made, the seconds determine the giving of the word and position, by lot; and he who gains has the choice of the one or the other, selects whether it be the word or the position, but he cannot have both."

CHAPTER IV.
DUTY OF CHALLENGEE AND SECOND AFTER CHALLENGE SENT.

"1. The challengee has no option when negotiation has ceased, but to accept the challenge.

"2. The second makes the necessary arrangements with the second of the person challenging. The arrangements are detailed in the preceding chapter."

CHAPTER V.
DUTY OF PRINCIPALS AND SECONDS ON THE GROUND.

"1. The principals are to be respectful in meeting, and neither by look or expression irritate each other. They are to be wholly passive, being entirely under the guidance of their seconds.

"2. When once posted, they are not to quit their positions under any circumstances, without leave or direction of their seconds.

"3. When the principals are posted, the second giving the word, must tell them to stand firm until he repeats the giving of the word, in the manner it will be given when the parties are at liberty to fire.

"4. Each second has a loaded pistol, in order to enforce a fair combat according to the rules agreed on; and if a principal fires before the word or time agreed on, he is at liberty to fire at him, and if such second's principal fall, it is his duty to do so.

"5. If after a fire, either party be touched, the duel is to end; and no second is excusable who permits a wounded friend to fight; and no second who knows his duty, will permit his friend to fight a man already hit. I am aware there have been many instances where a contest has continued, not only after slight but severe wounds, had been received. In all such cases, I think the seconds are blameable.

"6. If after an exchange of shots, neither party be hit, it is the duty of the second of the challengee, to approach the second of the challenger and say: 'Our friends have exchanged shots, are you satisfied, or is there any cause why the contest should be continued?' If the meeting be of no serious cause of complaint, where the party complaining had in no way been deeply injured, or grossly insulted, the second of the party challenging should reply: 'The point of honor being settled, there can, I conceive, be no objection to a reconciliation, and I propose that our principals meet on middle ground, shake hands and be friends.' If this be acceded to by the second of the challengee, the second of the party challenging, says: 'We have agreed that the present duel shall cease, the honor of each of you is preserved, and you will meet on middle ground, shake hands and be reconciled.'

"7. If the insult be of a serious character, it will be the duty of the second of the challenger, to say, in reply to the second of the challengee: 'We have been deeply wronged, and if you are not disposed to repair the injury, the contest must continue.' And if the challengee offers nothing by way of reparation, the fight continues until one or the other of the principals is hit.

"8. If in cases where the contest is ended by the seconds, as mentioned in the sixth rule of this chapter, the parties refuse to meet and be reconciled, it is the duty of the seconds to withdraw from the field, informing their principals, that the contest must be continued under the superintendence of other friends. But if one agrees to this arrangement of the seconds, and the other does not, the second of the disagreeing principal only withdraws.

"9. If either principal on the ground refuses to fight or continue the fight when required, it is the duty of his second to say to the other second: 'I have come upon the ground with a coward, and do tender you my apology for an ignorance of his character; you are at liberty to post him.' The second, by such conduct, stands excused to the opposite party.

"10. When the duel is ended by a party being hit, it is the duty of the second to the party so hit, to announce the fact to the second of the party hitting, who will upon the challengee being informed of it, he should ask through his second, whether he is at liberty to leave the ground, which should be assented to."

CHAPTER VI.
WHO SHOULD BE ON THE GROUND.

"1. The principals, seconds, one surgeon and one assistant surgeon to each principal; but the assistant surgeon may be dispensed with.

"2. Any number of friends that the seconds agree on, may be present, provided they do not come within the degrees of consanguinity mentioned in the seventh rule of Chapter I.

"3. Persons admitted on the ground, are forthwith tender any assistance he can command to the disabled principal. If the party challenging, hit the challengee, it is his duty to say he is satisfied, and will leave the ground. If the challenger be hit, carefully to abstain by word or behavior, from any act that might be the least exceptionable; nor should they stand near the principals or seconds, or hold conversation with them."

CHAPTER VII.
ARMS, AND MANNER OF LOADING AND PRESENTING THEM.

"1. The arms used should be smooth-bore pistols, not exceeding nine inches in length, with flint and steel. Percussion pistols may be mutually used if agreed on, but to object on that account is lawful.

"2. Each second informs the other when he is about to load, and invites his presence, but the seconds rarely attend on such invitation, as gentlemen may be safely trusted in the matter.

"3. The second, in presenting the pistol to his friend, should never put it in his pistol hand, but should place it in the other, which is grasped midway the barrel, with muzzle pointing in the contrary way to that which he is to fire, informing him that the pistol is loaded and ready for use. Before the word is given, the principal grasps the butt firmly in his pistol hand, and brings it round, with the muzzle downward, to the fighting position.

"4. The fighting position, is with the muzzle down and the barrel from you; for although it may be agreed that you may hold your pistol with the muzzle up, it may be objected to, as you can fire sooner from that position, and consequently have a decided advantage, which ought not to be claimed, and should not be granted."

CHAPTER VIII.
THE DEGREES OF INSULT, AND HOW COMPROMISED.

"1. The prevailing rule is, that words used in retort, although more violent and desrespectful than those first used, will not satisfy—words being no satisfaction for words.

"2. When words are used, and a blow given in return, the insult is avenged; and if redress be sought, it must be from the person receiving the blow.

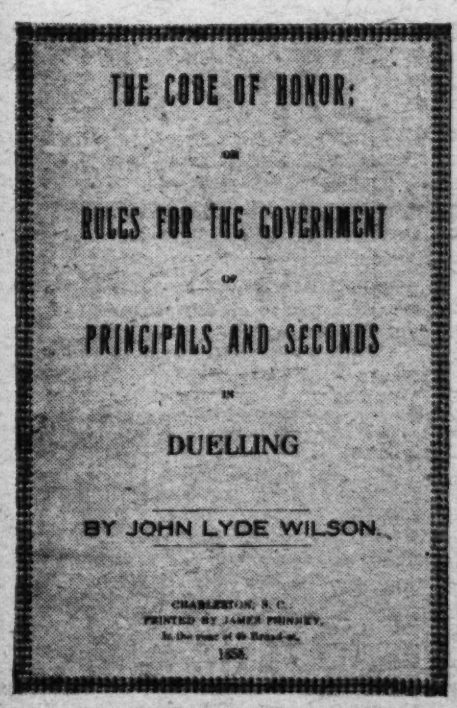

"3. When blows are given in the first instance and not returned, and the person first striking, be badly beaten or otherwise, the party first struck is to make the demand, for blows do not satisfy a blow.

"4. Insults at a wine table, when the company are over-excited, must be answered for; and if the party insulting have no recollecttion of the insult, it is his duty to say so in writing, and negative the insult. For instance, if a man say: 'you are a liar and no gentleman,' he must, in addition to the plea of the want of recollection, say: 'I believe the party insulted to be a man of the strictest veracity and a gentleman.'

"5. Intoxication is not a full excuse for insult, but it will greatly palliate. If it was a full excuse, it might be well counterfeited to wound feelings, or destroy character.

"6. In all cases of intoxication, the seconds must use a sound discretion under the above general rules.

"7. Can every insult be compromised? is a mooted and vexed question. On this subject, no rules can be given that will be satisfactory. The old opinion, that a blow must require blood, is not of force. Blows may be compromised in many cases. What those are, much depend on the seconds."

Ready for Clipping

Tested Recipes So Good That You'll Want to Keep Them

These Eight Recipes Are Printed in a Form Easy to File

Friend Hannah Whipple's Pudding

This old Quaker recipe dates back to the later 1700s. It is a most delectable—and digestible—proxy for the stodgier plum pudding.

1 cup sweet milk
4 cups fine pieces dry bread
½ cup molasses
½ cup butter, melted
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon allspice
1 scant teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon water
1 cup seeded raisins, chopped
½ cup finely chopped citron
¼ cup flour.

Measure the bread before soaking. Pour the milk over it and let it soak until perfectly softened. Unless the pieces are quite small, it may take an hour. Beat smooth, add the molasses, melted butter, spice, soda dissolved in the water and lastly the fruit, chopped together and thoroughly mixed with the flour. Beat well and pour into a well buttered two-quart mold. Steam for three hours. If on mixing, it seems too dry add a very little more milk.

This makes a dark pudding, surprisingly light in texture. It will serve ten and should be accompanied by Sauce o' Velvet.

Sauce o' Velvet

1½ cups confectioners' sugar
1 tablespoon sherry flavoring
¼ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup butter
2 egg whites
Nutmeg

Sift the confectioners' sugar to be sure that no least lump remains. Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually. When entirely smooth, add, singly, whipping smoothly, the unbeaten egg whites and continue beating until foamy. Then add the flavoring. If you prefer a stiffer sauce, more sifted sugar may be added. Heap on a serving dish, dust with nutmeg and set in the refrigerator until serving time.

Maple Upside Down Cake

3 eggs, separated
1½ cups sugar
½ cup milk
1½ cups flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup butter
1½ cups shaved maple sugar
½ cup chopped pecans

Melt the butter in an iron or aluminum frying pan and add the maple sugar, stirring until it is dissolved. Then sprinkle in the pecans. Make a batter of the other ingredients as follows: Separate the eggs. Beat the yolks until a light yellow, add the sugar, milk, flour mixed and sifted with the baking powder and salt, vanilla and, last of all, the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour the batter over the maple mixture in the frying pan and set in a hot oven—450 degrees. After five minutes reduce the heat to moderate—350 degrees—and continue baking for forty minutes more.

Turn the cake out of the pan on removing it from the oven. If any of the maple frosting remains in the pan spread it at once over the cake with a spatula. Serve warm (although it is good cold, too) with plain or whipped cream.

American Cheesecake

Although this cheesecake is excellent hot, we preferred it well chilled.

1½ cups fresh cottage cheese
⅞ cup sugar
1 tablespoon melted butter
2 tablespoons cream
3 eggs
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons salted sherry
Nutmeg or mace.

The cheese should be quite soft. Press it through a fine sieve, beat the eggs until light and add to the cheese. Then stir in the other ingredients, beating until very smooth. Line a pie plate with rich pastry and pour in the filling. Bake for about thirty minutes in a quick oven—425 degrees—but watch carefully as the filling is very rich. As soon as the filling is firm and a pale brown color it is done.

Apple Snow

Bananas are combined with the apple snow to make an unusual dessert.

2 large raw sour apples
3 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
3 small bananas
Lemon juice.

Peel the apples and grate them into the beaten egg whites, folding the apple in once or twice during the process to prevent discoloration. If the apples are not really sour, add a teaspoon of lemon juice. Add the salt and sugar and beat with a whip until stiff. Cut the bananas into thin slices, dip in lemon juice and line sherbet glasses with them. Fill with the apple foam, chill for about an hour and serve with a custard sauce made from the egg yolks. This dessert must not be allowed to stand much over an hour if it is to be at its best.

Chili Veal

4 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups veal stock or milk
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
2 tablespoons chopped ripe olives
1 hard cooked egg, diced
2 cups diced cooked veal
4 tablespoons butter, melted
1 cup cracker crumbs

Make a sauce of the butter, flour and veal stock or milk. Half milk and half stock makes a good combination. Saute the onion for a minute or two in one tablespoon of melted butter and add the chopped pimientos. Cook for a minute and add to the sauce. Then add the olives, chopped egg and veal and season to taste with salt and paprika. Turn into a shallow glass baking dish which has been buttered. Add the cracker crumbs to the remaining melted butter, and sprinkle them over the top of the casserole. Bake in a moderate oven—350 degrees—for about half an hour. Serves eight.

Spanish Sandwiches

1 tablespoon butter
1 cup thick tomato pulp
1 cup grated cheese
2 tablespoons chopped pimientos
2 tablespoons chopped onions
½ teaspoon each salt and paprika
1 egg, well beaten
6 slices buttered toast

Melt the butter, add the pimientos and onions and saute until they are a light brown. Then add the tomato pulp and simmer for about five minutes. Stir in the cheese and seasonings and last of all add the beaten egg, taking care that it does not curdle. Cook for a minute or two and remove from the fire. Have ready buttered toast. Pour the mixture over the slices of buttered toast and serve at once. If preferred, two slices of toast may be used for each sandwich.

Orange Rolls

These are delicious served while still warm from the oven with hot chocolate or with coffee.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
⅔ cup milk
3 tablespoons softened butter
½ cup orange marmalade
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Mix and sift the flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in three tablespoons of butter and mix to a dough with the milk. It should be soft but still of a consistency that can be rolled out. Turn onto a floured board and roll out to one-third-inch in thickness. Have the dough in a long, rather narrow strip, so that when the dough is rolled over there will be only two or three circles. Spread the dough with the softened butter, then with the orange marmalade and sprinkle with cinnamon. Roll up as for jelly roll. Cut off one-half-inch slices and put the little pinwheels flat side down on a buttered baking pan. Bake in a moderately hot oven—375 degrees—for about twenty minutes. This makes about two dozen rolls.

Your Flower and Vegetable Garden

HYBRID CACTUS DAHLIAS

THE origin of the dahlia will give us quite a little insight into the conditions under which it will grow to best advantage. The dahlia originally came from the mountains close to Mexico City, at an altitude of from one to two thousand feet above that of the city ,which is some seven thousand feet above sea level. There the days are very hot, but the nights are more than comfortably cool. This should be ample explanation for the fact that the dahlias bloom better in the fall than at any other time of the year. During the 19th century, it became quite popular in Europe and it was there that most of the ground work for the varieties that we enjoy now was laid. During that century the cactus type, the ball, and the collarette were introduced.

THE HYBRID CACTUS TYPE.

We are illustrating one of the finer hybrid cactus dahlias—"sunset glow." Sunset glow is typical of this general class of dahlias, as may be seen on a close examination of the picture. It is a very double flower, with fairly long petals, rolled and twisted. This type of dahlia is not as severe and formal as the better known decorative type such as Jersey's beauty and Mrs. I. de ver Warner.

The typical cactus dahlias have longer petals, more curved and rolled and are what might be called ragged looking. F. W. Fellows is a good example of the typical cactus type.

Sunset glow is sometimes called on orange dahlia, but might better be called an autumn colored flower. The base of the petals is yellow, shading into scarlet about midway the petal, and from this scarlet, shading into a yellow tip. Sunset glow is a particularly early bloomer and should find a place in every garden.

There are two other hybrid cactus dahlias that were more than satisfactory last year in most dahlia gardens in Atlanta. They are, Attraction and Alice Whittier. A beautiful shade of yellow is hard to find, but it may be seen in Alice Whittier. The plant will usually grow to a height of about six feet and it is not unusual to find flowers that are ten inches in diameter. The most stirling attribute of this flower is the color. A most beautiful shade of clear, primrose yellow. The color is so clear that oftentimes these dahlias are mistaken for artificial flowers. Some of these that we had the pleasure of seeing in Inman park last year were most outstanding, and even on the plants appeared almost artificial, they were so perfect.

Attraction is another fine hybrid cactus that should be found in every garden. These flowers usually grow to about six inches in diameter and are particularly graceful. The flowers are borne on stiff stems and the color is a clear lilac rose, with a white suffusion.

Last year, about the time dahlia tubers should have been removed from the ground, divided and reset, we were attacked by spring fever and our time was given to other, and what we considered at the time, more interesting work. We left the tubers in the ground. About a week ago, we decided to see how they looked and we dug, and then we dug and dug some more and after resting a bit, we dug some more. They are all gone! Apparently every one of them rotted in the ground during the winter. This year, as soon as a killing frost hits the plants and they are losing their leaves, we plan to dig the tubers.

The Hybrid Cactus Dahlia, "Sunset Glow.

The best means of storage is in peat moss and they should be placed in this as soon as the tubers are sufficiently dried out. Some people prefer to store them in sand, but care must be taken that the sand is perfectly dry or they will rot as easily as if they were left in the ground. It is well to take a look at them about once each month to make sure that they are not drying out too much. If they become shriveled, sprinkle just a little water on them.

But— It will be a long time now before we will have to be concerned with storage and we are mostly interested in the planting and growing of dahlias now. It is very easy to plant the tubers too deep. The usual depth found for best growth is four inches, although, in light soil it is not unusual for them to be planted at a depth of six or seven inches.

Dahlias like a well-drained location and the soil should not be too heavy with clay. If your soil is heavy with clay, work some wood ashes and peat moss into the soil thoroughly along with the fertilizers. As to the fertilizers to be used, the usual mixture employed is five pounds of murate of potash, ten pounds of bone meal and 25 pounds of sheep manure. This may be applied by working the mixture into the soil from time to time, or it may be dissolved in water and applied as a liquid manure. Dahlias should not have too much nitrogen.

All of the dahlias with the possible exception of the Pompons should be staked and this should be done at an early stage. The average root will make several shoots and these should be allowed to grow until a few leaves have appeared. At this time choose the strongest one of the shoots and cut the remainder of the shoots away. This should be done with a sharp knife and they should be removed well below the surface of the ground. These shoots that are being removed may be rooted in sand and transplanted later to the open ground.

Remember in rooting this cutting that there is little food stored away and every assistance to it will be needed. The sand should be kept moist at all times, but never soaking wet. As soon as the small roots are started transplant to a small pot and from this pot to the open ground. The plants, are usually left in the pots for a month. Plants started in this manner will bear flowers the first year.

When the one remaining shoot, from the tuber, has reached a height of one foot, tie it to a stake that has been set in the ground for that purpose. This tying should be repeated as fast as the flower grows. When the plant reaches a height of three or four feet, pinch the top out so that the lateral branches will start growing.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN.

The vegetable garden should be a regular bee hive of industry all during this month. Almost everything conceivable may be planted before Good Friday puts in its bright and shining appearance, there should be planted some purple top turnips, mustard, kale and rape for salad It is a good idea to have a separate bed for the greens dividing it into several smaller beds. Now is the time to plant Aragon spinach and next month will be a good time to plant New Zealand spinach.

The little, round, red, rosy, gem radish, the round, red, Detroit beet, the half long yellow Chantenay carrot, iceberg and Big Boston lettuce all may be planted out of doors now. It is a good time to plant rhubarb roots, and horseradish roots, cabbage plants, onion plants. Some good gardeners are planting tomato, egg plant and pepper plants. It might be well to keep one eye on the weather for cold snaps, as far as the tomato and pepper plants are concerned. If it turns cold suddenly put a little protection over them. Most of the seed stores have what is called a hotkap for just such emergencies. They are really little individual greenhouses with everything except the steam heat.

It is a fine time to plant corn now. In your very richest part of the garden, plant some of the Country Gentleman and Stowell's evergreen corn for some real sweet corn. For best results here in the south, sweet corn should be grown rapidly. To do this, plant it on a rich spot and fertilize it heavily. At the same time, plant some Golden Dent corn for yellow roasting ears and some Trucker's favorite corn for white roasting ears.

There are dozens of other varieties of these vetgetables that may be planted here successfully, but the ones that we are mentioning are the ones that have proven to be satisfactory over a long period of time. These are the varieties that you usually obtain when you buy your groceries from the stores. Of course, they will be much fresher and more tender when they come right out of the garden on to your table.

The age-old custom is to plant beans on Good Friday. Some people smile at these old customs in planting, but year in and year out, there seems to be good reasons for each one of these customs. So it is, beans planted on Good Friday in the latitude of Atlanta very seldom come to a bad ending.

There are two favorite varieties of bush beans, Red Valentine and Stringless Green pod. The favorite running bean is the Kentucky Wonder. At the same time that the green beans are being planted, there should be a few rows of butter beans planted. The small butter beans are usually preferred and the white ones are generally considered the finest of all. The Henderson is the best bush variety and the small white lima is the best running one.

There are few directions for the vegetable gardener, other than the worn out phrases—"lots of cultivation, etc—etc.—" "lots of fertilizer, etc—." If watering becomes necessary, be sure and soak the ground thoroughly. A light sprinkling will seldom do much good and will almost always do much harm by attracting the roots to the surface.

SECKATARY HAWKINS

THE FOUR DOORS

Phillips was Detective Jeckerson's right-hand man. He stood at the head of that dark, narrow stairway which had been hidden behind the chimney of the lodge-keeper's cottage, and watched us go down.

"I'd rather you'd take me with you, sir!" he called down, and Jeckerson paused on the steps and looked back at him.

"Never mind, Phillips! You fellows just remember the signal. When I give it, close in quickly. Better get Collison to stand at the head of the stairs up there to listen, and you go back to your place at the gate. You'll have charge of the operations outside, you know."

And with a "Come on, Hawkins," given in a very low voice, he started down the narrow stair. I followed only a step behind him, and, believe me, my heart was going at a lively clip what with all this excitement. Never had I known such a night. At last we were on the trail of the mystery of the red and green mansion. Jeckerson had waited a long time for this, and now that the time had come, he wanted me to be with him, so that it would look as if we had earned the part of the reward that he had promised our club if we helped him solve the mystery.

The steps were many, and very steep. Jeckerson flashed his electric torch ahead, and at last when we had reached the last step, we found ourselves in a narrow passage, just wide enough for one man to pass through. The air smelt damp and earthy.

"Well," said Jeckerson, pausing to chuckle, "here we are, Hawkins."

"Let's keep moving," I said, with a shiver; "I don't like it, Jeckerson. Smells like a grave. If Stephen came down this way—"

"He came this way, all right," broke in Jeckerson. "We don't want to be in too big a hurry, however. You know the little cuss wouldn't like to think we had followed him."

"What could he want in such a place as this?" I asked, with another shiver.

"Ah! That's the secret!" said Jeckerson, softly. "We've found the secret of his entrance to this hole, but where it leads to we have yet to find out. Come on, let's move slowly."

And so we moved on, Jeckerson's light flashing on and off at intervals to light up the next few steps, which we always took slowly. And soon I heard Jeckerson give a startled exclamation in the dark. Quickly his light went on, and we saw that we had run smack up against a wall in the darkness. The light showed that it was the end of the passage. On either side, however, branched other tunnels, going in opposite directions.

Jeckerson chose the one to the right. We moved again, for perhaps as long a distance as we had come through the first passage, and came finally to another blind wall, against which a narrow ladder led upward. Jeckerson handed me the light, while he climbed. I held the light upon him as he mounted the ladder, and saw his head push up a wooden trap. He raised a hand and lifted the boards and shoved his head through the opening. I heard him give an exclamation of surprise, and he reached down his hand for the light. I handed it to him, and then I quickly climbed up the ladder. When I poked my head through the opening I saw Jeckerson standing above me, on the floor of a queer looking room, turning his light all about on odd looking cheap furniture.

"Well," I said, as I leaped up beside him, "where are we?"

"You'd never guess!" he exclaimed, with a chuckle. "Hawkins, we're standing inside the low stone house—"

"What?"

"Sure as shootin'! You probably wouldn't believe me, but I suspected something like this all along. I was certain that the mystery of the red and green mansion extended to the low stone house. The two places are connected by the underground route."

"Be careful!" I cautioned, alarmed at his loud tone of voice. "If somebody should hear us—"

"Don't worry! There's nobody here, Hawkins. There seldom was anybody here, after the occupant of this low stone house rented the red and green mansion. It's only a blind. Not so very clever. I think I could have figured out a better way. But come on, we've got to go back the way we came. We don't want to lose track of Stephen. Boy, oh boy! I want to make it my business to see that at least Stephen gets a fair and square deal out of this—if we don't hurry, Hawkins; we might not be able to save him—"

Again I followed him, and he led me cautiously through the same dark tunnel by which we had come, and when he stopped, finally, it was only to throw his light about the place at his feet, and we both saw that we stood at the spot where the tunnel from the lodge-keeper's shack met the two passages running in opposite directions.

This way seemed frightfully longer than the passage to the low stone house. The earth was slippery under foot, and the going was naturally harder on the muscles of the legs, so that before we had gone a hundred feet, I felt myself reaching out on each side to brace myself as we moved forward at a painfully slow pace. The air smelt dismal and gloomy, as in a cellar of an old-time house. Suddenly I bumped up against Jeckerson in the dark, as he suddenly came to a halt.

"Listen!" he said, simply.

Somewhere somebody was pounding on a wall, it seemed. Together we stood and listened. Pound—pound—pound! Dull thuds against a distant wall. They seemed to pause a while. For a moment I thought they had stopped for good. But then again they started up—pound—pound—pound—I began to count them in my mind, without noticing that I was counting. Pound—pound—pound—and then I heard Jeckerson counting them, too—counting out loud—

"—eleven—twelve—thirteen—"

Silence once more. Jeckerson turned to say something to me, but before he could begin the pounding began again. Once more we listened, and once more I counted mentally the dull blows against the wall until, after the thirteenth, there came another pause.

"Thirteen, Jeckerson!" I whispered, excitedly. "The Lucky Thirteen!"

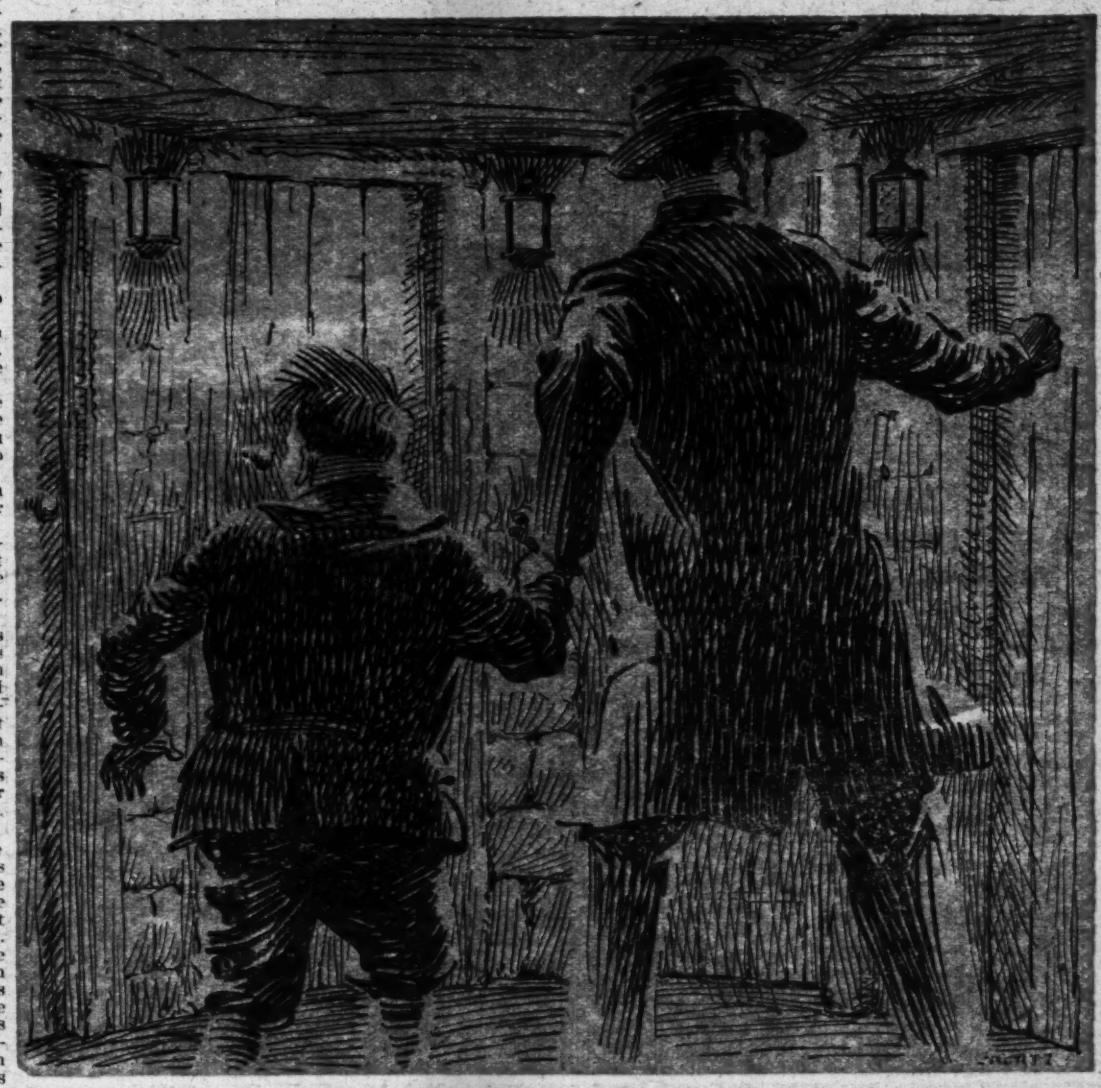

"It's a password!" muttered Jeckerson. "Hold on, look ahead, there—theres a light—"

Ahead of us in the gloom of that underground passage a thin streak of light began to widen until it was a large space, like a door, through which the light now streamed out into the tunnel. A silhouette stood out boldly against it—the dark shape of Stephen—the boy we were following, and within the door, clearly seen in the light from within, stood a little old woman—I recognized her at once as the little old crone who had answered the door on the day when we had called at the red and green mansion.

"Stephen—child!" she cackled, in a high-pitched voice, and sprang to greet him—her little old arms were about his neck. "My child—why have you been out so late? And where is Jonas—"

We heard no more. Stephen put his arms about the poor old soul and quickly stepped into the doorway. So excited they seemed, the little old woman so eager to have her question answered—the boy so eager to get inside—they left the door partly open—it slowly swung to within a few inches of closing—and left a stream of yellow light flooding the dark passage ahead of us.

Jeckerson touched my arm as a signal to follow him, and quickly started forward. We didn't need his flashlight now—the light from the door led our way. It seemed a longer distance that it really was—so excited were we at the moment—but Jeckerson stood at last before the partly open door—he was shoving it inward now—we were gazing into an oddly shaped room.

"Which one did Stephen enter?" asked Jackson.

It seemed to have been carefully dug, this underground room. It really was not a room, but a half-circle of space, walled up all around with stone. But within this half circle of stone wall four doors faced us—doors of stout oak, which at first glance seemed heavy and impassable. And upon the wall, between the doors, oddly shaped lamps were fastened. From these lamps came the flood of light into the tunnel where we stood.

Jeckerson held my arm as he stepped gingerly through the opening, pulling me with him. We stood for a few seconds just inside the door, staring at the half-circle of wall that faced us, and glancing from one to the other of the four doors.

"Which one did Stephen enter?" asked Jeckerson. And before I had time to answer him he made for the first door on his right, and grasped the knob—

It opened silently and quickly to his touch.

But Jeckerson was nobody's fool. I have always said that he was the greatest detective that I ever knew. He did not rush headlong into that place. Not he. Jeckerson knew the wisdom of the old saying. "Look before you leap." That door had opened too easily. It wasn't that Jeckerson lacked the courage to enter that place—

There were two things that made him pause and peer into the gloom. The first was the smell of the place—a rush of fetid air smote our nostrils at the opening of the door. A beastly odor came out of that place—and there was something in the way my hair stood straight up that told me to grab Jeckerson's coat and pull him back—

"Hold on, Hawkins!" he whisperede.

There was something else—a metallic sound that seemed familiar to me somehow—a clink-clank-clink, repeated over and over again, and the soft footfalls as of cushioned feet—

"Look!" said Jeckerson, suddenly.

His powerful electric ray was now turned into that evil-smelling room—it was a long stone-walled room, bare of any furniture. Far down at the other end a space was fenced off with iron bars, and straw littered the floor. Forever and ever came that metallic "clink-clank-clink" as in the light of the electric torch we could see something moving restlessly to and fro—from one side of the room to the other—a yellow something with black stripes—

"The tiger!" I exclaimed, suddenly. "Jeckerson—now you know I wasn't dreaming when I told you I saw a tiger that night in our clubhouse, when Shadow came to see me—there it is, chained to the wall!"

Jeckerson shoved me gently away and slowly and silently closed the door behind him, as he turned and faced me.

"I'll never doubt you again," he said, slowly, shaking his head. "Hawkins, you've certainly earned your share of the reward for this. By Jehosephat! A tiger! What ghastly business are we about to uncover? Well, there are three more doors—be quiet, now! Let us see what is in number two."

Before his hand could reach the doorknob, however, a voice came from beyond the door.

"Oh, Grandpa! Speak to me! See, I am here! Talk to me, Grandpa!"

Without the slightest sound Jeckerson opened the door, and we saw a strange sight. The room was much larger than the one into which we had just been gazing. All around the walls were instruments of strange design and machinery the like of which I had never seen before. Great iron arms held strange-looking devices that looked like motors; and there were glass tubes and huge bulbs hanging from wires—oh, it seemed a million wires crossed and recrossed one another from the walls of the place—

But that which held our attention was the picture beneath a low-hanging light, shaded with a broad cone—an old man with a broad beard and a shaggy head lay upon straw in the farther end of the room, and bending over him was Stephen, the boy we had followed into these strange catacombs.

"Listen, Grandpa! Listen to me—to Stephen! I hurried back as fast as I could, Grandpa. I just had to go—with Jonas—he's found his pappy back again—I knew he was goin' to—so I went with him. Oh, Grandpa! Aren't you listening to me? See, the purple light has gone, now. I've destroyed it. Grandpa! No one will ever see it again—you shall not worry any more, Grandpa. There, there! See, your eyes are opening, now. You do know me, don't you, Grandpa? Look—I am your Stephen!"

"Ah!" came a weak voice from the old man. "Is it you, Stephen? See, what he has done to me, now. If you had been here—ah! my head, my head, my poor old head. Grandpa can't stay with you long any more, Stephen. You been so good to me—yu loved your old Grandpa—"

"Indeed I do, Grandpa!" cried Stephen, bending to hug the old man to his breast, and tears ran down his face. "I will always love you, Grandpa, because you have been all I had in the world. He won't whip you no more—"

"He beat me!" broke in the old man, in a frightened whisper. "Just because I could not make the purple light work for him when he wanted—you had locked it up, Stephen—he beat me with the butt of the whip—"

"He shan't beat you again!" cried Stephen. "He will not dare, when I am near. And I shall always stay with you, Grandpa. I just had to get Jonas off—to freedom! He's gone! He's got his pappy back again, Grandpa—after seven years. Now, I'm happy—I'll stay with you, Grandpa—He won't dare to strike you when I am near, you know—"

"What!" exclaimed the old man, suddenly, and he raised up on one elbow. "It is worse now, Stephen than before. You did not know what held this hand—nay, it was not you, son. It was Jonas."

"Jonas!" cried Stephen, and his hand went to his lips as a look of dismay came to his face.

"He feared Jonas—because of his evil eye," went on the old man. "Of course, that was foolishness—Jonas had not an evil eye—but he believed so, and so was afraid. But you say you have helped Jonas to get away—alas, Stephen! No longer will he fear you—no longer will you be able to hold the Master's arm when he starts to strike—hark! What is that?"

A trembling of the ground upon which we stood was followed immediately by the sound of organ music.

"Go!" cried the old Grandpa to Stephen. "Go and sing for him—perhaps that will yet have its effect—keep him away from me—and come back to me when he is asleep. Go, Stephen, quickly."

"Your word is command, Grandpa," said Stephen, in a soft voice, rising at the same time to his feet. He tarried long enough to draw over the old man a ragged blanket that concealed partly the bed of straw. "But I shall return to you, Grandpa. Do not give up. Courage, courage, Grandpa."

Stooping swiftly, he kissed the old man upon the forehead; then leaped to his feet, and we had just time enough to draw away behind the door, when he ran swiftly by. Jeckerson was quick to follow, pulling me with him, and silently drawing the door to behind him. We watched Stephen as he leaped across the half-circle of space, passing the next door to his right and entering the fourth door that faced us.

We stood there together, Jeckerson and I, both silent for many moments after the fourth door had closed upon our friend Stephen. There has never been a time in my life, thus far, when I felt as strange as I did at that moment. For we knew that Stephen was a boy worth his weight in gold; there wasen't many like him around this old river bank for many a day, or if there had been, I had never had the good fortune to meet them. Now we saw him enter a place which we both knew held danger for him. And with all our fearsome thought came that soothing accompaniment—organ music—and even as the fair-faced Stephen entered the fourth door, we heard suddenly a choir of boyish voices breaking into song—

"Step lively, Hawkins!" snapped Jeckerson. "We'll pass up the third door—let's hurry into number four and save Stephen, if we can."

Which we did.

Our Weekly Meeting

"Play ball!" That's the cry you'll hear in a couple of days now. Already our thoughts have been turning every sunny day to little groups on a vacant lot or down in the hollow, practicing up on the old game. Oh, boy! How quickly the thrill of it comes back to you with the first warm flush of spring!

You step up to the plate! Your jaw squares. Your heart pounds against your ribs. You grip your old bat till your knuckles are white. Then you feel a surging determination to clout out a homer, to land your team to victory! Oh, boy! What a thrill it is!

And that's why I know you are going to like our contest this week, too. Your story, letter, verse or drawing must be about "Baseball." Not only do the boys enjoy this great American sport, but most of our girls are enthusiastic rooters for one team or another. We all have our favorites, and we like to see them win. Even watching a stirring game of baseball gives as much enjoyment to some as the actual playing does to others. So get busy, now, and send in the best you can do.

Order in the clubhouse. We will open this meeting by presenting a very interesting message from one of our new members in the capital of Ohio:

Dear Seck:
I read your page every week,
And listen to you over the air;
I am a member of your club,
And try to be "Fair and Square."
Have written you several messages,
In letter form and rhyme;
I've never won a book let,
But hope I may this time.
Quitters do not win success,
We are told by all great men;
So I'll not forget the old adage
And "Try, Try Again."
This poem may be faulty;
In fact, I'm sure it's poor;
But I hope you'll like my effort;
If not, I'll write some more.
Now, Seck, I'll close this letter,
And say good-by to you;
And hope for recognition,
Of the best that I can do.

Yours, fair and square,
WILBUR H. VANCE, JR., 11,
160 E. Norwich Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Next we introduce a member in old Kentucky, and she has named her canary after Jeckerson:

Dear Seck:
I've been a member of your club for two years and follow your adventures on the old river bank in the paper every week. I've never won a book, but I read one loaned to me by a girl who has, and it sure was fine. I have a canary named "Jeck" for Jeckerson, because he acts like a detective. Hoping this letter will win a book, I remain,

Yours, fair and square,
BETTIE CONNOR,
316 Glendora Ave., Louisville, Ky.

Club members who like "corries" will find interest in the following message from a member in the Hoosier state:

Dear Seck:
I listen to you over the radio each week. I also read what happens on the old river bank in the paper, and it is very interesting and thrilling. It is a club which I shall never forget. It teaches us that a winner never quits and a quitter never wins.

I would like very much if you would send me a club pin. I hope the other girl members will write to me. I will close, hoping this letter will win a book, though I am doubting it.

Hopefully yours,
FLORENCE BOLL,
R. R. 1, Lima Rd., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Here's a letter from a Georgia boy who has a lot of fun, I know—well, just read it and see:

Dear Seck:
I have been a member of your club for some time and am writing you again, hoping to win one of your books.

I live in the country and have some mighty good times. We have built a furnace out of rocks and mud and can cook peanuts on it and play that we do many things with it.

I like to go with my daddy, and when he will let me go I am always with him.

You have never published one of my letters, but I hope to see this in print.

Yours, fair and square,
ROBERT LEE,

Now once again we hear from one o four loyal army of members in the Panhandle state, and it's a pretty good verse, too:

Dear Seck:
This is the second time I've tried
To win your little book;
And when next Sunday's paper comes,
I'll look and look and look.
And if among the lucky ones
My name I cannot spy;
Why, Seck, what do you think I'd do—
Cry and cry and cry?
No, dear Seck, you've got me wrong;
It wouldn't do to cry.
But I'll take up my pen again
To try and try and try.

Yours, fair and square,
BETTY BAUMBERGER,
1512 Washington Ave.,
Parkersburg, W. Va.

And here we have another communication from one of our loyal little members in the Cotton state:

Dear Seck:
It has been a long time since I've written, hasn't it? But I have been reading your page and envying the winners of your book just the same. I have read the "Yellow Y" and "Stoner's Boy" so much I almost know them by memory.

You know, Seck, I wish you would have a contest on "My One Ambition." I have a big, big ambition, and that is to become a singer.

I think you are a fine "Seckatary" for your club, because you always use your head at the right time. (This is not flattery, either).

Yours, fair and square,
MARY NELL DUNSOR,
Box 35, Hartford, Ala.
Route 8, Carrollton, Ga.

Next we have one from a very good penmanship artist who lives in the sunshine of Virginia, and who would like to hear from members in her own state as well as others:

Dear Seck:
I am delighted to have two of your books, and although I have not received one of them, I wish to express my appreciation for them.

One of my letters appeared in "Seckatary's Mail Box," and hope that some day I'll have one printed with some comment about it, so that I might win another book. I wish that I could win a set, but I know that it is impossible.

I have one "pen-pal" who corresponds with some girl in every state in the United States, and I am sure that it would be very interesting. So I wish that some members would write to me; and remember although I live in Virginia, I love to hear from Virginia members too.

Yours fair and square,
MARY ANN RICE,
Clarksville, Va.

We now adjourn till next week. Don't forget to tune in to our radio meeting Saturday evening from station WLW, at 5 o'clock, eastern time. And try to get your "Baseball" contest work in as early as possible this week. If you are not yet a member, send along the membership coupon properly filled out, and you will receive club button and membership card.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

A BASEBALL PASSWORD

The solution of last week's password was "Easter Lily." These puzzles with two words in them make you work a little harder, but then, there's more fun in it, too. Here we have a baseball password:

KRISRESTTHEE

You see, a boy named Kris was at bat, and the umpire said, "Kris, rest thee," or words to that effect. Of course the letters are all mixed up, but if you take a pencil and paper and place the letters in their right places, you will have two words that the umpire really said, which meant that it was time for Kriss to take a rest. Now, what did the umpire say?

HOW TO JOIN THE CLUB.

Every boy and girl who reads Seckatary Hawkins is invited to become a member of his famous club. It is a very big club and already has members in every state in the union, as well as Canada, and many foreign countries.

Fill out the membership blank at the bottom of this page. Write plainly. If you want a club badge be sure to enclose a two-cent stamp with your membership blank, and it will be mailed to you within a few days. No matter where you live, you can be a member of the Seckatary Hawkins Club. No matter how old you are—just fill out the membership blank and join.

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY.

In this week's contest the title must contain the word "BASEBALL." You may write a letter or story or verse. Write on one side of paper only. Your composition must be written without any assistance from older persons. All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. The contest will close Thursday. Prize winner will be announced April 27th.

PRIZE: A SECKATARY HAWKINS BOOK.

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Atlanta Constitution.

IN THE SECKATARY'S MAIL BOX

Dear Seck:
I am not as lucky as some boys and girls. I have no sisters and brothers, but I have a cat, a dog, a bird, and 20 chickens.

I am a Girl Scout and all of us have had many good times together, but we have had no adventures as you have had. We went on a cooking one afternoon and another girl almost stepped on a snake. I like to read about your adventures because they are exciting.

Reading is my favorite pastime, and I have a good many books, but none of yours are in my collection, and I certainly would like to have one.

I will always remember that "the quitter never wins, and the winner never quits.

Yours, fair and square,
SARA HUTCHINS,
Watkinsville, Ga.

Dear Seck:
Although I haven't won a book as yet, I'll stick to your club until I do;
Your motto fair and square is good because the meaning is true.
I listen to your broadcast and read the story, too;
I wish I was on the river bank, staying there with you.
I hope you like this poem I write, because it's just for you,
So please try and send me a book for this;
Yours, fair and square and true.

MISS MOZELL FRANKLIN,
Route 1, Bishop, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I speaks Spanish, English, Italian and Portuguese languages. Have you any members that speaks Spanish or Italian? If so, tell them to write to me; I will answer all letters. I am an instructor of Spanish and Italian, and I would like very much to hear from members who speaks any of the above languages.

Hoping to become a member of your club, and to hear from you and the members soon.

I remain, as ever,
JAMES HAIRSTON,
Route 1, Box 131, High Point, N. C.

Dear Seck:
I read your adventures in the daily and Sunday paper. I think your club a fine thing so that boys and girls from different states can get acquainted.

I am 13 years of age and am in the 7th grade. I go to the Indian Knoll school.

I like your motto and also your colors. Our motto is "Good, Better, Best; Never Let It rest Till Your Good Is Better and Your Better Best." Our colors are red, white and blue.

Hoping to get many letters from the members of your club, I remain,

Yours, fair and square,
MYRA LACY,
Route 1, Canton, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have a little sick brother. He has been in bed several weeks. I read him your story. He likes your story too.

I am going to tell my friends about it.

Yours, fair and square,
JOE BRADLEY,
Buford, Ga.

Dear Seck:
Here I am again. As you see, I am still trying to win one of your adventurous books. If I don't win one this time I will keep trying until I do succeed. "A winner never quits and a quitter never wins." So I don't aim to be called a quitter and hope some day I may be called a winner.

I am so glad you and Jeckerson have led Jonas to freedom, if he did do you a dirty tricks one day. And I think Mopey got just what he needed. I hope you will soon find out the mystery of the low stone house.

Seck, please tell all the members to write me. I must close.

Yours, fair and square,
LILLIE MAE UPSHAW,
Alpharetta, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I guess you think I had forgotten you but I have not.

The reason is because I have been so busy in school and I have also moved. The last time I wrote I did not receive many letters so I hope to receive a lot this time.

Seck, please print this letter because some children have written to me asking why I didn't answer their letter. The reason is because I moved and did not get their letters. So everbody who has written to me and have not received an answer, please write again and I will answer because I like to write. Remember, I always answer any letter received, so everybody start writing.

I am a girl 14 years old and in the ninth grade at school. (If you want to know more, please write.)

Yours, fair and square,
MARY EVELYN KELLY,
1332 Perry St., South Norfolk, Va.

Dear Seck:
How are you ole boy? Just fine I hope. I like your stories awful lot. My birthday is November 10th. Have I a twin? I hope so. Everybody write to me.

Your friend,
MARY EDITH RUFF,
Route 2, Smyrna, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I guess you will be quite surprised to hear from me. I haven't written to you since I became a member of this wonderful club. I am 11 years old and my birthday is July 29th. If I have a twin, please write to me. I have been looking forward to the coming summer. I enjoy reading your club's adventures in the Sunday paper and also in the daily paper. I enjoy reading it more than the funny paper. I have your colors of ribbon which I wear each day, and I feel proud to wear them.

Yours, fair and square,
MILDRED LYNCH,
Route 3, Box 119, West Point, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I haven't written you for a long time, but now I am going to tell you about my school. I go to Gay Oakland High school. It is a large school. Our colors are purple and white. We have a good basketball team. Sometimes the teachers play golf. I have spelling.

Yours, fair and square,
IRENE E. O'NEAL,

RAIN

The rain is falling on the Lake.
You see a capital "L" I make.
I like the rain to fall with a slam,
Because it fills Lake Rabun to the dam.
When the rain is falling slow—
And in my boat I paddle so—
I watch the flowers beginning to peep
Along the lake banks ever so deep.
It isn't raining rain to me.
It's bringing spring, and flowers to see.

I am ten years old and live in Rabun county where it rains 365 days in the year.

LUCY RUTH BEDDINGFIELD,
Lakemont, Ga.

Dear Seck:
This is station ERE broadcasting from Wagener, S. C.

We had a Seckatary Hawkins club here. I was president, but it never would work so we scattered.

I cannot very well create poetry, but this is a sample:

To Seckatary Hawkins
And his club so grand;
Hail!! I'll say,
The best in the land.

I am corresponding with a girl in Arkansas, She's a peach of a pal,
The best you ever saw.

I'll say goodbye to you and the club,
While my heart is beating
Rub-a-dub-dub.

Fair and square,
ETHLYN RUTH BROWN,
Wagener, S. C.

P. S.—Tell all girls 12 or 13 years to write me.

Dear Seck:
I am a boy 11 years of age, living out on a farm in Georgia, and wanting to join your club. I am a boy with black hair, brown eyes and medium complexion. I am about four feet and six inches tall, and in the fifth grade. I sure do hope you, Link, and all the rest will soon be out of the underground cave. I like your motto, "Fair and Square." And your colors, blue and white. I sure do enjoy reading your stories, and would like to have a book of your adventures very much. I will close wishing you fellows lots of luck.

Yours, fair and square,
MASTER GEORGE CALE,
Route 1, Bowdon Junction, Ga.

Dear Seck:
Your page is quite interesting and I have decided to send in my application for membership.

My home is in Ludowici, Ga., but I am attending school in Marion. I am particularly fortunate in having a most interesting history teacher. He dramatizes history, he etches unforgetable pictures on our memories.

Marion is named for the famous General Francis Marion who played an important role in the drama of Revolutionary history. It is 80 miles from "Charming Myrtle Bleach." It is also about the same distance from Murrell's Inlet, where Julia Jeterkin, the Pulitzer prize winner, has a summer home.

Marion is famous for its library, which has a most wonderful circulation. It has an excellent collection of rare books, it is especially rich in history.

The old town is known for its beauty and culture, its churches and its schools. Stop over in Marion on your way to Myrtle Beach.

Most cordially yours,
RUTH MARTIN,
Marion, S. C.

Dear Seck:
I am like the balance of your members. If I don't succeed at first try again.

I am very sorry that I cannot hear your meeting over the radio. But I read it in The Constitution. I am 8 years old and in the 4th grade. I read your mystery in the paper and I hope that you will solve it soon.

Yours, fair and square,
BERNICE COLEMAN,
59 George St., Charleston, S. C.

Dear Seck:
I like the club motto, "Fair and Square," very much and I hope everyone lives up to it. My hobby is writing letters, so all you boys and girls write to me. I will send the first one who writes to me a picture, so please write all of you and I will answer if it takes till hair pins gets tired of riding permanent waves.

I wish success to your club.

I am fair and square,
SOPHIE DICKINSON,
72 Drake St., Charleston, S. C.

Dear Seck:
I read your stories every day and surely do enjoy them. I also read the letters of the lucky children who have won books.

Helen Keller sure is lucky. I bet she was named for Helen Keller. If she was she has taken after her in writing poems. I only wish I was that lucky. I have written ten poems. I sent five of them to you and gave three to my beloved mother. One of the poems I wrote to you happened to be lucky. When I saw my poem in the paper my heart was filled with greatest joy.

I gave one of the poems I write to my mother for her birthday present and one on Mother's Day. One night she spent the night away from home. I grew lonely for her. No one knows how blue I was. So I wrote a little poem and gave it to her, which told her of my love for her and how I had missed her.

Seck, you surely are encouraging the boys and girls in writing. And I appreciate it very much.

I promise to remain as a
True clubmember,
GRACE MASSENGALE,
Route 1, Box 19, Woodbury, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I like to read your adventures. I wish you and Link could get out of that cave. I am 11 years old, light hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. My pet is a pig. She is red and has a white stripe around her. I will answer any letter I receive.

Yours, fair and square,
EVELYN THOMPSON,
Good Hope, Ga.

Dear Seck:
I have always wished to be a member of your club. I live on a farm a mile from town. My school will soon be out and I will go in swimming. I always go to my grandfather's house in summer. He lives in Alabama. I am only in the third grade and only eight years old. I will be 9 in April. I like your club motto and your club colors. I will enjoy my pin I know, and also will always will be fair and square.

Yours, fair and square,

HERE'S A NEW ONE—"TAKEN FOR A WALK"—The hitherto sinister technique of "taking 'em for a ride" before shooting down gangland victims has now apparently been supplemented by the much simpler process of taking the victim for a walk. ARLINGTON HOUSE, HOME OF THE IMMORTAL ROBERT E. LEE, as it looks today, about 150 years after it was built. Visitors have been flocking to inspect the historic old mansion since it was reopened by the government. "The Mount Vernon of the Confederacy" Emerges from Oblivion

Rising majestically above the sleepy Potomac river, near Washington, D. C., the pillared facade of old Arlington House once more gazes proudly down upon the scene where the American Confederacy enacted much of its tragic drama. Here the commander-in-chief of the Confederate army and his pretty wife, Mary Custis Lee, made their home before the Civil War. The colonial mansion is being rebuilt and refitted to form a national shrine to one of the country's greatest figures. The secretary of war has already carried out the first half of his instructions from congress to "restore it to the condition in which it existed immediately prior to the Civil War and to procure, if possible, articles of furniture and equipment which were in the mansion and in use by the occupants thereof." Mrs. Lee inherited the house from her father, George Washington Parke Custis, adopted son of George Washington and the grandson of Martha Washington.

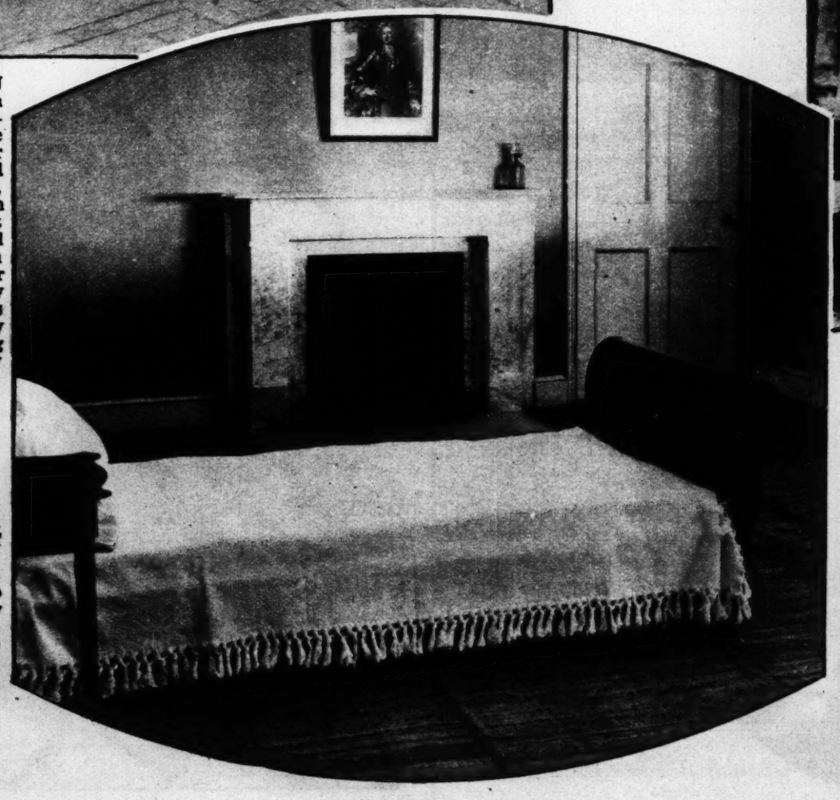

ROBERT E. LEE at the time he was a lieutenant in the engineering corps of the United States army, and in service in the Mexican War.

QUAINT OLD OPEN FIREPLACE shown above is in the basement of the slave quarters at the rear of the house. General Lee's father-in-law, George Washington Parke Custis, had at least a hundred slaves. He gave each a piece of ground near the river so that they could raise vegetables for their own family use and for marketing in the city if they were so inclined.

OLD VIEW OF ARLINGTON HOUSE shown at left is dated June 28, 1864, and depicts several Union soldiers lounging on the steps of the historic mansion. Many of them were quartered in the beautiful house.

but now SLENDER

You see them daily

Ask them why

THIS is to the many slender people who have learned the right way to fight fat. Tell your friends about the method, as someone told you perhaps. It will mean a kindness which no friend forgets.

Science has found that a common cause of obesity is an under-active gland. That gland largely controls nutrition. When it falls down, too much food goes to fat. So modern physicians combat excess fat by feeding the lacking substance.

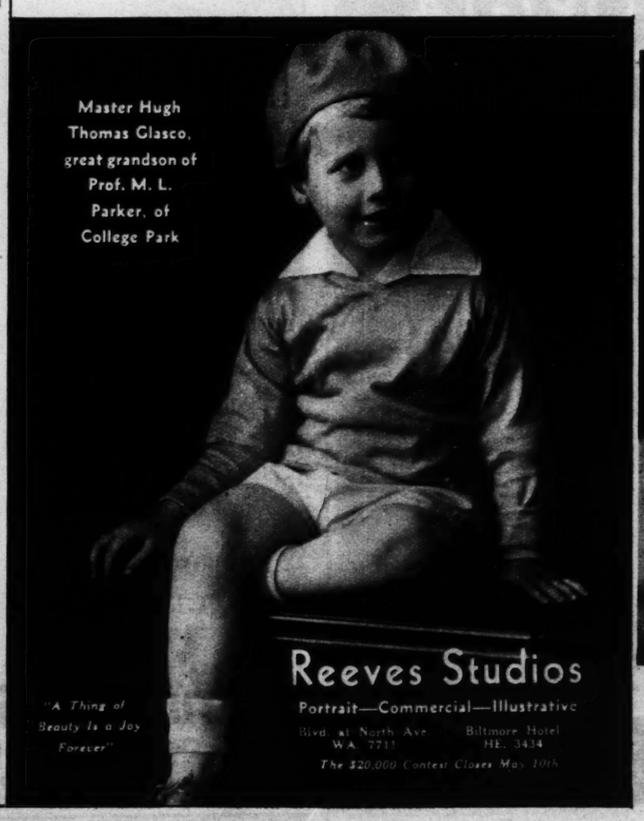

That is what Marmola does. A famous medical laboratory prepares these tablets, so that all may employ this method in the right way at small cost. A book in each box states the formula and explains the good results.

Marmola has for 22 years, by sheer merit, held the top place in this field. Millions of boxes have been used. New youth and beauty, new vigor and health have come in this way to many. In any circle one can now see how slenderness prevails.

Now we ask those happy people to tell others. Ask them to try Marmola and watch results. Tell them that starvation is not necessary, not safe. Show them the right way. Urge them to start at once.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.

BLOWING UP THE RIVER—At first glance this spouting water effect might appear to be an ocean-going fountain. Closer examination will reveal, however, that it is New York city's new fireboat, testing its apparatus.

WHEN YOU GO HOME-HUNTING

LOOK FIRST AT THE BATHROOM

Showing the VICEROY built-in bath with Octachrome shower (K-31-BJO), BELMORE enameled lavatory with Octachrome fitting (K-145-FO), and ROCKBOURNE syphon-jet closet (K-5870) with BENTON seat. Chromium plated fittings on bath, lavatory, and closet are harmonious in design.

PROPER WATER SUPPLY and drainage are vital to the family's comfort and well-being. So every detail of plumbing is either all right or all wrong. And every detail reveals the builder's discernment at other critical points—in matters of good taste, of sound construction, of service and safety.

When you look through new living quarters, begin with the bathroom. Look for quality . . . not mere display, but good design, careful decoration and efficiency. When you find the Kohler mark on fixtures and fittings you find all those things. For the beauty of Kohler products is built in. Their extra quality goes through and through. From the metal or clay inside, to the last surface refinement, each piece is right.

Kohler fixtures answer today's call for color with soft, pure shades that blend beautifully into the decorative ensemble. These colors are clear and uniform. There is a brilliant black, and a white like the immaculate white of fine linen. And the smoother, finer surface of Kohler enamel and vitreous china is a further aid to color charm.

Look at the metal fittings

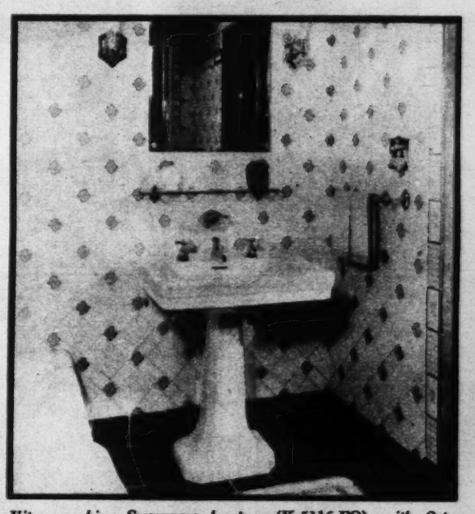

Faucets, valves, handles and other working parts must have beauty in key with purpose. Study the flowing graceful lines of Kohler fittings—note their ease and simplicity of operation. Wherever possible, examine their inner details. Kohler fittings are made of the finest brass . . . with fewer, heavier parts . . . lastingly plated with chromium, nickel or gold. They do their work surely, silently, positively.

Modern living requires perfect plumbing

Bathroom, kitchen and laundry must show no signs of carelessness or inferiority. The Kohler mark on fixtures and fittings is not merely this year's sign of safety—but promise of unmarred beauty and service without end. You could sign a ten-year lease with absolute assurance of satisfaction as long as you stay. All-Kohler plumbing is a lifetime investment in comfort.

Kohler quality pays dividends to owner and tenant

It is perfectly logical that all-Kohler equipment should make an apartment or home easier to rent or sell. People expect modern conveniences, and are increasingly particular about plumbing. The differences in Kohler fixtures and fittings are evident to any eye. The same first cost brings yearly dividends of satisfaction and security—plus actual money savings in the end.

A visit to the nearest Kohler showroom will give you a wealth of new ideas on fixtures and fittings. Any one who plains to build should discuss this important subject with his architect and plumbing contractor. Meanwhile, write for free Booklet G-4, which has color schemes, floor plans, and various vital facts on good plumbing. . . . Kohler Co. Founded 1873. Kohler, Wisconsin.

ELEVEN IMPORTANT POINTS ABOUT PLUMBING

1 Kohler designs are decorative, purposeful, correct.
2 Kohler enamel is made by an exclusive formula, fused with an everlasting bond and keeps its smooth, glistening surface.
3 Vitreous china pieces are sculptured for beauty and service . . . thoroughly vitrified at high temperatures and armored with a smooth, lustrous, lasting glaze.
4 Kohler colors are soft, livable pastels . . . the white is a perfect white.
5 Kohler metal fittings are engineered for efficiency . . . heavily plated with chromium, nickel or gold. They match the fixtures in style, character and quality.
6 Materials are the finest—manufacture is most particular. All Kohler products show craftsmanship and care.
7 This company pioneered many of the big advances in plumbing. This year's Kohler products are next year's new ideas.
8 Kohler quality extends to the kitchen and laundry—for every plumbing need.
9 Kohler quality costs no more . . . and saves money later.
10 Kohler fixtures and fittings are handled and installed by qualified plumbers.
11 Back of the Kohler trade-marks are the traditions and spirit of an entire community . . . beautiful Kohler Village.

GASOLINE ALLEY

GO TO SLEEP, CORKY. DADDY'S GOIN' OUT TO PAY A DEBT.

PAY MINE FIRST, UNCLE WALT. YOU OWE ME SEVEN CENTS.

-King

EVEN IF YOU DON'T WANT TO GO, WALT, WE OWE THE JONESES AND WE'VE GOT TO CALL.

I LIKE TO HAVE FOLKS DROP IN BUT IT'S LIKE PULLING TEETH TO GO OUT.

UNCLE WALT, WON'T YOU HELP ME WITH THIS EXAMPLE. IT'S A HARD ONE.

I'LL TRY BUT WE'VE GOT TO MAKE IT SNAPPY.

WE MUST BE GOING, WALT. I DON'T WANT TO BE THERE TOO LATE.

WE'VE GOT TO WORK THIS OUT. IT'S TOUGH FOR ME AND I'M A LOT BIGGER THAN SKEEZIX IS.

I THOUGHT YOU WERE ALL READY AND WAITING FOR ME. LET'S GET IT OVER WITH.

I WAS. I JUST WANTED TO BE SURE YOU INTENDED TO COME.

GOLLY, THE DOORBELL! IF IT'S SOMEBODY CALLING ON US LET'S KEEP OUR COATS ON AND MAYBE THEY WON'T STAY.

NO, WE MUST TAKE THEM OFF AND NOT LET THEM KNOW.

WHY GEORGE HOTCH, WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN HIBERNATING?

WE JUST DROPPED IN TO SEE IF THE WALLETS WERE STILL ALIVE.

TAKE OFF YOUR THINGS, CORA. WE WERE JUST THINKING IT WOULD BE NICE TO SEE SOME OF OUR OLD FRIENDS.

MARCH WAS OUR BEST MONTH. HOW'S BUSINESS WITH YOU, WALT?

VERY GOOD, GEORGE. WE'RE PUTTING OUT A WICKER RADIO CABINET THIS WEEK.

SKEEZIX SEEMS TO HAVE A CONTRARY STREAK ALL OF A SUDDEN.

JUST LIKE MY WILLIE.

AND THE HOBO SAID YOU CAN GIVE ME A SANDWICH OR NOT BUT YOU CAN'T TELL ME HOW TO RUN MY BUSINESS.

YES, HEARD IT.

AREN'T THE OBERTS LUCKY. THEY'RE GOING TO EUROPE AGAIN THIS YEAR.

WALT AND I ARE SAVING OUR TRIP.

WE'RE AWFULLY GLAD YOU CALLED FOLKS.

DON'T FORGET WHERE WE LIVE.

BLOW IN ON US. DON'T FORGET.

GOOD NIGHT.

WELL, THEY'RE GONE. THEY CERTAINLY STOPPED US RIGHT IN OUR TRACKS.

YOU SEEMED TO HAVE A GOOD TIME EVERY MINUTE AND KEPT URGING THEM TO STAY.

OF COURSE—BUT I HAD MADE UP MY MIND TO CALL ON THE JONESES AND NOW INSTEAD OF BEING SQUARE WITH THE WORLD WE'RE TWO EVENINGS BEHIND. DO YOU CALL THAT NICE?

YOU CAN'T GET "SOMETHING FOR NOTHING" YOU KNOW.

YOU SEEMED TO ENJOY YOURSELF GEORGE AFTER MAKING SUCH A HOWL ABOUT GOING OVER TO CALL. I COULDN'T GET YOU STARTED HOME.

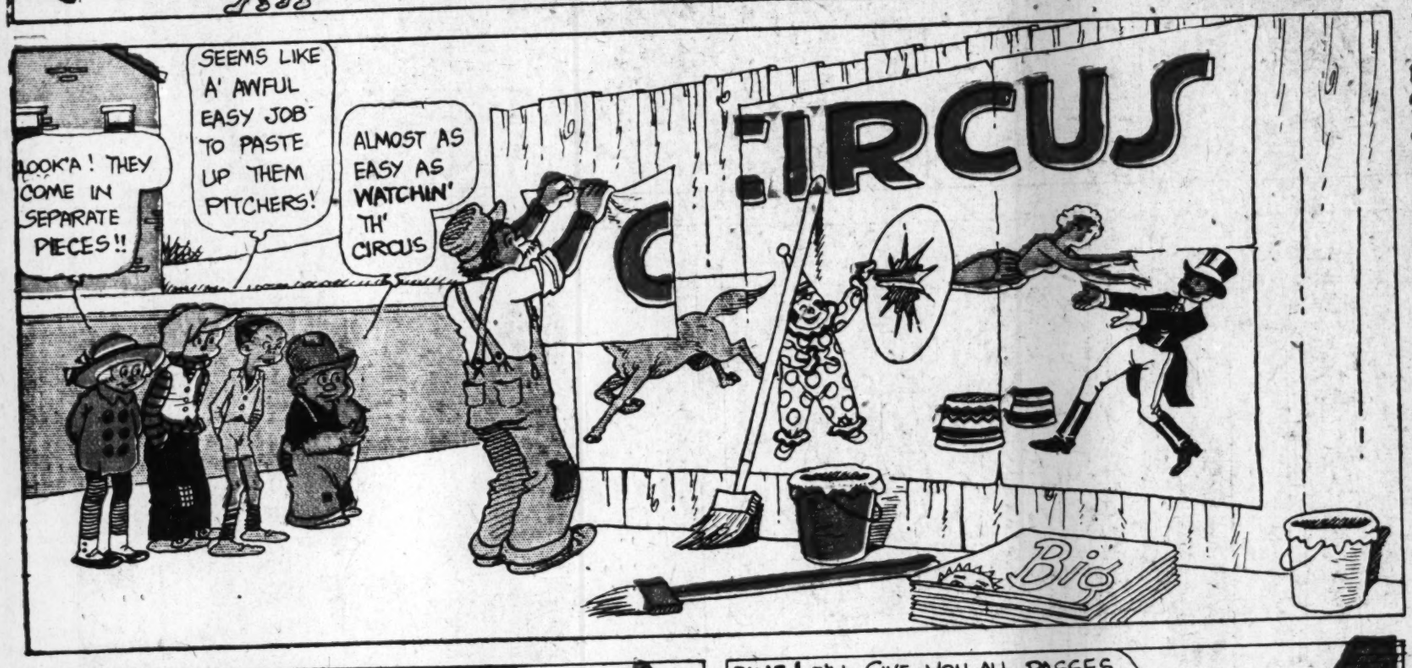

SURE I DID. TROUBLE WAS I FORGOT IT WAS A DUTY CALL.
